In England many high titled ladies employ regular professional poultry keepers. They have large and elaborate poultry houses and take great pride in exhibiting their fine specimens at the poultry shows. In this country there are also many fine estates where pure bred poultry forms one of the practical and attractive features. The poultry plants on such estates are simply perfect in every detail. Among those who have had such establishments in New York are ex-Vice President Morton, George Gould and Judge Hilton.

Hens Versus Incubators.

The average hatch by hens, taken in the aggregate, is about 75 per cent. With the right kind of hens as sitters and fertile eggs the hen will do much better than the incubator. Again, hens will hatch eggs that are older and bring forth better chicks than an incubator would with the same eggs. In fact, to have good average hatches with an incubator one must have fresh eggs, or the hatch will be poor.

A MISCHIEVOUS CROW.

Not Afraid of a Gun and Liked Being Pelted by Boys.

Strangely enough, there was nothing of which this crow stood so much in fear as crows themselves. Often they would come perilously near and "caw" at him. Helter skelter he would fly to the house, and his relief was painfully manifested when he was safe inside the kitchen. Their wild life evidently had no charm for him. He was in terror of large snakes, too, but small ones he gobbled up as fast as he could. It was a most effectual way of preventing them from frightening him when they grew bigger.

No attention was given to his education, but at last we discovered that he could repeat a word or phrase of a conversation he had just heard. He could laugh like a human being and imitate the cackling of a hen. "Stop!" "Hello!" "Hold on!" were favorite expressions of his, and generally his use of them was intelligent. He liked to perch on top of the barn and shout out "Stop!" at the farmers that went by in their wagons. If they reined in their horses, thinking it was some person that had called them, the success of his little joke would cause Jim to burst into immoderate laughter.

He actually enjoyed being snowballed. He would stand upon an old tree stump and look saucily at the boys, as much as to say: "Come, now, here's a good shot! Why don't you hit me?" But Jim was always too quick for them. No boy ever could hit him. He would dodge like lightning, laughing hoarsely as the ball flew harmlessly past or broke in pieces on the other side of the stump. Then up he would hop again, with another challenge, ready for the next snowball.

He was not afraid of a gun. He would stand close by while one was being loaded, and it might be fired off a number of times without having any perceptible effect on him. But he was keenly alive to its danger, and the very moment the muzzle was pointed at him he lost no time in getting out of the way.

Jim was a very mischievous crow indeed. When Grace, the baby, was learning to walk, he would seize her slyly by the dress and cause her to fall. He would peck at the toes of the barefooted children that came for water and laugh heartily as he drove them dismayed from the yard. Sometimes he would steal unnoticed down into the cellar. The blows he could give with his beak had the force of of a small hammer, so that it was a very easy matter for him to turn the spigot of a barrel. One was pretty apt to discover after such a visit that all the vinegar had run out on the floor.—Malcolm Douglas in St. Nicholas.

A SMART CAT.

How He Convinced Himself That It Was His Own Image.

The late Dr. Romanes, in his "Animal Intelligence," gives two stories of cats, which, on seeing their own reflection in a looking glass, convinced themselves that the reflection was an illusion. In the case of a very intelligent cat of mine, he went, I think, a step beyond this—namely, he satisfied himself that it was in some way his own image. Even if my deduction is wrong, the first part of his proceedings was so singularly like those in Dr. Romanes' accounts that it seems as though it were a uniform law of cat nature to act in this way, and so far it may not be altogether uninteresting.

I put the cat on a table in front of a small toilet mirror. After looking at his reflection for a short while he went behind the glass. Then he returned to his seat in front and again watched it attentively. After a few moments he rapidly dashed behind it. He again returned to his seat in front of the glass, and while retaining his seat and keeping his eyes fixed on the image he struck about behind the glass with his paw in different directions.

His next action was, I fancy, suggested by seeing the image apparently strike with its paw also. Keeping his seat and retaining his eye fixed on the image, he proceeded to (if I may use the word) posture in front of the glass. He raised his paws alternately, licked them, touched the glass, moved his head, etc. I have tried to simply describe the facts and as far as possible avoid drawing conclusions.—Science Gossip.

Doctor Galapius.

Set up on the corner of a house, at the juncture of two streets at the old north end of Boston, is a bust of Æsculapius. For many, many years it has been the visible sign that there is a drug store below.

Some time ago two visitors to the city went prowling about this ancient and historic ground once so aristocratic and now so squalid, and they came upon the time worn bust, for the presence of which they were not prepared. Still it seemed to them noteworthy, and they went into a shop to ask about it.

The clerk was most obliging and courteous.

"Oh, that?" he said. "That's old Dr. Galapius. I don't rightly know who he was, but I've an idea he used to practice down here!"—Youth's Companion.

Warmed by Their Dollars.

A trick of Canadian girls to keep the hands warm in severe weather is worth noting. They heat a number of silver dollars and slip them into a netted purse, carrying the latter in their muffs. The coins, treated in this way, retain the heat for several hours and can be utilized thrust inside the dress to protect the chest, or put about the throat, or applied almost anywhere about the body where the cold is most felt.—New York Times.

Grammatical Discussion.

Young Arduppe—Is it right to say "deem" or "consider," Miss Arreas?

Miss Arreas—Oh, both are allowable. For instance, I deem you a nice young man, but I cannot consider you at all.—Indianapolis Journal.

HAM NUT

No. 16797; Record 2:36 ¾

"A Few Words to the Wise is Sufficent."

This may be the the last chance of breeding your mares to Ham Nut at the low service fee of $10.00 for the season with a return privilege in 1896 if mare does not prove with foal, or your money refunded at the option of the owner. Season of 1895 to close in July. Ham Nut will then be put in training to lower his present record which he made very easy on the Crookston track last season after a few weeks handling, and every one who saw it knows it was nowhere near the limit of his speed. Ham Nut is very high and fashionably bred and a look at his colts will convince you that his stock is large, well boned with good musceles, all speedy and fine looking. Call and see this young and handsome trotting Stallion before breeding your mares. Stables two blocks west of Post-Office on Robert Street.

J. H. PETERSON,

OWNER.

Little Superstitions.

"I don't believe there is a man living who is without his pet superstition," remarked a secondhand furniture man. "We constantly have people who sell us articles of household use and come in after a few weeks—sometimes only days—and try to buy them back again, with the explanation that they have had 'bad luck' ever since the sale was made and never would have good luck again until the bargain was undone.

"One woman who had sold us her grandmother's clock fairly wept because it was gone before she could buy it in again. This idea is not confined to uneducated or ignorant people by any means.

"At this very time I know a Louisville business man of great culture and refinement who is vigorously pursuing an old wooden desk which he owned many years ago—a desk on which he made an enormous amount of money by a few lucky strokes of his pen. The desk passed from hand to hand and out of his possession. He is now earnestly endeavoring to trace it and purchase it, believing that recent business reverses and hard times will flee away if he can only stretch his legs once more under that same old desk."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

With the Charcoal to [illegible].

Many cases of suicide have [illegible] been brought about by means of burning charcoal, of which one example may suffice, that of son of Berthollet, the celebrated chemist. This young man became affected with great mental depression, which rendered life insupportable to him. Retiring to a small room, he locked the door, closed up crevices which might admit fresh air, lighted a charcoal brazier, and with a second watch before him noted down the time, together with his sensations as the gas accumulated.

He detailed the approach and rapid progress of delirium until the writing became larger and larger, more and more confused, and at length illegible, and the writer fell dead upon the floor.—Notes and Queries.

Count D'Orsay.

The most splendid person I ever remember seeing had a little pencil sketch in his hand, evidently intended for publication through Thackeray's good offices, which he left behind him on the table.

It was a very feeble sketch. It seemed scarcely possible that so grand a being should not be a bolder draftsman. He seemed to fill the bow window with radiance, as if he were Apollo. He leaned against his chair, with one elbow resting on its back, with shining studs and curls and boots.—"Chapters From Some Memoirs," Mrs. Ritchie.

Doesn't Get Around In Time.

Tommy—Do you say your prayers every night?

Jimmy—Yep.

"And does your maw say hers?"

"Yep."

"And does your paw?"

"Naw. Paw don't need to. It's almost daylight when he gits to bed."—Cincinnati Tribune.

THE PARIS BOULEVARDS.

A Kaleidoscopic View of Life to Be Found Nowhere Else.

In no other streets in the wide world can one see such varied types as on the grand boulevards of Paris. Why, a trip through them, on top of an omnibus, from the Bastille to the Madeleine—and it takes perhaps an hour—will give you a kaleidoscopic view of life to be found nowhere else. At the Bastille, the Boulevard des filles du Calvaire and du Temple, you meet the laboring classes, on Sundays in their "bestest best" and on weekdays in white blouses and cotton jackets. Beyond the Place de la Republique the picture changes. Here are the little merchants and shopkeepers and some large ones too. Farther on, up near Rue Vivienne, new blood enters this great artery of Paris—it is tinged with a golden sheen, for we are in the heart of the exchanges, among brokers and coulissiers—aye, among just such types as Zola drew from for his book entitled "Money." Now the shops are becoming more gay and beautiful, the cafes more elegant, and the siren voices of Paris make its joys even more alluring and more tempting. To appreciate it you must do more than view it from an outsider's standpoint. You must take part in it, live in it, and for the time being forget that you ever were anything but a confirmed and hardened boulevardier.

There, follow my advice, and I will guarantee that you will see Paris as Paris is and not as tourists see or describe it. Sit down with me at the terrasse of yonder cafe and watch the stream of humanity as it flows by. What a cosmopolitan throng! Rich and poor, merchants and clerks, unmistakable Britishers, blase journalists, fetching looking actresses, chic little Parisiennes of the petite bourgeoisie, newsboys and beggars—aye, and Americans, too—all "touching elbows," as the French say. Is it not dizzy to look upon, in its whirling activity, its abandoned merrymaking?

See that young exquisite with pointed patent leather boots? Poor fellow! He has mislaid his brain and might find it there. He is one of the society men of the boulevard.—F. R. Layland in Home and Country.

Bulwer-Lytton knew all the odes and other poems of Horace by heart. He translated large portions of Horace's poems into English verse.

As a Gentle Reminder.

Dimpleton—My father-in-law has a birthday next week, and I must give him something.

Briggs—Have you decided what it shall be?

Dimpleton—Yes. I think I shall send him a motto with the words, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—New York Herald.

"Bonnie Doon" was by Burns. The Emperor Napoleon at St. Helena made the droll mistake of saying that the English had but one melody worth listening to, and that was "Bonnie Doon."

MISS GING'S ESTATE.

Steps to Collect Life Insurance Will Be Taken by Her Sister.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 4.—Steps have been begun looking to a settlement of the estate of Catherine M. Ging. Shortly after Harry Hayward caused her murder her cousin, P. B. Ging, qualified as administrator of her estate, but from that time to the present nothing has been done toward its settlement. Julia Ging, a sister of the murdered woman, has called upon Judge Steele, and an arrangement was made whereby by the consent of P. H. Ging, he resigns his trust in favor of the sister.

In spite of the fact shown at the Hayward trial, that he had practically impoverished Cathering Ging, there still remains an interest in an Eastern estate and the $10,00 life insurance money. People interested in the case have wondered what would be done with this claim, and the majority of them have been of the opinion that it could not be collected. This seems erroneous. There is little doubt in the minds of attorneys that the New York Life and the Traveler's Accident companies, each of whom are interested to the extent of $5,000, will pay the claims when the proper steps are taken.

In order for the administrator of the estate to secure the money, an action must be brought against the company in which Hayward is made a party defendant, the decision of which case will give the insurance companies the authority they require to make the payments. This action will probably be brought before, in the expected course of events, Hayward is ushered into the next world in order that he may contest, if he so desires.

Minority Report.

place was full of saloon, saloonkeepers, gamblers and houses of prostitution; that they were running under what is called a wide-open policy; and further, that the municipal authorities had full knowledge of the facts, and had neglected to enforce the laws. That in this place there existed a combination of persons to resist the laws, and to prevent indictment and punishment of law-breakers; and that such combination of persons had raised a fund and were using it to corrupt grand jurors, officers and witnesses; and thus shield themselves from prosecution.

It further appeared that the regular grand jury had failed to indict any of said violators of the law, and that members of said grand jury were openly at work to prevent investigations of such violators to the extent that when they came into court and asked to be discharged, the court told them that they had failed in their duty, and that he should feel it his duty to summon a new grand jury to further investigate these matters.

It futher appears that thereafter, another grand jury was sum-

It further appears that thereafter another grand jury was summoned and set at work under charge of the court, and that at the time of the institution of the contempt proceedings against Russell, Quigley and Dwyer, a witness was upon the train at East Grand Forks on the way to Crookston to testify before the grand jury with reference to certain crime charged against persons at East Grand Forks; that Russell had instituted some criminal proceedings before Dwyer, who was one of the East Grand Forks officers, and that Quigley had, as an officer, served the papers, and by these proceedings had stopped the witness, and thus detained the witness.

The law of this state provides that any interference to obstruct the trial or other proceedings of a court, is an act of contempt of court, for which the court has the right, and in many cases it would be the duty to punish the offender.

It further appears that all these facts were at the time known to Judge Ives. The evidence further discloses that prior to his election Ives had not been in active practice as a lawyer, and possibly is not skilled in law to the highest degree. We, conclude, therefore, that his motives in instituting these contempt proceedings, were for the purpose of preventing the obstruction of justice, and to protect the court, its jurors and officers from undue interference in the discharge of their duties. Viewing the proceedings in this light, we cannot conclude that in such proceedings, Judge Ives had not committed any crime, nor did his action amount to corrupt conduct in office.

What is here said with reference to the ninth specification applies with equal force to the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth specifications, for indeed, they are a part of this same transaction, and grew out of these material facts—in all of which we cannot concur with the majority report, and recommend that said specifications, and all of them, be dismissed.

5th. As to the fourteenth specification, we, the minority, find that if the charges therein are and were true, the whole thereof does not constitute a crime, nor does the same amount to corrupt conduct in office.

6th. As to matters contained in the fifteenth specification, we, the minority, find that all of the matters therein charged do not refer to any official act or conduct of Judge Ives, and therefore, whether true or false, were not, and are not a proper matter for investigation by your committee, nor could the same be made the basis of impeachment proceedings.

7th. As to the matter specified in the seventh specification; we find that the conclusions of the majority are not warranted by the facts given in evidence. Nor can we conclude that if said letter was written, it constitutes a crime, when we consider all the surrounding circumstances and the condition of affairs at East Grand Forks at the time, though we cannot justify a judge in writing such a letter, we can conceive a state of circumstances where such a course ought to be condemned. It is not infrequent, however, that courts and prosecuting attorneys do offer immunity from punishment to one or more confederates in crime, in case they shall give to the state sufficient evidence to convict those more hardened and deeper stained in crime. In fact such should seem to be a tacit understanding with reference to the notable Claus Blixt, now held in our neighboring county of this state for trial.

6th. As to the exclusion of Brown and DeWolf, from the grand jury and the placing thereon of Wold and Finkey, the evidence shows that Brown and DeWolf were temporarily excluded on account of some examinations by the grand jury, in which they may be supposed to be interested. Wold and Finkey were on the regular panel, but not present at the the time the jury was first sent out. The records, however, show that the grand jury was regularly sworn and charged. It is fair to presume and the law raises the presumption; therefor the presence upon the jury was regular and proper.

8th. The subject of naturalizing certain citizens out of term appears to be an irregularity. However, the law in relation to admitting aliens to citizenship, provides that the person shall appear before a court of record and make certain proofs. This law does not in terms declare that such appearance shall be in open court when in regular session, and our statute declares that for certain purposes our courts are always open.

From these facts it may be reasonably inferred that the court held that it had such power to so admit citizens,. If it so held, at most, this would only be an erroneous ruling as to the law, and such does not establish a crime, nor prove corrupt conduct in office.

11th. Finally, upon all the charges, and upon all the evidence taken on behalf of the committee, we, the persons whose names are hereto attached, upon our conscience cannot concur in the conclusions arrived at by the majority, nor can we upon our conscience report in favor of impeaching Judge Ives upon any or either of the aforesaid charges or matters specified in the report of the majority.

We therefore, recommend to this honorable body the adoption of the resolution beneath submitted.

RESOLVED, By the House of Representatives, now in session, that the matter of impeachment of Judge Frank Ives, of the Fourteenth Judicial district be, and the same is hereby dismissed, and that all further proceedings in said matter be discontinued.

"In These Days Of Comfort and Convenience in Railway Train Services American people are apt to become a bit hardened and unappreciative. They are getting sort of calloused to luxury, so to speak, so that it takes something unusual to evoke words of praise. GETS A SNUG SUM.

Della Hershfield's Suit Against Her Rich Brother-in-Law Compromised.

HELENA, Mon., May 7.—Della Hershfield, formerly cashier in a dry goods store, who married Aaron Hershfield, a rich banker, is to get the snug sum of $30,000 because he was enticed away from her. She is also to be rid of an unwilling and somewhat aged husband. Hershfield left his young wife two months after they returned from Chicago, where they were married in the fall of 1893. He went to Fargo, where he instituted suit to have the marriage declared void, alleging he was entrapped into it by threats and misrepresentations. The trial at Fargo last November resulted in a complete victory for the young wife. Meantime she had instituted suit against her husband's brother, Lewis Hershfield, and his wife, for damages in alienating the affections of her husband. She claimed $75,000 damages. The case, after being put off several times, was finally brought to trial Monday in the district court here.

Agreed on a Compromise.

Before a jury had been secured Senator Carter, ex-Senator Sanders and Judge McConnell, representing the defense, and Colonel C. B. Nolan, ex-Governor J. K. Toole and William Wallace, representing the plaintiff, had a consultation in which L. B. Hershfield took part. At its conclusion Senator Carter announced to the court that by consent the counsel would like to have the case continued two weeks and added there was little probability of its being tried.

The terms of the settlement are $30,000 and consent of Aaron Hershfield to divorce. His wife's suit for divorce will now be instituted. It will be allowed to go by default and the $30,000 agreed on will be paid as alimony.

WARSHIPS OF THE POWERS.

They Are Rapidly Assembling at the Port of Chee Foo.

CHEE FOO, May 7.—The warships of the powers are fast assembling here. The situation is regarded as ominous. Already eight Russian warships, including three torpedo boats have gathered here and more are expected. In addition, another British, French and American, and two German warships have arrived here.

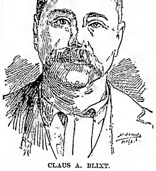
BLIXT SENTENCED.

Murderer of Catherine Ging Will Spend His Life in Prison.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 6.—Claus A. Blixt, the self-confessed slayer of Kittie Ging, appeared before Judge Pond in the district court. He entered a plea of guilty. Judge Pond at once sentenced him to the state prison for life. Although the trial of Blixt was not expected to occur until May 14, the prisoner decided to plead guilty at once and throw himself on the mercy of the court.



CLAUS A. BLIXT.

Hayward expressed little surprise at Blixt's change of plea or at the sentence. "That fellow is pretty cute," he said, "and has hypnotized the whole country. I wish I could have a talk with him and have somebody hidden in the room. I am sure people would find out then that he would never dare face me and say what he had been telling has been true. I know better than that."

As to his own case, Hayward said flatly that he had but little hope of escaping the gallows. He remarked complacently that he expected a funeral about the first of the year, and jocularly called the attention of Sheriff Holmberg, who stood near, to the fact that he would have to manage the execution.

THAT TRIP TO EUROPE.

Positively Stated That Hill Wants to Control the Northern Pacific.

NEW YORK, May 7.—From parties well informed as to Great Northern and Northern Pacific matters, it is positively learned that the real cause of the hasty departure of President Hill of the Great Northern and Mr. Adams of the reorganization committee of the Northern Pacific, was the discovery that J. Pierpont Morgan, who is now in Europe, is giving Northern Pacific matters some attention, and that he, in conjunction with August Belmont, a director of the Northern Pacific, is forming a plan of reorganization in the interests of the first, second and third bondholders and the stockholders.

When it was stated that President Hill was after the Northern Pacific, the idea was pooh-poohed on the ground that Mr. Hill had enough on his hands and was altogether too busy to be worried by another property; but it is an open secret that Mr. Hill has long cherished the ambition to control the Northern Pacific lines to cover the Puget Sound terminals with the mantle of his greatness, and some years ago he had his object so nearly accomplished that it was only by a fluke that he lost the game. He is now at work upon it again, and if he loses it will be because Morgan and Belmont are too strong for him and Henry Villard wants too much.

Commissioner Lyman Resigns.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The resignation of Charles Lyman of Connecticut, as a member of the United States civil service commission, is in the hands of the president. It is not known just what this signifies but it is regarded as likely that the commission will be practically reorganized.

HORRIBLE.

A Human Brute Butchers A New Born Babe To Hide A Most Unnatural Crime.

Confesses At Last And "Didn't Suppose It Was Anybody's Business Save His Own And His Sister's.

There is incarcerated in the Polk County jail awaiting trial for a most brutal murder either a fiend incarnate or a crazy man. Near Jadis, in Roseau county a farmer named Huige S. Vrna has been living on a farm with his sister as housekeeper. For some time his neighbors have had cause to suspect that the relations between the couple were not such as they should be and matters at last reached a point where an inquiry into the matter seemed the proper thing to do, and this was done, resulting in the discovery of a new born babe, with its throat cut from ear to ear buried near the residence of the couple. When charged with the murder Vran at first denied it, but finally admitted that he was the father of the infant, and his sister the mother, that he had cut its throat with a case-knife and buried it, supposing it was "nobody's business except his and his sister's." It is said that insanity exists in the Vraa family which is the most charitable construction that can be placed upon this horrible affair. The sheriff of Roseau county brought Vran to this city on Friday evening and turned him over to sheriff Stecnerson for safe keeping until his trial takes place.

The Ag. Ex. Station.

The Minneapolis Evening Journal says:—State Superintendent Prendergast, Col. Liggett, ex-Gov. Barto and Prof. Hays came home yesterday from Crookston. where they went to look at some land that has been offered for one of the new experiment stations of the agricultural school of the state university. Crookston, East Grand Forks, Wadena, Barnum and Staples have already made offers of land, and other offers are to come. Crookston also offered a bonus of three quarter sections near to the city, and the Polk county board offered $1,000, which the city council is expected to duplicate as soon as it can hold a meeting. Two of these experimental station are to be located, one in the Red river valley and one in the middle northern part of the state."

Not Settled Yet.

The case of little Hattie Flanders mentioned in our last issue does not seem to be settled yet. On Monday, Mrs. Bray intercepted Hattie on her way to school about one o'clock and took her to the residence of Jack Carter. One of the school children who saw the woman take the child informed Mrs. Rose who reported to Chief Creamer who went to the residence of Mr. Carter with Mr. Flanders and was refused admission by Mr. Carter. However they went in and got the little girl. Both Mr. Carter and Mrs. Bray were arrested, Mrs. B. on a charge of kidnaping and Mr. C. on a charge of resisting an officer. Mr. C. had his trial at once and was discharged. The trial of Mrs. Bray came on before judge McLean at 11 o'clock on Tuesday and after an all day's siege she was bound over in the sum of $250 to appear at the next term of court.

Beware of "The Sparks."

Geo. Vine seriously contemplates having his wearing apparel insured. Last summer some tramp stole all of George's best shirts off the clothes line and the other day a basket containing his best shirts was placed near the kitchen stove for a few minutes, and pretty quick George beheld the hired girl running out doors with the basket all on fire. George put out the flames, saw that his new four dollar shirts had climbed the flume then he sat down on the wood-pile and meditated deeply on all the good solid hard words he had ever heard spoken. The girl says "a spark" got into the basket which caused this mischief. Yes, they are dangerous——sometimes.

THE NEW G. A. R. HALL

The Grand Army boys commenced work on their new hall in earnest on Thursday morning——everybody taking hold with a will and by night the roof had been raised five feet, making a fine hall room above that the boys do insist will make the finest hall for dancing purposes in the city. Oc Sargeant was the boss carpenter, Adj. Harris manipulated the "thumb-screws" that raised the roof; Officer of the Day, Carlton bossed the awkward squad consisting of Kelley, LeDuc, Paul Felix and others who had science enough to swing a hammer, while Dr. Kistenmacher, carried water some and the balance of the time sat on the fence and cast sheep's eyes at the commander's woodpile in the adjoining yard, declaring "py yiminy crismus, I knows vere ve gets sheep fire-vood for next vinter aind id?" Everybody has taken hold with a will and those who are not skilled workmen enough to contribute labor have put their hands in their pockets for cash with which to purchase materials. At the rate the work is going on the post-room will be ready for occupancy before Memorial Day. The post room will be on the first floor of the main building, has been celled up with matched flooring will be lathed, plastered and calsomined. It will be 22x49 inside measurement including the ante-room. The hall above will be finished up similarly except that it will be full size of the building and can be used by other societies who may desire to rent a fine room, or it can be used for dances and such like entertainments. The kitchen will be plastered and calsomined and the dining room will be left nearly as it is now with possibly slight alterations. The club room, which is over the kitchen will be papered and painted and a new floor laid and will be ready for occupancy nearly as soon as the post room will be. Here, when everything is in readiness will be found all of the leading daily papers of the state, as well as some of the weeklies, together with other papers of interest to old soldiers and such magazines and books as can be secured. This club room will supply a "long felt want."

MEMORIAL DAY.

Preparations in Duluth.

The News-Tribune outlines what the G. A. R. boys in that city will do on Memorial day. Many of the members of the Duluth Post are charter members of Col. Cobham Post No. 90, of this city.

"The Grand Army has nearly perfected all arrangements for its Memorial day exercises. In the morning a committee will visit the burial ground and decorate all soldier's graves with flags and flowers. In the afternoon there will be a big parade and exercises at the Grand Opera house. All uniformed societies have been invited to participate. Ministers of all denominations have been invited to address the old soldiers at the Cummings ave. Methodist church, and many have accepted. On the Friday previous, members of the Palmer post will visit the public schools and give short talks to the children on the history of the war."

Persons calling for the above say advertised. F. E. LEPAGE, Postmaster.

Attention, G. A. R.

Now that the Post has secured a home of its own every one who has ever been a member of it should now come to the front and help to fix it up. This can best be done by paying up past dues and taking renewed interest in the meetings. If this is done Col. Cobham Post can easily become the strongest and best Post in the whole north part of the state, for we have members enough to accomplish this if all will now take hold and do their best. "Fall in," comrades; take hold with a will and see an organization of which you can well be proud. If all who can afford it will now come to the front we shall be enabled to carry on our roll many who really cannot afford to pay their dues and thus be enabled to carry out our grand principal of "Charity."

THE EDITORS

Will Try Atlanta and the Cotton Expo This Year.

The state editorial association will probably abandon the Yellowstone park scheme for the outing this season. It was found that the expense, at the best rates which could be secured, was beyond reach. All concerned were most liberal in their offers, the Northern Pacific agreeing to carry the entire association for nothing. The lowest estimate was upwards of $75 for each person for nine days trip and doing the park. The alternative proposition, of going to the Atlanta exposition, was yesterday considered by the executive committee, and met with favor. Secretary M. J. Dowling will go to Atlanta in a few days to look up that portion of such a trip south, while G. S. Canfield, of the association, will the coming week investigate the prospective military dedication and ceremonies at Chattanooga, which it is proposed to take in at the same time, if the arrangements can be made satisfactorily. These, with the opportunity to attend the Louisville G. A. R. encampment about the same time, will make an outing of ten days which would be greatly enjoyed.

ENCOUAGING OUTLOOK.

Agent Whitney of the Great Northern Tells of Crop Prospects.

St. Paul, Map 9.—General Passenger Agent Whitney of the Great Northern returned this morning from a trip over the Minnesota lines. Speaking of the crop outlook he said:

"Reports from all parts of the Northwest are most favorable for fine crops. The farmers of Minnesota and Dakota seem determined to get their inning this year. Under stimulus of abundant rains vegetation is attaining a remarkable growth. The season is two weeks or more in advance of last year. Encouraging stories come from all points. The Red river valley promises to yield the largest crop of its long and successful career as a producer of small grain. The park region also makes a wonderful showing. There is more diversity than ever before.

"The Dunkards who went into North Dakota last year and this spring are delighted. The Flathead valley in Montana will break the record this year if everything goes right. Eighteen hundred and ninety-five will be a busy year if there is anything in signs."

COUNCIL MEETING.

The city council met in regular session on Tuesday evening, all members present. The ways and means committee to whom was referred the matter of the Main street grading reported adversely, or in favor of the remonstrance that was presented against it not long since. The sum of $300 was appropriated toward the maintainance of the fire department.

An invitation from the G. A. R. to the council to co-operate in Memorial Day services was read and C. E. Sawyer, J. E. Morrisey and N. S. Gervais were appointed a committee to act in this matter.

A curfew ordinance was passed prohibiting all children under 16 appearing on the streets after 9 p. m. unaccompanied by parent or guardian and before 6 a. m. Makes a police officer of every other resident of the city with full power to arrest any such delinquents. The penalty for the first offense is simply arrest and taken home, for second offense the culprit shall be taken before a justice of the peace and on conviction fined $10 or 10 days in jail. The bell will tap nine times at 9 o'clock when every kid will be supposed to be dead to the world till morning. The practical utility of this ordinance will consist wholly in the manner in which it is carried out.

James Muir tendered his resignation as patrolman and Aaron Eck was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The Mayor presented the name of John Kyle for second patrolman and action deferred upon same till the adjourned session next Tuesday evening.

FOSSTON BRANCH.

One of the best evidences that the great Northern road intends very soon to extend its Fosston branch, that we have seen yet, is the fact that a prominent St. Paul gentleman, who has been heretofore extensively engaged in locating townsites along the Great Northern road is actively preparing for a trip from Fosston eastward, along the Great Northern survey and will take the field at an early day. To us this seems significant, for if he was just simply going on a voyage of discovery it does not seem to us that such extensive preparations as he is making would be necessary, as he goes thoroughly prepared to locate townsites as he goes along. This would seem to be very good evidence that "something will be did," at an early date.

ENFORCING THE GAME LAW.

A Shipment of Fish From Ely For St. Paul Seized at Duluth.

DULUTH, May 9.—When the Duluth and Iron Range train reached here at noon President Palmer of the Duluth Game Protective association was on hand in accordance with a telegram from Executive Officer Fullerton of the state game and fish commission, which stated that 15 boxes of wall-eyed pike had been shipped from Ely by John Clow & Bros. and consigned to the Booth Packing company. Mr. Palmer seized the fish, which weighed exactly a ton, on the ground that it had been taken with nets, and rebilled it by express to the executive agent at St. Paul.

Fish Commissioners Knocked Out.

ST. PAUL, May 11.—There is no game and fish commission in Minnesota, according to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Childs. He holds that under the wording of the first section of the new law passed last winter, a new board of fish and game commissioners is created, and hence the terms of the present commissioners expired with the passage of that act, and the old board was completely abolished. Governor Clough will appoint a new board.

WAS A SALE CONTRACT.

The Gilbert Grain Cases Come to a Sudden End.

LE SUEUR, Minn., May 10.—At Le Sueur Center a jury was secured and the case of J. M. Bartlett, president of the Gilbert Grain company, went to trial. The manager, C. A. Gilbert, turned state's evidence and was the first witness. On one of the tickets being offered, Judge Caldwell held that it was a contract for the sale of the wheat, not for storage, and ordered the jury to find for the defendant. This will end the prosecution against all the other defendants.

Editors Entertained.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., May 15.—The party of agricultural editors from the East spent the day in this city and visited the farmers in the vicinity. In the evening they were tendered a reception at the Pioneer club.

Smythe Succeeds Gilroy.

NEW YORK, May 15.—At a meeting of the Tammany society ex-Recorder Smythe was unanimously elected as grand sachem to succeed ex-Mayor Thomas F. Gilroy.

SALESMAN WANTED.

The Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., want two or three good salesmen for Polk county and vicinity. They pay the highest commission of any house in the west, and give the agent his choice of three plans of work. Write for terms, stating age. [4-7]

The Fire Department team that will contest the honors at the coming June tournament do not have it all their own way at their meetings for drill. A number of the kids have organized a "team" and when the boys of older growth get out to drill the juvenile fire department is right on deck and they show some pretty good work too. They have improvised a regular hose cart upon which they have wound 100 feet or so of garden hose which they manipulate in a surprisingly handy manner. The turning on of the water is illustrated by various explosive sounds from the mouths of the juvenile firemen, which more resembles the escape of steam from an engine. They have got the ladder drill down pretty fine and have some in their "company" who are really expert in climbing the ladder. The boys seem to enjoy it hugely and it will result in some expert firemen in the future.

NOTABLE REUNION

Veteran Wearers of the Blue and Gray to Meet in Chicago May 30.

HONOR TO CONFEDERATE DEAD.

General Schofield and Staff and Other Army Officers Will Attend.

CHICAGO, May 15.—A notable reunion of the blue and gray will take place when the Confederate monument at Oakwoods is dedicated on Memorial day. Officers who were prominent in the armies both of the North and South will be present and will do their best to make the occasion memorable. Several carloads of flowers will be sent from the Southern states to decorate the graves of the 6,000 Confederate soldiers who were buried at Oakwoods. The expense of entertaining the visitors will be borne by subscriptions raised among some of Chicago's leading citizens. Every effort will be made to have this the greatest meeting of officers of the armies of the North and the South that has ever occurred.

Some of the Notables Who Will Attend.

Lieutenant General Schofield, commanding the army of the United States, with his staff and family, Major General Morton L. Hawkins and Brigadier General H. V. Boynton are expected to be present. Lieutenant General Wade Hampton will be the orator of the occasion. Postmaster General William L. Wilson, Solicitor General Holmes Conrad, Brigadier General D. W. Flagler, chief of ordnance, U. S. A., and a great many army officers will also attend. The South will be represented by General John B. Gordon, commanding the Federation of United Confederate Veterans; Lieutenant General James Longstreet, Lieutenant General Alexander P. Stewart, Major General Fitzhugh Lee, Major General E. C. Wstball, Brigadier General Basil W. Duke, Brigadier General Clementine Evans and others. All the visitors will be entertained at the Palmer House.

GIVEN INCREASED WAGES.

A Number of Iron Works Sign the Amalgamated Scale.

PITTSBURG, May 15.—More success attended the battle of the Amalgamated association for higher wages and the recognition of that organization during the day. At the Vesuvius iron works Moorhead Bros. granted the workmen in all departments the Amalgamated scale. The increase ranged from 10 to 15 per cent.

As a result of the visit of President Garland of the Amalgamated association to Youngstown the men in the Valley mill were all given the union rate and they returned to work. The men at the Union Iron and Steel company's works were also out on strike because they thought they were not receiving the rates paid in the cotton tie mills of Pittsburg. Mr. Garland convinced them they were mistaken and the strike was declared off.

Illinois Veterans Meet.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., May 15.—Bloomington is glowing with decorations and electric lights, the occasion being the encampment of the Illinois department of the Grand Army and state gatherings of Sons of Veterans, Woman's Relief Corps, Ladies of the Grand Army and Ladies' Aid Society. The only drawback is the inclement weather, rendering the camp of the Sons of Veterans at Miller park uncomfortable.

Bullion Brokers Do Business.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Advices to the bullion brokers in this city from London state that contracts for future delivery of 3,509,000 ounces of silver bullion were made there in April, which is equal in amount to the sales during the period of activity caused by the first negotiations for peace in the East. This goes to prove that London dealers are confident of a material increase in the demand for the white metal.

Workmen Agreeably Surprised.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 15.—Two hundred men in the Delaware iron works were taken by surprise when they found 10 per cent increase in wages in their envelopes. They were informed that the improvement in the iron trade made the increase in wages possible.

Coldest on the Lake Shore.

CINCINNATI, May 15.—Specials to The Commercial-Gazette from various points in Ohio, indicate that the cold was greatest and the frost most damaging on the Lake Erie slope; also, that below the 40th parallel of latitude the damage was almost insignificant.

Gresham Slowly Gaining.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The improvement in Secretary Gresham's condition continues. It is expected that a week or more will elapse before the secretary is able to partake of more food. He seems to be slowly regaining his strength.

Machinery All Idle.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 15.—All the machinery of the Olneyville mills is now idle, with the exception of a few looms in each which are being operated for the purpose of making samples preliminary to the fall trade.

PROCEEDINGS

Of The County Board—In Special Session, May 8th and 9th, 1895.

The Following resolution offered by Com. Kirsch was on motion adopted:

"Whereas no appropriation was made by the state for aid in the building of the Louisville bridge and whereas the contract with the Wrought Iron Bridge Co. was made conditional, therefore be it resolved, that said contract be and the same is hereby declared null and void."

On motion it was decided to reconsider the action had on March 28, 1895, with reference to formation of school district, on petition of Even J. Tuff, et. al.

The petition of Even J. Tuff, et. al. was rejected.

Action on school petition of Henry Curo was deferred until next meeting.

County auditor was instructed to issue a refunding order in favor of Andrew Johnson, in amount of $29.11, tax judgment rendered on erroneous assessment.

The following was agreed upon and submitted as a suitable memorial to the Board of Regents of the University of Minnesota, representatives of which are at present visiting Northern Minnesota with a view to the selection as a site for an experimental farm.

PRACTICAL.

Grand Forks Plaindealer:—A teacher in a school that is situated on the bank of the Red River wished to communicate to his pupils an idea of faith. Seeing a small boat on the stream near by he said, "If I were to tell you that there was a leg of mutton in that boat you would believe me, would you not, without ever seeing it yourselves? "Yes sir," replied the scholars." "Well" that is faith!" and the next day in order to test their recollection of the lesson, he inquired, "What is faith?" "A leg of mutton in a boat," was the prompt answer from all parts of the school.

CLAUSEN RETURNS FROM BEMIDJI

He Claims to Have Corralled the Coming City of the North.

Minneapolis Evening Journal.

Chief Grain Inspector Clausen returned yesterday from Bemedji Lake in Beltrami county, where he, with Tams Bixby, Harris Richardson, John Goodnow and others, are interested in a new town which has just been platted. The Mississippi river flows through the lake, and the new town is located on the river a short distance below where it leaves the lake. Mr. Clausen is very enthusiastic over the outlook for the new city, and says that the topography of the land is such that it will certainly become the railroad center of northern Minnesota. It is on the surveyed line of the proposed road from Duluth to the Red River valley, and is to be the terminus of the Brainerd & Northern. Mr. Clausen says that settlers are pouring into the Bemedji country from the adjoining counties, and that it is bound to be a prosperous country.

CROP PROSPECTS.

All over Minnesota the reports agree that the prospects for big crops are very flattering: "Never, perhaps, in the history of the county, has grain and vegetation grown so rapidly during the first part of May as they have this season. The indications now are that where ever timothy and clover have escaped the winter freezing and fall drouth they will be a good crop. The chances for corn and potatoes and vegetables also seem to be good. What are the prospects for grain crop is asked. It is always a good indication when there is rain enough to start the growing grain during June. The season that has the most days of sunshine, even though it be very dry is usually the best for producing a good quality of grain. Straw that has grown principally in the shade is seldom able to withstand the severe heat of July without so as to yield good grain. Even though the season is so far very flattering, there may be danger of too rank a growth of straw. The experience of the past has been that the best crops of grain have been matured in years when May and early June promised very little."

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Christian O. Espe and Jessie Espe, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1888, at 4:30 o'clock p. m., in book 47 of mortgages, at page 8.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of six per centum (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and eleven (11) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment dated April 14th, A. D. 1892, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 448 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000, and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1115.00 being the sum of $1000. principal, and $115.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southwest quarter (SW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty-six (46), containing one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

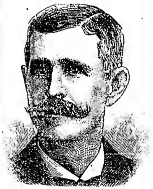
'The People Of the Northwest portion of the United States can congratulate themselves on having the elegant traveling accommodations offered by the North-Western line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago which the wealthiest and oldest roads in the effete East have not yet found it possible to excel.—The Times, Monticello, Minn.



A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat these parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

For Sale.

All of my real estate in the city of Crookston, consisting of one ten room, story and a half residence on corner of Sixth and Pine streets with six lots, which is now used as a garden and contains a great abundance of small fruits, crab apples, berries, etc.; also a quarter block on the river on Pine street, which has two comfortable barns upon it and an excellent building site. Will be sold at a bargain to one purchaser or divided if required. For full particulars address Wm. Cunningham or the JOURNAL office, Crookston, Minn. (28-tf,

"The man With ideas for Comfort in Travel is abroad in the land and The North-Western Line has met him before any other line in the Northwest. This line has without doubt taken the most active and aggressive part in securing the Comfort and Conveniences of its passengers and in its North-Western Limited has given the Twin Cities the Best Train to Chicago.—The Sun, Brandon, Man.

"In These Days Of Comfort and Convenience in Railway Train Services American people are apt to become a bit hardened and unappreciative. They are getting so callonsed to luxury, so to speak, so that it takes something unusual to evoke words of praise. No more polated example of the perfection of train service can be found anywhere than in the fine North-Western Limited.—Progressive Age Minneapolis, Minn.

MORTGAGE SALE.

(First Pub. May 2d, 1895.)

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of the mortgage containing power of sale dated October 17th 1889, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County Minnesota, October 22d 1889, in book 42 of mortgages, page 118, whereby Carl Johnsen and Karl Johnsen, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to the Middlesex Banking Company, mortgagee, the East Half of the Northwest Quarter and East Half of the Southwest Quarter of Section Thirty-one (31) in Township One hundred and forty-eight (148), of Range Forty-three (43), in said Polk County by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured thereby, or any part thereof, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date hereof $331 to which amount should be added the taxes on said property paid by said mortgagee, amounting with interest, as provided in said mortgage, to $12.60 making the total amount claimed to be due at the date hereof on said mortgage $343.85.

Now notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises sold at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or his deputy, Saturday June 15th 1895 at ten o'clock A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Crookston in said county, to pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Louis Boisvert, (unmarried) as mortgagor, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 30th day of October, A. D. 1888, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 16th day of November, A. D. 1888, at 8 o'clock p. m., in book 40 of mortgages on page 504.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $450.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to George Wm. Boyd, by written assignment, dated December 24th, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, State of Minnesota, on the 10th day of January, A. CHAPTER XXVII.

THE CHOICE OF A POST.

Caroline Fitz Hugh had watched over Corporal Ratigan every day since his wounding, and by careful nursing had doubtless saved his life. It was not for the corporal to fall in love with his nurse, for he had loved her ever since the day he first met her. When the visiting party had left the house, she went back to her charge, and after a few words of sympathy at the loss of his brother, putting out her hand frankly, and with a smile:

"Arise, Sir Hugh," she said. "You have been on your back long enough. You must get used to sitting up and prepare to go to Ireland and to administer your estate."

"Darlin," he said, looking up at her wistfully.

"It's time you were breaking yourself of calling me that. You must forget the Confederate 'telegraph worker,' go home and marry one of the daughters of the neighboring gentry and settle down to become 'a fine old Irish gentleman, one of the rare old stock.'"

"That's a fine picture ye're makin for me, and what'll ye be doin meantime?"

"Working for my country."

"And haven't yo promised ye would do no more telegraph workin?"

"Oh, that duty has come to an abrupt termination! I shall never attempt it again. How could I after the sacrifice you and Colonel Maynard have made for me? Besides, if seen within the Federal lines, I should be recognized, and I would then deserve my fate."

"Ye'd better abandon the cause."

"Never, so long as it is a cause. So long as my brothers continue the struggle I will be with them."

"Then so long as the Union army is fightin ye Oi'll be in its ranks."

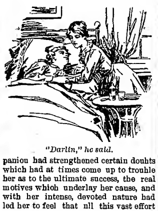
"You'll do no such thing. You will go home, where your presence is more needed—to your mother, to your tenants. Ireland needs all her landowners such as you at home. That is your country. You have no interest here."

"And the United States is your country. You have no other."

"Rats!"

"Darlin!"

There was a silence between them for some moments. Ratigan laid his hand on hers while she was looking, with a pained expression, out of the window. In her eyes was a far look. Her companion had strengthened certain doubts which had at times come up to trouble her as to the ultimate success, the real motives which underlay her cause, and with her intense, devoted nature had led her to feel that all this vast effort put forth by her people might in the end avail nothing or would only, if successful, perpetuate a wrong. Her lover saw her troubled expression. He did not attempt to comfort her by recalling what he had said. He pushed on further.



"Darlin," he said.

"Darlin," he said, "ye're right when ye say Oi'm needed in Oireland. Go with me, darlin. Be me wife. Let all this intense effort, this sacrifice ye're puttin into a cause, which Oi foresee is doomed, be given to me tenants. The estate is a large one, and there are hundreds of people for ye to befriend. There ye can work to a purpose. There yer efforts in behalf of a really downtrodden people will be for good."

"And leave my brothers in the midst of this horrid struggle? I will stay here till the last gun is fired, till the last blow of the hammer has riveted our chains."

Born and bred in the south, Miss Fitz Hugh had never seen except with southern eyes. Here was a man who was giving her views never before open to her. She had a mind capable of grasping them and saw the strength, the solid sense, beneath them when properly presented.

"Darlin," said the young baronet, "the world moves on quickly. If yer people succeed in this war, in less than a quarter of a century ye'll either free yer slaves or be a blot on the face of the earth."

"Oh, Rats," she exclaimed, "why did I ever meet you? You've sapped the strength I possessed for my work. I can never again do my duty as I have done it thus far."

"Darlin," he said, drawing her nearer to him, "Oi'll replace what Oi've taken. Oi'll give ye other duties, the duties that belong to the mistress of a fine estate, the duties of a woman of high degree in a country where birth is respected far more than here. With your vigor, your strong impulses"—

"Guided by your more steady light."

"Ye may become one of the most influential women in the three kingdoms."

In her eyes came that humorous twinkle he had once seen before when she stood in her buggy in the road up in Tennessee and tantalized him for his stupidity in having been duped by her.

"It would be nice to be"—

"To be what, darlin?"

"Lady Rats," and she hid her blushes in the pillow on which his head rested.

* * * * * * *

The sun setting over Lookout mountain shone directly in the faces of Maynard and his party as returning from Ringold they rode into Chattanooga. It was a glorious October evening, and the heights towering them, covered by unseen Confederates, reposed about the town like huge lions watching a wounded animal, confident that at last it must fall into their power.

Dismounting before his tent, Maynard entered it, and there found a letter from his wife. She begged him to come to her if it were possible, and if not to write to her. He read and reread the letter again and again, and then made an attempt at a reply. After writing half a dozen, all of which he tore up, he abandoned the task in despair. His position was too uncertain. The sentence of the court martial hung over him like a sullen cloud. What could he say to her to comfort her? He well knew that the only comforting she needed was to know that he was not miserable, and of that he could not assure her.

And so matters hung for a week. Having no duties to perform, the time passed all the more slowly. The Confederates were sending occasional shells from Lookout mountain, and as they were harmless the reports were something of a relief to Maynard, breaking the monotony of the silence. He spent much of the time thinking of what he would do in case the sentence of the court were approved and carried into effect. He formed many plans, which were all abandoned. At last he settled down to the resolve that he would go to the army in the east, enlist under an assumed name and await the coming of some missile to end his career, as he had intended at Chickamauga.

One morning an orderly rode up to him and handed him an order to report in person at General Thomas' headquarters. Calling for his horse and for his own orderly, Jakey, to follow, he mounted, and in a feverish mood darted away to obey the order.

What did the summons mean? Something definite in his affairs had come about; that he felt reasonably sure of. Perhaps the papers of the court in his case had been found. Perhaps they had been made out in duplicate. The latter supposition was the most likely. His offense could not be ignored. Indeed he could not afford to have it ignored. The sentence must be either set aside or carried into effect. Dismissal would be far more desirable than living in suspense.

All these matters rushed through his mind while he rode to respond to the summons. The nearer he drew to headquarters the less hopeful he became. After all, was it not absurd to expect anything except that new papers had been made, the sentence forwarded "approved," and he was now to be informed that he was no longer in the army? General Thomas could do much for him, but there was not a general in the army who had a higher sense of a soldier's obligations than he. How was it possible that so great a leader, so rigid a disciplinarian, one with such high conceptions, could do aught in his case but approve the sentence? And now he was sending for him to inform him of his degradation.

Following this reasoning, by the time he arrived at headquarters his expectations were at the lowest ebb. He dismounted, and so preoccupied was he that he left his horse standing without fastening her, but Jakey rode forward and seized the rein. Maynard gave his name to an orderly and in a few minutes stood before the man whose very presence was quite sufficient to strike terror into the heart of a delinquent.

But the first face on which Maynard's eyes rested was not that of the general. Another was there to greet him, one who, he knew, whether he were honored or disgraced, would never love him the less. It was his wife. The thought flashed through his brain, "She is here to comfort me when the blow falls." He wanted to fly to her embrace. The impulse was checked. He saw that she burned to fly to him, but she, too, restrained herself, for there, between them, towered the figure of the general. Maynard gave him a quick glance, but could discover nothing in his countenance to indicate what his fate would be. These glances, these surmises, lasted but for a moment, for the general spoke:

"I have sent for you to inform you of your status in the army."

Maynard bowed his head and waited.

"The offense for which you were tried," the general spoke slowly and impressively, "was too grievous to be overlooked. It would have pleased me in the case of so brave a man to set it aside, but such a course would have condoned that which, if it should go unpunished, would strike at the very foundation of military discipline. In liberating a spy intrusted to your care you violated a sacred trust and assumed an authority such as is not accorded to any one save the president of the United States."

Maynard did not raise his eyes from the ground. He knew what was coming, and a shiver passed over him.

"A new set of papers were prepared and sent to me. I forwarded them"—

Maynard's eyes were almost starting from their sockets.

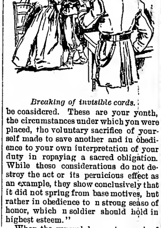
"With my approval."

"Oh, general!" gasped the stricken man, catching at the tent pole for a support. Laura could with difficulty keep her seat, so eager was she to fly to him.

"They have also been approved by the president, and you have been dismissed from the service of the United States, with forfeiture of all pay and emoluments."

Maynard tried to speak. He wished to say that he could not complain of the sentence—that, considering the offense, it was merciful—but his tongue would not obey him.

"So much for your punishment," the general went on after a slight pause. "There are other matters, however, to be considered. These are your youth, the circumstances under which you were placed, the voluntary sacrifice of yourself made to save another and in obedience to your own interpretation of your duty in repaying a sacred obligation. While these considerations do not destroy the act or its pernicious effect as an example, they show conclusively that it did not spring from base motives, but rather in obedience to a strong sense of honor, which a soldier should hold in highest esteem."



Breaking of invisible cords.

When the general began to speak of these palliating circumstances, Maynard did not hear him. As he proceeded, however, his attention was arrested.

"Furthermore, there are your brilliant services, both as a scout and yet more recently in the battle through which we have just passed. I have taken pains to learn of your services in the ranks on the 19th of September and was myself a witness to your gallantry on the ridge on the 20th. I cannot find it in my heart to fail in my acknowledgments to any man, however he may have erred, who engaged in that desperate struggle, which was a turning point in our fortune and may be said to have saved us all from rout or capture.

"Besides for more than a year I have watched your career with interest. I am sure that you are possessed of undoubted military talents, perhaps of a high order. I believe it to be true wisdom on the part of the government to retain those talents for the country. Therefore, in the interest of the United States and for gallant and meritorious conduct at the battle of Chickamauga, I have suggested your name to the president for the appointment of brigadier general of volunteers. A batch of such appointments, including yours, was yesterday sent to the senate, and I have a telegram announcing that they were all confirmed."

Suddenly it seemed as if there had been a loosening of invisible cords that had been holding husband and wife apart. In the fraction of a second they were locked in each other's arms. Tears, the usual mode of expression of deep feeling in woman, did not come only to the wife. Yet in a measure the sexes were reversed. Laura was more smiles than tears. Maynard only wept.

Soon remembering in whose presence he stood, Maynard disengaged himself. Turning to General Thomas:

"General," he said in a broken voice, "I cannot—thanks are nothing—time must show how well I appreciate what you have done. Is there another man in the army who could afford to take so enlarged a view in such a case? Is there one with so farseeing an eye, so keen a sense of a soldier's duty, tempered with so kind a heart?"

Maynard paused for a moment. Then with a sudden burst of enthusiasm:

"But who shall reward the man who on that terrible day held together the Army of the Cumberland? Can the president bestow an adequate rank? Would the title of full 'general' avail? No! It is for the people to reward you with a title, not given by an individual, but by the common consent of vast masses—not only for a day, but so long as there shall be a history of this war—the Rock of Chickamauga."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A SINGULAR CEREMONY.

Laura Maynard, after a long period of solicitude as to her husband—detained at home by a temporary illness of her child—had at last found it possible to go and seek him. She had arrived on the morning of the news of his appointment and at once sought General Thomas' headquarters. There she had been informed of the status, and a messenger was at once sent for her husband.

Leaving the tent where Maynard had first been plunged in despair only to be elevated to a condition of mind bordering on ecstasy, the two sought a hotel, where Laura could be made comfortable till the next day, and there passed the time in going over the period since they had parted and rejoicing at the outcome of the singular complications which fate had been pleased to bring down upon the husband.

But all meetings must have an end, and at last the husband, departing, rode to his tent. There he found a messenger waiting for him.

"'Flag of truce' wants to see you on the picket line, sir."

Without dismounting, the newly created general rode in the direction of Mission ridge and met "the flag" at its base. There stood a mounted party of Confederates, one of them bearing a white flag, headed by an officer, a son of the south who spoke every word as though it were of momentous importance, never omitting the word "sir."

"Are you Colonel Maynard, sir?"

"I am, or at least I was. I hardly know what I am just now. I should not be surprised to be informed that I was to command all the armies of the United States."

The officer looked puzzled.

"I am the bearer, sir, of a message from Corporal Sir Hugh Ratigan. He is to be married at 7 o'clock this evening at General Bragg's headquarters on Mission ridge."

"The devil he is!"

"That is his intention, sir. He desires your presence."

"Whom does he marry?"

"Miss Caroline Fitz Hugh."

"I have been more surprised at other announcements, I confess. I don't wonder he invites me to his wedding, since I helped him to a wife."

"Shall I transmit your acceptance of the invitation, sir?"

"On one condition."

"Please name it, sir."

"I fear it will be unacceptable to Colonel Fitz Hugh, who will doubtless be the host or one of the hosts. He will not likely yield in a matter of etiquette which I must insist on."

"Colonel Fitz Hugh cannot be present, sir. He is now in your rear with our cavalry completing the starvation of your army in Chattanooga by destroying your lines of supply."

"H'm. I was not aware of any hunger in our ranks. Indeed my request is, knowing that your own larder in the Confederacy is not exactly abundant; that the horn of plenty is not burying you like Herculaneum under the ashes of Vesuvius; that the blockade"—

"The blockade is not effective, sir," interrupted the officer stiffly.

"Has somewhat reduced your wine cellars, my condition is, I say, that I may be permitted to bring half a dozen cases of champagne for the wedding feast."

"I assure you, sir, that it is not necessary. We are getting cargoes of wine from Havre by a regular line of steamers. It is your own mess tables at Chattanooga that are doubtless bereft of beverages, owing to the fact that our General Wheeler is circus riding in Tennessee, leaving no road or railroad open to you."

"Do you consent that I shall bring the wine?"

"I do, sir, but shall claim for the host, a general officer related to the bride, the privilege of supplying an equal number of cases."

"Agreed. I will meet you here at 6 o'clock this evening, when you can conduct me and my party to the place where the ceremony is to take place. You may say, if you please, that I shall consider the invitation extended to my wife, whom I will bring with me."

"We shall feel highly honored, sir, at Mrs. Maynard's presence. Am I to infer, sir, that your wife has been able to reach you over the burned bridges and trestlework in your rear?"

"She has found no difficulty whatever in joining me."

Maynard failed to add that Laura had only come a few miles to meet him.

"Good day, sir," said the officer, raising his hat. "I shall expect you at 6."

"Good day. I will be on time."

And each rode away in the direction of their respective camps.

Maynard's offer of the wine had come about in this wise: Jakey, during the previous week, had been investigating such empty houses as he could find in Chattanooga and had loaded himself down with knickknacks, such as china ornaments, pictures, crockery, cutlery, including even daguerreotypes. On one occasion he thought he had discovered a box of muskets. This he reported to Colonel Maynard, whom he persuaded to go with him to a cellar near by and make a search for concealed arms. The muskets were found, besides half a dozen cases of champagne, which had doubtless been there since the beginning of the war.

Upon leaving the picket line Maynard rode to the house where he had seen the wine and secured it for the evening, placing a guard over it. Then he went to the hotel and bade Laura get ready to attend a wedding.

There was consternation in the Confederate camp when the officer returned with the information that the Yankee had tried to bluff him by claiming the privilege of bringing champagne with him, and that he had claimed the right for the hosts to furnish an equal amount. The telegraph was set in motion at once, directing search to be made in all the neighboring towns for the required beverage. Dalton, Cleveland and other points were ransacked without success. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon, as despair was settling on the Confederates, a telegram was received that some champagne had been found in Atlanta. The authorities there were directed to send it by special locomotive, marking it: "Ammunition. Forward with dispatch."

At 7 o'clock Maynard, accompanied by Laura, and Jakey, who was always with him, besides a wagon containing the case of wine, were at the appointed place on the picket line, where they were met by the Confederate "flag." Transferring the wine to the backs of pack mules, all started up the side of Mission ridge to General Bragg's headquarters.

As they approached the crest a body of Confederate officers, a gay cavalcade in gray and gold lace, rode out to meet them. They were received by the relative of the bride—an uncle—referred to by the officer who brought the invitation. He was an elderly man, of a dignified and serious mien. The party were conducted to a large marquee set up for the wedding feast. There they alighted, and the wine was unloaded and carried inside.

A few minutes before 7 o'clock the guests were conducted to a knoll, on the summit of which had been erected a canopy of flowers, and where stood a group of Confederates of high rank. On the eastern horizon stood the full moon. Below to the east was the battlefield of Chickamauga. To the west, the Army of the Cumberland, besieged in Chattanooga, on half rations. As the guests approached, the groom, still in his uniform of a corporal, attended by his best man—a Confederate noncommissioned officer of good family, detailed for the occasion—was seen moving from the north toward the knoll. At the same moment the bride, attired in a dress made of a coarse white stuff, manufactured in the Confederacy, and attended by several bridesmaids, who had come from a distance to officiate, approached from the south. The two met on the knoll under the canopy. An officer of high rank, who was also a bishop in the church, stepped forward, and Corporal Sir Hugh Ratigan and Caroline Fitz Hugh were made one. The only lamp to light the nuptials was the round moon in the east. The only canopy, save that composed of flowers, was the broad heavens above, in which the stars had only just appeared for the night. The only wedding bells were occasional booms from guns on Lookout mountain.

The ceremony over, the bride and groom repaired to the marquee, lighted with candles, where they took position to receive the congratulations of the company. All gave way to Colonel and Mrs. Maynard, who offered theirs first.

"We must give you up, I suppose," said Laura to the bride, "just as we would like to know you better. You go abroad, I suppose."

"No, I remain here."

"But Sir Hugh will go?"

"Yes, as soon as he can get his discharge. He goes to Virginia from here, where he will pass through the lines to Washington and will put his case in the hands of the British minister. He anticipates no trouble in getting a discharge from the Federal army and hopes to sail within a month for Ireland."

"And you?" asked Laura, in some surprise that the bride could bear to part so soon with her husband.

"I? I remain with my people till the last gun has been fired. We have argued that question, and such is my decision."

"Moi decisions," observed the groom, "are a thing of the past."

Leaving the newly married pair, Colonel Maynard approached the master of ceremonies, the bride's uncle.

"General," he said, "I esteem it a privilege that you have waived your right to furnish all the viands for the wedding feast and have permitted me to contribute. There," pointing to the boxes of wine he had brought, "are six cases of champagne, which I beg you to accept as a contribution from the Army of Chattanooga."

At a signal from the officer addressed a negro removed a blanket covering a dozen boxes in a corner of the tent, which had come a hundred miles and had not been in position ten minutes.

"I see your six cases, general, and go you six cases better."

"Having no further resources at hand," said Maynard, bowing, "I retire from the game."

"Hannibal," said the Confederate, "you may advance the force in the first box to a position in line on the table."

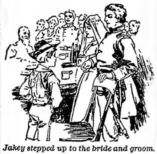
"Yes, sah," said the person addressed. And seizing a saber standing in the corner he unsheathed it with a flourish and pried open a box of the wine. In a moment a dozen bottles were standing on the table like a platoon of soldiers.

"Now, Hannibal, you may fire the opening shot."

Hannibal broke the wires, and a "pop," a far more welcome sound than those that had been so recently and frequently heard by all present, announced that the feast was not only set, but begun.

"I must apologize for our glassware," said the master of ceremonies. "Our champagne glasses were all shattered by the concussions at Chickamauga."

And well he might. The array consisted of tin cups, wooden cups, glass cups and tumblers, all either cracked, broken or dented. And as a circle was formed to pledge the bride and groom one Confederate screened himself behind his comrades to avoid being seen drinking from a gourd. When the contents of 18 cases—a regiment of "dead soldiers"—lay on the table, the guests prepared to depart. The last words had been spoken by General and Mrs. Maynard and by Sir Hugh and Lady Ratigan. Jakey, who had thus far wandered about unobserved, though not unobserving, stepped up to the bride and groom. Though he had not tasted the wine, his eyes glistened with intoxication at the union of his two friends, whose attachment he had noticed from the first.



Jakey stepped up to the bride and groom.

"Miss Baggs, air you uns 'n Sir Rats goin ter ride roun Tennessee some more in the chicken coop?"

There was a burst of laughter from the party, and Lady Ratigan, with a blush, informed Jakey that the chicken coop was broken in pieces.

"I didn't know nuthin 'bout that. Reckon Sir Rats'd find it handy in Ireland. It's kind o' funny you uns startin out way up by th' mountings 'n fetchin up down hyar, nigh onter th' Georgy line." And Jakey surprised the company by giving the only "ha, ha" that had to this moment ever been heard to issue from his serious lips.

As the guests descended the side of the mountain a cheer was heard in the direction of Chattanooga. They stopped and listened. A man rode out from the Union picket line to meet them.

"What's that cheering?" asked General Maynard.

"Ole Pap's in command of the Army of the Cumberland."

Non-pull-out

is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

My Wife Is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her blood has become impoverished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Roberson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in every way."

THE East Grand Forks Courier says that Bierly, of the Grand Forks News has purchased some fine shade trees which he intends to set out on his East Grand Forks lots. The best time to set out those trees, Bierly, is some dark night when the deputy sheriff is in bed, or on Sunday when no arrests are legal. Perhaps you might hire a cheap boy, though.

THE rumor that Nellie Grant Sartori is soon to wed an ex-confederate general is denied by the lady herself, but very many do not credit the denial. Nellie's distinguished papa, Gen. U. S. Grant, used to have a very persuasive faculty for bringing the confederates into the Union, and we see no good reason why Nellie should not—in a measure—emulate the deeds of her illustrious sire.

THE appointment of Henry Hooper, of Marshall county, on the commission to locate the new asylum is, we learn, a truly worthy one—a well merited compliment to the north part of the state and should be duly appreciated by our people, but where was Senator Ringdal, and why did he not secure this recognition for Polk county, instead of allowing the senator from the district north of us capture the position?

THE executive committee of the State League of Republican clubs met in Minneapolis last Thursday for the purpose of selecting four delegates from each congressional district to attend the National Republican League convention to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, June 19th. The delegates for the seventh district are: Halvor Steenerson, Crookston; F. M. Eddy, Pope Co., F. Von-Baumbach, Douglas Co. and Henry Feig, Kandiyohi Co.

IT is not what men seem to be, but what they are, that counts in the battle of life. A man may appear to be all that is noble and virtuous, but in reality may be a whited sepulchre—filled with all manner of rottenness and corruption. The object of life of every true man is so to live that the world may be the better for his having lived, and no man with "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" propensities can ever accomplish this.

THE first issue of Prof. McCrillis' new paper, The Northwest Teacher, is on our table. It starts out in magazine form, contains 16 pages of live, interesting matter, of interest to school work, and cover. In it we see the bright faces of nearly all of the pretty school ma'ams in the county—and understand that the rest are destined to appear later. It is a very creditable work and nicely gotten up.

THE cowardly murderer, Blixt, had a good scare while on the way to Stillwater. At White Bear Lake a crowd of lumber jacks boarded the train with the intention of taking Blixt out and hanging him, but did not succeed in locating him until the train moved off. Meanwhile the wretch sat by his wife's side and trembled. If the hanging could have brought his poor victim back to life it would have been all right to indulge in.

THE Ging case seems to be pretty definitely settled so far as the chief actors in the drama are concerned. The arch-conspirator, Harry Hayward, will hang; the actual murderer, has been sent to Stillwater for life, where he can meditate upon the dastardly crime of shooting in cold blood a poor, defenseless, weak woman. If such cowardly curs could be shot before they commit their crime it would be a blessing to humanity.

THE Pioneer Press contains an article in which the statement is made that J. J. Hill threatens to wreck the milling interests of Minneapolis and build up Duluth into a great milling center because Mr. Hill is incensed at the action of Minneapolis millers in persistently ignoring his road as a shipper. It is considered a good thing to have somebody to lay all one's troubles to but in this case the complaint is extremely childish. Duluth has natural advantages that Minneapolis never had and never can acquire that will do more toward making her the great milling center of the continent than any one man or set of men could ever do. If there is any thing at all in the complaint it comes from Mr. Hill's good business judgment which enables him to appreciate Duluth's natural advantages at their true worth.

McKinley in the Lead.

Boston Herald.

The indications are that Gov. McKinley is well equipped with friends thus far, some of whom are giving considerable time to his service; neither is he so pronounced in his personal antagonisms as to deprive any considerable number of Republicans of the hope of profiting if he he should come into his kingdom. He is in advance of his rivals in being in evidence before the people, and this with no apparent effort as yet at immodest intrusion on his part.

THAT VETO.

A great deal has been said about the action of Gov. Clough in relation to his veto of the bill providing for the introduction of civil service rules in the grain weighing department. Probably no one in the state is better posted on the requirements of the situation than Chief Inspector A. C. Clausen and this is what he is said to have remarked on the subject: "A. C. Clausen, chief inspector, was interviewed today on the subject, and stated that the governor's motives and reasons for his action were undoubtedly misunderstood and misinterpreted. "There is no reason for the assumption that he desires to overturn the work of the department or to interfere with the system of training and promotion which has been in force for the past five years under the established rules and regulations of the railroad and warehouse commission. On the contrary, I am personally aware, from the governor's expressed views on the subject, that he is in the same attitude with former executives and fully appreciates the necessity and importance of conducting the work of the department in a manner most conducive to the results for which the system was created.

"The rules under which the work is being conducted were established by the commission under authority conveyed by the warehouse and grain law of 1885. The bill referred to was intended to declare specifically certain fixed rules for the classification of all employes and for the examination of applicants for entrance into the service or promotion therein. The governor's position in vetoing the bill, as I understand it, was that civil service rules were practically in effect in this department at the present time, and that it was unnecessary and unwise to incorporate these rules into law at this time or until a general measure could be enacted which would satisfactorily cover all state departments that should properly come under its provisions."

Norman County Herald:—A business man of this town informs us this morning of something which is disgraceful. He says that certain young boys of this village are making targets of the monuments in the cemetery, shooting at them as they ride by. We were reluctant to believe it, but the statement is vouched for that some monuments have half a dozen bullet marks on them. As the business man said, "it is a disgrace to the town that it has raised and harbors such vandals." The act is a criminal offence and it is an offence of that character which thoroughly proves the utter depravity and worthlessness of the perpetrator. If we had the names of these young loafers (for such they are) we would print them in black type right here. We know of half a dozen young men in this town who ought to be put on a farm, if they can't find work in town and made to earn their living. Idleness is the root of all evil and permitting the boys to keep guns and pistols for their amusements, wheels to ride on when they ought to be working and to loaf when they ought to be doing something useful, are wrongs for which the parents are responsible. Somebody is sowing gentle breezes in this town in the matter of bringing their boys up and they will be reaping whirlwinds by and by. Whoever the coat fits are welcome to it.

Bob Dunn's Good Work.

From the St. Paul Dispatch.

State Treasurer Koerner this morning received the first draft in payment of a claim for shortage against a lumberman. It was sent in by David Tozier, of Stillwater, and the amount was $2,989.69. It was in payment for pine cut on section 16, town 42, range 17. The timber had been sold for $4.10 per thousand, and the draft had been made for only $3.10 per thousand, a difference of $1 per thousand. This is the first payment in response to the notice sent out by Auditor Dunn to the lumbermen, calling their attention to the shortage and advising them to square up before June 1, when the penalty attaches for unpaid accounts, trespasses and the like.

The Future of Wheat.

On this topic the Minneapolis Tribune says:

"The volume of business in the wheat trade has been extensive during the past week. Values on the whole have ruled higher and the trade appears to have revived under natural conditions which promises to prolong the activity, to which we are a stranger. It is to be noticed that the revival of speculation is not independent of an actual heavy increase in transactions for the "spot stuff." This makes the enlarged operations gratifying, not only to the bulls but the entire trade. It is also to be noted that the trading for the past month has exceeded in volume over that of any April for the past three years. At home an increased clerical force has been a necessity among the leading commission houses. From Chicago we learn that the increased business has not only increased clerk hire but that the most of the entire staff have had to work to midnight in order to keep up with the now called extraordinary demand. The general public also are in the swim. The advance in the price of wheat has brought the produce to this city and also brought country business by mail and by wire. The whole Northwest takes interest in wheat. The market has had reaction at times, but at each decline the tendency was to a higher plane, together with better support. It is true that on Saturday the feeling was a little weak speculatively. That was natural, but the sellers of Saturday believe in their hearts that wheat was a purchase on all breaks, etc.

Now, The Tribune does not advise, for it is out of its province to do so, to buy or to sell. It simply states that from all recent dates the "bull" conditions surrounding the wheat market still exist. These are, without doubt, first that its position has caught the speculative fancy; that there is a better feeling throughout the globe; that our home stores are seriously depleted; that the prospects for the coming winter wheat crop is not up to the average of years; that in Europe stocks are much lower than last year; that crop prospects in France and Germany are worse than a month ago, and, moreover, that at home—by this we mean the Northwest, although all prospects are favorable for the growing crop—we find less acreage reported than for the past three years.

The increase in receipts at this point for the past week is attributed solely to the anxiety of country elevators to realize at present price and not from the fact that there was any appreciable increase in farmers' deliveries. We have had a good rise, and in the nature of things a slight decline would be in order.

"How long will it last?" is the question asked by many. That will depend on the real merit of the situation; not altogether on the wheat situation, either, but upon the ultimate. We believe that the ultimate warrants steadiness at present values, but would forswear any wild-cat advances. The demand for wheat for actual consumption continues to be abnormally large in our own country; our visible supply is rapidly being depleted without any extraordinary demand from abroad, and at the present rate of decrease it will show less than for the past three years on the first of July. Now, with stocks lower in Europe than for years, there is no wonder that the friends of wheat are feeling happy. Today the decrease is expected to be fully 2,000,000 bushels, with perhaps another million added. Locally, stocks will decrease about 350,000 bushels.

The Bible Society held an interesting meeting on Sunday night at the Methodist church. Secretary Will Vannette read his report and R. G. Woodham and Robert Stanton gave each an interesting address.

Franklin Steiner, Vice President of the Free Thought Federation of America will lecture at Minerva Hall (over "The Fair") on Thursday evening May 16th at 8 o'clock. The public cordially invited. Seats free.

The Blue Lodge meeting on Monday evening was largely attended, many brethren from sister villages being in attendance. The boys like to drop in and see our W. M., Thos. Morris, exemplify the work.

The Barnsville Review notices the visit of the Misses Ella and Minnie Siberts to that city last week and says: "The young ladies are to be married in June." They visited friends in this city and left for their home in Minot this week.

E. M. Walsh has gone to Chicago in the interest of the telephone company. Edwin Plowman, the vice president, went along to keep him out of mischief. They will come back smiling in a few days and report a successful trip.

J. E. VanTuyl was in from Mentor last week. Says crops are nearly all in and mostly all up and he never saw a better stand this early in the season as it has attained. With no bad luck he thinks the town of Grove Park will have the biggest crops ever raised there.

This is what A. A. White tells the Moorhead News man: "I have just come down from Crookston. Oh, everybody is happy there as they are here with this rain, the splendid outlook for crops and the advance in wheat. The prospects are fine indeed for this portion of the country."

Northern Pacific Railroad will make rate of one fare for the round trip for the United Travelers Meeting to be held at St. Paul May 24th and 25th, tickets on sale May 23rd with final limit of May 27th. Everybody should take advantage of this cheap rate.

Contributions to the G. A. R. building fund are coming in at a very encouraging rate. Everybody seems desirous of having a hand in the matter. It is hoped that the building can be dedicated free from debt or nearly so, and it now looks as though it would not be over $100 behind, if that.

Constable Bloom went out after a Frenchman who was said to have disposed of mortgaged property one day last week. He found his man, but while catching some horses in a pasture the man gave him the slip, and Bloom only got some of the mortguged property. But he says he will get that man yet.

Meeting F. M. Brown on Monday evening a JOURNAL reporter asked him when the flour mill would commence grinding. He said: "I expect the mill to start up tomorrow morning and run right along now. The affairs of the milling association seem to be progressing favorably and will be adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned.

It must have been something of unusual importance that called out just half of the entire population of Burwell on Thursday last. When John Crawford came down that morning to get a paper-hanger and a painter to go out there and paint and paper every house in that village just exactly one-half of Burwell was in Crookston. The other half (the better half) stayed at home.

Wm. Fleming one of the leading Marais farmers, was in the city on Tuesday. He reports no damage from frost except to early garden stuff. Mr. F. usually has plenty timothy seed to sell about this time of the year but this year he has less than usual owing to the extensive dry season last year which was also tough on new sown seed. It came up all right but did not do well.

Joe Benoy has been slinging lath at the new G. A. R. building this week. The lath just seemed to jump up to be nailed, the air was literally full of shingle nails, and Joe's hammer reminded one of the snare drummer in the Salvation army—when he feels particularly enthusiastic. Dr. Kistenmacher felt so good that he kept constantly dancing a jig to the lively music of Joe's hammer—and he never missed a note.

A. Sture received two bee skips from Mr. Jouatt, of Louisville, on Monday and will try bee-raising. Mr. Jouatt bought one skip 10 years ago and now he has 22, after selling a good many every year. His annual output of honey has been better than any wheat farm in Polk county. Mr. Sture will give the business a great deal of attention and demonstrate whether or no there is money in the business here.

Mr. Carlysle, expert dairyman from the State Experimental Farm, who has been in Polk county for several weeks reports a deep interest in the dairy work wherever he has been among the farmers. He says that in some places the farmers were so enthusiastic that they began at once to plan for the establishment of a cheese factory——and there was hardly a cow in the neighborhood yet. It is said that he has been doing excellent work in his line.

Grand Forks Plaindealer:—T. J. McAdams returned last night from a trip through the western part of the state, and reports business good. He says the farmers in some sections will sow more wheat this season than ever. Owing to the early spring the land intended for summer fallowing will be plowed and put in wheat. The farmers in the vicinity of Northwood think the grain is growing too rapidly and will not stool as it would if the weather was not so warm, but a big crop is looked for.

Talking with Robert Stanton one evening last week that gentleman remarked that crop prospects being so good ought to liven up business wonderfully. "Why," said he, "you remember that a year ago this week farmers were just commencing to sow wheat and today it is all up and growing nicely. And grass never looked so well before. To-day I found some in my door yard that was nine inches long by actual measurement and all the reports I get from all over the county confirms me in the opinion that Polk county will produce one of the biggest crops ever raised here. Even if prices are no higher than last fall it will bring lots of money and I confidently believe that prices are going to be very much better than for several years."

Schmidt & Lean papered Louis Gonyea's fruit and confectionery store, and did the painting. It was an elegant job.

On Friday Annie Olson from the town of Onstad was examined before Judge Benson, adjudged insane and sent to the Fergus Falls asylum.

The Crookston base ball club expect to have a catcher as is a catcher and then the team will be complete. The boys will play ball in earnest this season.

To restore gray hair to its natural color as in youth, cause it to grow abundant and strong, there is no better preparation than Hall's Hair Renewer.

John Alderman appeared upon the streets without a cane on Monday morning for the first time in some weeks. A wrestle with rheumatism ——and John comes out ahead.

B. F. Zarracher was able to be out at the special session of the Post on Friday evening, for the first time in several weeks. The comrade had a pretty severe siege of it.

The boys had a practice game of ball on Friday afternoon—in the wind. The atmosphere moved so lively that it was difficult to make a base or catch any flies.

J. D. McPhee, who came up from the Lockhart farm on Monday morning says that the frost did not injure the growing grain any, but gardens caught it good and plenty.

The frost on Sunday night, so far as we can learn did not hurt the growing crops very materially, unless, perhaps some flax was cut down. Very little of that was up however.

W. E. McKenzie sent his little steam yacht out to the lake, last week, where she will be put in the drink and receive her engine and boiler. She will be a pretty little craft.

A heavy frost was what the early riser in Crookston observed on Monday morning. It probably fixed all the early vegetables that were not protected and what ambitious flax was above ground.

Martin Bang started last week for a trip east as far as Lake Bemidji. He expects to thoroughly inspect the country and if he finds a location that suits him, he will probably try his luck as a pioneer.

Mrs. Johnson, a poor widow who has been living on Sampson's Woodland addition, died on Wednesday, aged about 60 years. She was buried from the Swedish church on Thursday.

Mrs. V. H. Hetne, of Red Lake Falls was examined in probate court on Thursday, adjudged insane and committed to the hospital at Fergus Falls. Her husband took her to that institution on the evening train.

Pat Russell, who was out with the party that returned from Lake Bemidji, last week, reports having seen some fine farming country and thinks there will be a great boom as soon as settlers begin to go in, which he thinks will be at an early day.

Carl Nelson, who has been at Argyle at work for his uncle in a large establishment, spent the day Thursday, in the city, on his way to Minneapolis, where he has a situation engaged. Pete Beauchemin was his fellow-clerk at Argyle, and will run the Argyle branch.

The Ladies of the W. R. C. are planning for an evening of song on the evening of Memorial Day at the opera house. The songs will be of a truly patriotic nature and will be a fitting wind up of the sacred ceremonies of the day. They are now practicing for the occasion.

One of the best evidences that Ayer's Hair Vigor is an article of exceptional merit is the fact that the demand for it is constantly increasing. No one who uses this incomparable dressing thinks of trying any other preparation for the hair.

The dead body of W. Pettingill, who was one of the Red Lake pine estimators, was found one day last week in an outhouse at his residence at Staples. The cause of his death is supposed to be heart disease. He was an uncle of E. M. Stanton, formerly of this place.

Sheriff Steenerson went out to McIntosh last Thursday after an insane girl, Ellen A. Aunne, who was taken before judge Benson on the arrival of the train and committed to the asylum at Fergus Falls, to which retreat the sheriff conveyed her on the evening train.

The city dogs do not seem to respond with alacrity to the invitation to walk up to the captain's office and pay their licenses——but very few having done so as yet. Pretty quick there will go up a weeping and a wailing from the dog pound that should make some owners of the unfortunate canines that will therein be confined, get to the front——or loose his bark upon the wave. "Papa's" got to "buy the bow wow" this time or lose him.

Pains in the Side

Hood's Gave Perfect Relief—Cannot Praise It too Much.

"I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla and what it has done for me. Pains in my stomach also caused me so much suffering that I could not eat or sleep. I became

The Modern Woodmen on Friday night initiated 18 more members and seems to be in a very flourishing condition. A large number of visitors came down from Warren, Argyle, Stephens, Ada and other places and the boys had a big jollification after the business of the evening was over.

The locating committee of the Board of Regents, spent the day on Wednesday of last week looking over different sites for the new Experimental farm, and left for home in the evening. Of course they gave out nothing as to their intentions and it will be a fortnight or so before the announcement is made.

Wm. Watt, who bought the Joe Gnuche place up the river two miles, and who had put in a fine large garden, reports that the frost of Sunday night killed all his cucumbers, melons, beans and tender plants of like nature which will necessitate replanting. He is of the opinion that no grain was damaged although it was a pretty severe freeze.

Frank Brunner returned from his Hot Springs trip on Saturday fully recovered from his rheumatism. He left the Springs last fall but spent the winter with a sister in Nebraska. The charitable people of this city who chipped in to send Frank to the Hot Springs last year did a noble deed that will tell upon the life of one human being as long as he shall live.

On Wednesday, at the residence of Marvin Losey Sr., at Euclid occured the marriage of Lou Densmore, of Winetka, Ills., to Marvin Losey Jr., of this city. The bride was a resident of our city for some time and it was here that Losey became acquainted with her. Mr. Losey has grown from boyhood here in Polk county and is a bright young business man of sound principles and sterling qualities that amply befit him for the active battle of life. When Sheriff Grundyson was elected he showed his good judgment by the appointment of Mr. Losey as his deputy and no more efficient and faithful officer has served Polk county in that capacity. Mr. Losey was a candidate before the last convention for the position of sheriff——and he had a record that any man might well be proud of nothwithstanding which fact the machinations of politics defeated him and he decided to retire from the political arena and devote himself strictly to business hereafter. He soon started a banking and brokerage business at Twin Valley but sold that to the Ada banker, Mr. Mathews and then came to this city and with Mr. Buckingham, bought the two laundries, consolidating them in one which business is now being conducted by them very successfully. The groom has fitted up elegant apartments in the opera house block where they will go to housekeeping all the same like old married folks. The JOURNAL extends congratulations and welcomes the fair young bride to our city.

Comrade Kistenmacher, while he says he is unable to work any, has been one of the most enthusiastic in the whole outfit. He is around town constantly getting in little contributions of material needed, which aids in no trifling degree. If the doctor was able to take a saw and hammer it would not be as great help as the work he is doing. The boys are all doing good work and will heartily enjoy the new G. A. R. Hall when completed.

18th Year of High Success.

THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE is now entering upon its 18th year of phenomenal success.

No other family weekly in the country has had such a growth and maintained it so steadily.

It goes into every County in the United States, and has clubs of subscribers at nearly every Post-office.

It has gained this proud position solely on its merits as a highly interesting family newspaper.

FOR THE YEAR 1895.

Among the contributors to the paper for this year are:

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, the gallant old commander of the Third Corps,

Gen. James A. Beaver, hero of Cold Harbor, and ex-governor of Pennsylvania,

Gen. Russell A. Alger, ex-governor of Michigan, and Past Commander-in-Chief, Grand Army of the Republic.

Gen. Lucius Fairchild, ex-governor of Wisconsin, and Past Commander-in-Chief, Grand Army of the Republic.

Gen. James H. Kidd, 6th Mich. Cav. who commanded the famous Michigan Cav. Brigade.

The Cannoneer, whose story of Battery B, 4th U. S. Art., was admittedly the best narrative of a private soldier ever written.

Gen. O. O. Howard, who commanded successivly the Eleventh and Fourth Corps, and the Army of the Tennessee.

Gen. David M. Stanly, commander of the Fourth Corps.

Gen. Cyrus Bussey, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Interior, formerly commander of the Cavalry Division, Army of the Tennessee.

Gen. James S. Negley, who commanded "Negley's Brigade" and a divison in the Army of the Cumberland.

Gen John Pope, who commanded the Army of the Missisippi and the Army of Virginia. The last literary work done by the distinguished soldier

Gen. R. H. G. Minty, commander of the famous "Saber Brigade" of Cavalry.

Gen. Wager Swayne, [illegible] Assistant brigade in the Army of the Tennessee, Commissioner Freedmen's Bureau, etc

Gen. Aquilla Wiley, of the Army of the Cumberland, brevetted for conspicous gallantry in four great battles.

All these are highly important historical contributions.

CROOKSTON, Minn., May 8, 1895.

To the Honorable Board of Regents, of the University of Minnesota:

GENTLEMEN:

This Board of county commissioners of Polk county, in session this 8th day of May, 1895, learning that your Honorable Board of Regents are considering the advisability of locating in our county one of the experimental farms provided for by the last legislature, respectfully submit for your careful consideration the following facts and reasons why said farm should be located within Polk county:

First—The county is centrally situated on the Minnesota side in the Red River Valley, the valley noted for its extensive farming, its great variety of agricultural products and especially famous for the production of a fine grade of wheat. This section of the country is given almost exclusively to agriculture; the farmers are enterprising and progressive and would be particularly interested and benefitted by the location of such a farm close by. There is no richer soil in the state than this valley; the climate is peculiar to this section, thus adding very materially to the experiments had at the farm.

Second—The county is easily accessible by railroad from almost any direction; two transcontinental lines through the county, together with branch lines leading from Crookston, the county seat, in various directions throughout the valley.

Third—That this portion of the state has heretofore never been favored by the location of any state institution, and we feel that now is the opportune time for favorable consideration, in view of natural advantages, railroad facilities, etc., all of which we herewith respectfully submit.

Signed by Co. Commissioners
J. E. OPPEGAARD,
A. C. RINEHART,
M. E. KIRSCH,
HENRY NORLAND,

Adjourned till 2 p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment, full board present.

On motion taxes on lot 15, block 2, in L. Fletcher's addition to Crookston, for 1894, with interest thereon, was reduced from $35.05 to $25.74, on application of Herman Martin.

County treasurer instructed to pay orders of John McDonald and S. L. Collins against ditch No. 2, out of general revenue fund.

Sheriff of Polk county instructed to make levy against all elevators in the county which are delinquent, for personal property tax of of 1894, to satisfy tax judgments against same.

The report of the committee appointed at the last session of the county board to examine the proposed line of a county road, on petition of K. O. Gilkstad, et. al., having made favorable report, on motion petition was granted and commissioners road order made. County auditor instructed to record same in county road record book, giving it the name of St. Hilaire and Red Lake county road.

Committee appointed to examine proposed county road asked for by K. O. Flakne, et. al., reported in favor of laying out said road. On motion report adopted and commissioners' road order made, County auditor instructed to record same in county road record book, giving the name of Beltrami and Red River county road.

On motion appropriations made from road and bridge fund as follows:

On motion an appropriation was made from road and bridge fund in amount of $45, for purpose of reflooring bridge over Black River, near Wylie, in town of Polk Centre, said amount to be expended under the direction of supervisors of said town. Floor to be three-inch plank.

Com. Kirsch moved that the construction of the Louisville bridge be referred to road and bridge commissioners with power to act. Motion carried.

The auditing board submitted the following report:

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners, Polk Co., Minn.

Gentlemen:

We, the undersigned, constituting the board of auditors of Polk Co., without having given him previous notice, called upon the county treasurer; that we have examined his books and accounts and that we have counted the cash and vouchers found in his possession, and also ascertained the amounts deposited in the different county depositories and find the following:

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 10, 1895.

There has been for some time a concerted attempt on the part of the Washington correspondents of the most prominent Democratic papers to make it appear that whenever three or four prominent Republicans happened to be in Washington at one time, they were engaged in conspiring for or against some one of the gentlemen who have been generally mentioned as probable Republican presidential candidates, and it is the result of orders from their home offices. First, they had a conspiracy being formed against Mr. Reed and in favor of Senator Allison; then Gov. Morton was the favored individual, and their latest attempt in that line was in favor of Gov. McKinley. Needless to say that there was absolutely no foundation for any of these misrepresentations. Even granting that there are prominent Republicans who are willing to enter a conspiracy either to secure the defeat or the nomination of any of the gentlemen named, the exercise of a little common sense would make it apparent to even an ordinarily intelligent man that they would not do so more than a year before the holding of the nominating convention; also, that Washington, where they are all well known to the newspaper men, would be about the last place they would meet to arrange such a conspiracy. There is a double purpose in the false publications. First, the hope that they may help take public attention from the hopeless condition of the Democratic party, and second, the hope that they may result in stirring up ill will between the supporters of the several candidates for the Republican nomination. But there is no probability of either hope being realized. The Republican party recognizes the "cinch" it has and will not throw it away because of Democratic misrepresentation.

Attorney General Olney paid Senator Sherman a very neat compliment when after quoting some remarks by him, he said in his argument before the supreme court for a rehearsal of the income tax cases. "When I quote Senator Sherman, I cite one who is possibly as much of a statesman as any counsel who has addressed the court in this case and who, even when found defending the principle of an income tax, no one will venture to characterize as a Populist, or a Communist, or a Jacobin, or an Anarchist." Mr. Olney's argument is considered by lawyers to have been a very poor one. It was mercilessly ridiculed by Mr. Joseph H. Choate, the great New York lawyer, who spoke against the constitutionality of the income tax, and even the sedate justices could not restrain the smiles brought out by Mr. Choate's biting sarcasm at Mr. Olney's expense.

Secretary Morton is out with another single gold standard letter, which makes it clear that Mr. Cleveland's alleged rebuke given him for writing the first one was just what it was intended to be—merely an anchor cast to windward, which might be a handy thing to have in case Mr. Cleveland should be driven to abandon the single gold standard. Meanwhile he winks at Morton as he keeps up his gold standard arguments.

The report that Secretary Carlisle had positively stated that in the event of the next Democratic National convention declaring in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, he would support the Republican candidates and intimated that Mr. Cleveland would do the same, has caused much talk among the politicians. There is little doubt that Secretary Carlisle made the statement, but it was probably only intended for a bluff in the game the administration is playing against the free silver wing of the Democratic party.

There is again considerable talk of an extra session of congress to provide money for the government. The treasury deficit continues to grow at an alarming rate and none of the predictions of Secretary Carlisle of increased revenues have turned out to be true, and there is nothing in sight to indicate any improvement in the receipts. In addition to the failure of Secretary Carlisle's estimates to materialize comes the loss of revenue expected from the income tax. The exemptions made by the first decision of the supreme court cut the amount of estimated receipts from that source in half, and it is regarded as extremely probable that the decision of the full bench will wipe them entirely out, by declaring the law to be unconstitutional. In that case Mr. Cleveland will find it difficult to avoid an extra session, no matter how much he may fear one.

Woman.

We are hearing a great deal now about "the new woman," just as ten years ago there was a great to-do about "the advanced woman." There has been much talk about "woman's sphere," both from strong-minded females who would make a man of her, and from fusty and musty doctors of divinty, who would make her a smirking and ignorant nonentity. At any rate, whether woman has all the rights she wants or not, she has always attracted attention, and men have made remarks about her, from Adam's "the woman thou gavest me," down to the present. For instance: "Woman's at best a contradiction." "God's last, best gift to man." "Mistress of herself, though china fall." "When the candles are out, all women are fair." "Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing." "A child of a grandmother Eve." "What will not gentle woman dare?" "Variable as the shade by the aspen made." Man's best possession is a sympathetic wife." "Woman's lost Mark Antony the world." "Perfect woman, nobly planned." "Nature made thee to temper man." "Fantastic as a woman's mood." "Love deceives the best of woman-kind." "England is a paradise for woman." If we substitute our own country for England in the last quotation, it will come pretty near the truth. Woman ought to be friends to railroads for the latter have done more than any agency to make this country comfortable for them. The beautiful and luxurious furnishings are for the eyes of woman. The compartment sleeper is specially for her benefit. The courtesy and attention shown to woman is nowhere more marked than on our railroads, especially "the Burlington," famed for its care of women traveling alone. Remember this, ladies, and buy tickets to Chicago and St. Louis over the Burlington. Apply to your home agent, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent. St. Paul, Minn.

The Grand Forks Herald urges the organization of a base ball club at that place and says of McNeill, one of Crookston's base ball club of former days,:—Since the days of "Dud" Cardno, we have been very weak behind the bat and the position of captain, but now that McNeill, the old Fargo catcher, is a resident of Grand Forks, there should be no further trouble in that direction. As a catcher McNeil ranks with the best of them, and with him to catch Hutton, with such a team as Lycan, Walker, Adams, Garrish in the infield, and Knudson, Anderson, Turner or Sheehy in the outfield, they would make a team for Grand Forks to be proud of."

MET AND ADJOURNED.

The Manitoba Legislature Postpones Action on the School Question.

WINNIPEG, May 10.—The battle now raging over separate schools is to be further continued. Upon the reassembling of the Manitoba legislature Premier Greenway arose and in a lengthy speech moved that the house adjourn to June 13, as new points had arisen which needed further time for consideration. A. F. Martin, leader of the opposition, followed and spoke for three hours against the premier's motion to adjourn. The delay, he asserted, was simply a move to shelve the responsibility upon other shoulders and he strongly protested against such tactics. He was followed by Mr. Prendergast, who regretted the government had found it necessary to take further adjournment.

Attorney General Sifton said the remedial order, as submitted by the Dominion government, involved a return to the old school system and this they did not propose to do. There were also a great many other phases of the question and further time must be taken for consideration. The question was then put: "Shall the rules be suspended?" There was no dissenting voice and the legislature was declared adjourned to June 13.

INTERNATIONAL A. P. A.

Resolution to Form a Supreme Council Adopted at the National Convention.

MILWAUKEE, May 11.—At the morning session of the supreme council of the A. P. A. the report of the committee on an international declaration of principles and the extension of the order to any and all countries of the world, made its report through Colonel E. A. Sellers of Detroit, the chairman. The report was adopted unanimously by the supreme body. It is substantially what was sent out by the Associated Press on Wednesda. The matter now goes to the high council of Canada, known as the C. P. A., and if it is approved by that body the new conditions will be put in force at once and a supreme council of the world established. The organization will then become international, and will have supervision over the various bodies of the world. The committee on education and political action and the judiciary and executive committees made final reports and recommendations during the morning. A number of changes in political and other affairs are understood to have been made.

The platform of the order, as adopted and promulgated at the annual session a year ago at Des Moines, was reaffirmed as the principles of the organization, no change being made.

JUNIOR A. P. A.

Milwaukee Convention Organizes a Young People's Order.

MILWAUKEE, May 13.—The supreme council of the A. P. A. closed its session in this city at 3 a. m. and its last acts were among the most important of the week's work. The Junior A. P. A. was organized, which will be under the jurisdiction of the supreme council of the United States, and will reach into Canada and England. Boys and girls aged from 14 to 18 will be eligible to membership. It is proposed to teach the children patriotism, and it is understood that the society will not be of the ironclad oath-bound order. It was also decided to have a national political board to be composed of members from the different states who shall be appointed by the state councils.

George Bartholl, travelling auditor of the N. P. Express Co., was in the city on Wednesday, checking up the local office.

Warren Sheaf: Chief A. C. Schmidt and C. C. Hoch of the Crookston Fire Department were present at the meeting of the Warren Fire Department on Monday evening. They were here to talk up the Firemen's Tournament to be held at Crookston June 19 to 21st next.

The opening event at Louis Gonyea's ice cream parlor occurred on Thursday as per announcement in last issue, and although the evening was rather cool for ice cream it was largely attended. Louis says that it was lucky it was not a very warm evening or the freezers might have proved inadequate for the demand:

Those miraculous steps that led up to the temple of justice on the hill——yclept, the court house, have met with a change of heart whereby a man don't have to be an acrobat——or naturally deformed, to get up. To say that it is an improvement is drawing it mild, because now it is possible to go up the steps——before the reconstruction one had to go up on the side or take great chances of permanent lock jaw.

John Bryant and two others from Felton, Clay county, passed through the city on Friday last on their way to the Red Lake Indian Reservation, with a view to the selection of a good stock farm each. They will go via Stephen and Roseau and expect to put in the time between now and harvest time making a thorough examination of the country. They will find some excellent stock country in the Roseau region.

The Grand Forks Herald says:—"M. P. DeWolf, one of the prominent residents of Polk county, has struck a bonanza at Rainy Lake, it is reported. Some time ago Mr. DeWolf took a claim in the Rainy Lake mining district which has proved a valuable property and Mr. DeWolf has just sold one-fourth interest for $20,000. Mr. DeWolf will be remembered as a distinguished member of the late special grand jury at Crookston."

Judge Benson's handsome assistant never shirks his duty—be it ever so irksome, but always embraces every opportunity to do good—or at least such was the case on Friday afternoon of last week, when the Judge told him to take a crazy girl over to the Sherman house to supper. After much persuasion the girl started along and accompanied him as far as the crossing to the Sherman house, when she stopped and absolutely refused to go further. After using all of his persuasive powers to no avail, Lindquist quietly stepped behind the young lady, and quickly seizing her about the waist literally carried her, kicking, screaming, biting and scratching to the best of her ability, across the street and into the hotel, where she soon calmed down somewhat. It would require a cartoon to aptly portray the spectacle presented.

At the post meeting Friday evening it was decided to go ahead with the work of fixing up the new Grand Army hall and complete the whole concern as soon as possible. In the start the plans only contemplated the completion of the Post room, leaving the balance of the building to be finished off at a later date, but the boys have met with so much encouragement in their work that it was thought feasible to go ahead with the work until the building is fully completed. During a recess of five or ten minutes $45.00 in cash were handed to the Post Quartermaster—contributions from the comrades to the building fund. It is expected that the building will be completed early in June, when the old boys will have an elegant home.

FOR SALE.

A thoroughbred registered English Berkshire boar, two years old. Want to sell him so as to be able to buy another. Call at farm near Marin station, or address,

[5-7] JOHN SYLVESTER, City.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen a notice of a Berkshire hog that John Sylvester offers for sale. We well remember about two years since, when John drove over from his farm to the express office for a thoroughbred registered Berkshire pig—and a fine little animal it was that he received. At that time it looked as though $35 (express and all) for such a small lot of pork was a good round figure to pay——and it was, but John knew what he was about, for he has sold more pork since that when pork was high, than any one of his neighbors, and now he wants to sell the old fellow so he can send for another one of the same kind, not akin to his swine, and offers the hog for less than half what he is really worth. Some enterprising breeder will no doubt improve the opportunity to purchase a very choice animal.—The animal can be seen on John's farm near Marin station, or a card in the city office addressed to John Sylvester will bring you full particulars.

Thomas Nesbit has given up his residence at Mallory and now resides in Grand Forks, where his children will have advantage of the schools.

Monday John S. Dwyer and A. C. Rhinehart disposed of ten acres in section 30-151-49 to Dennis Crowley for $160. This is the cheapest sale yet made on the point.

Wednesday night the elevator at McDonald station, some ten miles east of town, burned, entailing a loss of $10,000. The elevator belonged to the Jacobi Elevator Co., and was in charge of Wm. Teare. The building was insured for $2,700 and $3,000 was carried on grain. The presumption is that the building was struck by lightning.

Euclid Items.

Our genial blacksmith, E. C. Murney, made a business trip to Crookston Wednesday of last week.

Henry Biever and wife visited friends in Crookston, Wednesday.

N. J. Nelson, collector for the McCormick Harvester Co., was in town last week, looking after the company's interests.

Mr. Barnes, Warren's leading butcher, was down last Wednesday with a load of choice meats. Mr. Barnes will make regular trips hereafter, Wednesday of each week, and will carry a full line of meats.

W. J. Brown, of Warren, was down on business, Thursday.

Constable Bloom spent Thursday night in town on his way from Jadis to Crookston.

Miss Gertie Millot, of Georgetown, Minn., spent the latter part of last week with her friend, Nellie Chapin. She departed for Argyle, Monday, but will return soon to spend the summer with her sister, Mrs. Sam Leeson, near Bockersville.

Mr. and Mrs. Chardhart, of the Tarbell farm, north of Angus, were in town, Thursday, looking for seed grain, which seems to be a scarce article in that section.

Lewis Giese and John Tiedeman were among the Euclidites who drove to Crookston, Thursday. Fred Myers and Matt Biever were also down the following day.

I. U. Jennings, of Crookston, registered at Mrs. Nelson's hotel, last week.

B. S. Chapin, of Warren, shook hands with old friends on his way to Crookston, Saturday.

A company of emigrants, en route from Fergus Falls to Thief River Falls, were camped south of town the fore part of the week. Our village sports were given a chance to get rid of some of their surplus trading stock.

Miss Lillie Losey came home from Crookston Tuesday morning, to spend a few days with her parents.

Mr. George Easby came over from Grand Forks, Tuesday, and will probably spend the greater part of the summer in our midst.

Leslie Stinson was over Tuesday, from Grand Forks, in the interest of the Aultman, Taylor Machine Co.

Wm. Davidson and Wm. Cutelle, went to Crookston on Monday night to attend a meeting of Crookston Lodge A. F. and A. M.

Ex County Treas. Case, of Warren, was down Tuesday. He was here for the purpose of organizing a corps of the Modern Woodmen, the arrangements for which are not yet completed.

THIEF RIVER FALLS ITEMS

[From the Press.]

A. C. Schmidt, of Crookston, was in the city a short time on Monday.

Mrs. P. J. Russell of Crookston is visiting relatives in this city and vicinity.

H. E. Mussey dined with radishes on the side taken from his own garden last Monday.

A. R. Erickson, of Crookston, was in the city Wednesday looking to his business interests in the firm of J. Moreh & Co.

Nicholas Nelson, of Norden, returned last week from Moorhead where he has been in attendance at the Normal school for some time.

F. H. Kratkā returned Monday from an absence of couple of weeks in St. Paul, Minneapolis and other points. Mr. Kratka has been negotiating with capitalists for the sale of a part of his millsite property.

Mayor Kretzschmar has just completed the extensive improvements in his water power mentioned in the Press last week. The dam is now one of the best in the Northwest and is constructed as to give the full benefit of the power. The water has risen in the pond and the mills can resume their run after about four day's idleness.

Notice For Bids.

From the date of this notice until the 23d day of May, the board of supervisors of the town of Fairfax, will receive bids for lowering a certain town ditch; specifications of which can be seen at the town clerk's office. The board reserves the right to reject any all bids.

Dated May 8th, A. D. 1895.

O. H. RICHARDSON,
[4-5] Chairman Town Board.

EAST GRAND FORKS ITEMS.

[From the Review.]

Attorney Foote, of Crookston was doing business in the city yesterday.

The Great Northern bridge over the Red River is undergoing extensive repairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Saseen returned from their honey moon trip on Wednesday evening. For the present they will make their home in Grand Forks.

D. P. R. Strong has probably the most advanced garden in town. He has peas, beans, corn, parsnip, carrots and beets well above ground while his early potatoes are six inches high. How is this for the first week in May?

There was a slight accident on the river Saturday evening caused by a barge attached to the steamer Grand Forks running foul of a paddle wheel of a smaller steamer that was elevating wheat in the center of the river into the cars on the bridge.

Hicks predicts the heaviest down pour of rain during the month of June that has visited the country for years, and urges all sections where it is possible, to plant crops that can be matured by these rains to take advantage of them. You want to make a note of this. Corn planted now will get June rain to make it grow.

Foote Bros., the singing evangelists, concluded their labor here last evening. Their meetings since the first have been well attended and much good has been accomplished and where ever their lot may be cast the coming summer we bespeak for them a hearty welcome. By their ernest unassuming manner and friendly disposition they have made many friends in this city during their short stay.

Mrs. Thos. Campbell is reported quite sick at her home in the fourth ward.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

PLAN OF REORGANIZATION AGREED ON IN BERLIN.

Great Northern Will Guarantee Bonds to the Extent of Two Hundred Millions, Receiving a Large Block of Stock in Return—Rates Will Go Up.

BERLIN, May 20.—For the past four days meetings of the United German Northern Pacific committees have been considering the proposals of Ed Adams, the representative of the Deutsch Bank of Berlin, for the reorganization of the Northern Pacific, and they have finally authorized him to carry out his plan, which the bondholders will be recommended to accept.

The first point of the Adams reorganization plan is the foreclosure of the old company and the formation of a new company under special arrangements for this purpose.

Secondly, the new company is to issue shares to the amount of $100,000,000 and a maximum of $200,000,000 gold bonds, free of taxation. A sufficient amount of these bonds is to be reserved in order to replace the present first mortgage bonds later and $3,000,000 of bonds are to be reserved in order to acquire and for new construction at a maximum charge of $20,000 per mile. The new bonds will be secured by a mortgage lien on the whole Northern Pacific system, including the St. Paul and Northern Pacific, and will bear interest partly at 4 and partly at 3 per cent, all under the same mortgage.

Thirdly, the capital and interest of the new bonds are to be guaranteed unconditionally by the Great Northern by endorsing each bond, the Great Northern receiving in return half of the stock of the new company.

The reorganization and the raising of the necessary working capital is to be secured by a syndicate headed by Messrs. J. Pierpont Morgan and the Deutsch Bank.

RATES WILL GO UP.

One Result of the Deal Between Jim Hill and the Northern Pacific.

NEW YORK, May 22.—President James J. Hill of the Great Northern railway, who arrived from Europe Saturday, conferred with the Northern Pacific reorganization committee and then started for Chicago. Previous to his departure Mr. Hill said in an interview that Collis P. Huntington did not put the 10 per cent estimate on increase in business a bit too high as a result of the deal between these two companie. Rates will be put up slightly all along the line and many expenses cut off. Moreover, it means that the Canadian Pacific will be given a lively race in the building up and development of the Northwest.

"Will not the Canadian Pacific railway be a dangerous competitor?" he was asked.

"Not in the least," answered Mr. Hill. "We can compete with any transcontinental line in the matter of fast time. We have nothing to fear from Canada."

Speaking of the proposed new lines of steamships between Japan and the Pacific coast, Mr. Hill said:

"Now that the war between China and Japan is virtually over, I expect that there will be a big industrial development in those two nations, and the United States will have as a consequence a good deal of business with them. If such a line of steamships is established, it will have to have new ships for fast service, like the new Atlantic liners, and of course that would take some time, but it will come."

HE DECEIVED THE PEOPLE

AND IS IN THE PENITENTIARY FOR A YEAR.

[From the Lowell Morning Citizen.]

At Atlantic, Iowa, on May 7, C. M. Ailor, alias "Crip." Ailor, was convicted of deceiving people by selling a worthless compound, which he represented to be Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was sentenced by Judge Macy to one year at hard labor in the Iowa State Penitentiary. Ailor's methods were those of a traveling fakir. He has been traveling through Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa, making stands of a day or more in each town, and representing himself as an agent under salary from C. I. Hood & Co., and selling his concoction at one dollar or fifty cents per bottle, giving with each sale various other worthless articles. Citizens of Griswold, Iowa, became suspicious and ascertaining from a druggist that Ailor's compound was not Hood,s Sarsaparilla, but merely colored water, had him arrested. Three indictments were found against him, the jury convicted him after only thirty minutes deliberation, and he was sentenced as above. This incident suggests the wisdom of purchasing medicines only of reputable dealers whom you know. Hood's Sarsaparilla is never sold by pedlers, and such offering it should be at once reported to the authorities, or to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

WELL, NOT EXACTLY.

We clip the following from an exchange which shows what distorted views one can easily get:

"Judge Ives, of Crookston, is now having his inning. A special grand jury has been at work and indictments have been found against sixty men who were against the judge when the impeachment proceedings were being carried on last winter. The judge is evidently after revenge, not justice, and if such proves to be the case, the Supreme Court should sit down on him good and hard."

The work of that grand jury was all done before the impeachment proceedings were ever thought of, and the only correct thing about the above article is the probable fact that the sixty referred to would, no doubt have rejoiced if the judge had been impeached.

A Superfluous Patent.

In the list of patents issued from the patent office last week, we notice one by a Minnesota man, a patent "attachment for plug tobacco." In this day and age of the world an acquired "attachment for plug tobacco" is sufficient to make life a burden to all who don't happen to have the "attachment," and we can see no earthly use for a patent on the habit. Why, once upon a time we had an office boy, a mere kid in years, who by a simple acquired "attachment for plug tobacco," could drown everybody in his vicinity and not half try, and he didn't need any patent attachment, nor does anybody who will industriously commence the habit of chewing and keep religiously at it, no matter how sick it makes one at first. A patent "attachment for tobacco," indeed! It is wholly superfluous.

Found in the Red River.

Grand Forks Herald:—Yesterday morning the body of a man was found floating in the river at Barnard's ferry, some nine miles south of the city. Frank Barnard came to the city and notified the authorities here and Coroner Rounsevell was telegraphed for. Not hearing from the coroner, Judge Brown, Deputy Sheriff Collins and Undertaker McDonald went out early last evening and brought the remains to the city. They learned that the remains were those of a young man who had been twice an inmate of the Minnesota asylum and for some time past has been living with two brothers in southern Polk county. He was evidently unbalanced in mind and his friends have been obliged to keep the strictest watch over him. Friday he disappeared from his home and his brothers have been searching for him until yesterday afternoon, when they discovered that the drowned man was their missing brother. It was supposed that he had probably committed suicide while in one of his insane freaks. Dr. Rounsevell, the coroner, arrived from Larimore last evening and after investigation decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The two brothers will arrive this morning and arrange for the funeral.

BRULE SURVEY.

Major Sears and Party at Work on Routes For the Superior Canal.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., May 18.—Major Sears, the government engineer, has gone to Brule river to resume work on the survey of the proposed canal connecting the Mississippi river with Lake Superior. One survey has been completed and now another will be made. The major has a crew of 15 picked men. He will remain a few days and then leave the work to his assistant. It is expected the survey will be completed in four weeks.

SEVEN MEN KILLED.

Terrible Boiler Explosion at West Bingham, Pa.

WEST BINGHAM, Pa., May 18.—The bodies of eight men, horribly mangled, scalded and disfigured, were picked out from the ruins of the Pack, Haskeel & Cobbe saw mill here, the victims of the explosion of the boiler in the mill. Five were killed and two of the others have since died.

Improving the Missouri.

FORT PIERRE, S. D., May 21.—The government steamer James E. McPherson has arrived at this port from Sioux City. She will engage in the work of removing willows, etc., gotten out by contractors at different points along the river to this city and vicinity, where they will be used in the improvement of the river.

Strayed.

From my premises in this city, on or about May 2d one red cow with rope on her horns. The finder will please call on or address,

THE COMMERCIAL UNION.

The directors of the Commercial Union met on Friday evening and elected the following officers: President, S. W. Vance; Secretary, P. J. McGuire; treasurer, Lewis Ellington; a committee consisting of C. O. Christianson, A. Chabot and C. H. Seake were appointed to secure a hall for meeting purposes. P. M. Ringdel was made an honorary member and was appointed with the secretary to draw up resolutions to be presented to the board of regents in relation to the location of the state experimental farm at Crookston.

The Journal Editor's Father.

Aaron Cooke met with quite a severe accident at his residence in Fairfax on Saturday afternoon. For about a week he had not been feeling well and was quite weak and while going out of the kitchen door he in some way managed to fall off the steps, and could not get up. He managed to attract the attention of his daughter, Mrs. Bartlett, who was alone in the house at the time but she being unable to get him up alone was obliged to summon help from the field when he was taken up and carried into his room where he has been confined to his bed ever since. Since the above was in type the doctors have pronounced it paralysis and the condition of the patient is critical.

MARRIED.

In this city on Thursday May 16th at the residence of Jas. Creighton, Esq. Judge Holt spoke the words that unite for life John Johnson of St. Hilaire and Alma Wulbeck, of this city.

Debs Will Investigate.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 20.—President Debs of the American Railway union will leave in a day or two for St. Cloud and Grand Forks to make a personal investigation of the cases of the five American Railway union men who have been discharged from the service of the Great Northern railroad.

FIVE AGAINST IT.

The Famous Income Tax Law Now a Thing of the Past.

SHIRAS CHANGES HIS VIEWS.

The Opinions of Harlan and White Cause General Comment.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The income tax law, which has received so large a share of the public attention since the beginning of the first regular session of the Fifty-third congress, is a thing of the past. After being twice heard in the United States supreme court, it was finally decided unconstitutional. There were four dissenting opinions delivered in these cases, one each by Justices Harlan, Brown, Jackson and White, showing that the court had stood five to four against the law. Inasmuch as one of these dissenting opinions was handed down by Justice Jackson, and as he was absent at the first hearing, when the court divided evenly on the question of sustaining the law on all points except those as to the tax on incomes from rents and bonds, it follows that one of the members of the court who at first pronounced for the law, except on those two points, changed his attitude after the second argument. There is very little question that Justice Shiras is the justice who changed his views on these points. He made no announcement either now or when the first opinion was delivered as to his position.

Cause General Comment.

The opinions of Justices Harlan and White were concluded in language so vigorous and were so emphatic in their arraignment of the majority as to cause very general comment. Both justices indicated their belief that the ruling opinion was revolutionary and intimated that serious consequences might ensue. Justice Harlan suggested the necessity for amending the constitution in view of the opinion. The courtroom was packed during the entire three hours when the opinions were being delivered.

The unexpected event of the day was in the appearance of Justice Jackson. He had announced after casting his vote last Saturday week that he would return on the following Monday to Tennessee, but it appears that instead he went to Philadelphia to consult a specialist on internal diseases. He left the bench immediately after delivering his opinion and it is understood will now proceed South. He delivered his opinion from notes.

Conclusions of the Court.

The conclusions of the court were as follows:

First—We adhere to the opinion already announced, that taxes on real estate, being indisputably direct taxes, taxes on the rents or income of real estate are equally direct taxes.

Second—We are of opinion that taxes on personal property or on the income of personal property are likewise direct taxes.

Third—The tax imposed by sections 27 to 37 inclusive of the act of 1894, so far as it falls on the income of real estate and on personal property, being a direct tax, within the meaning of the constitution, and therefore unconstitutional and void, because not apportioned according to representation, all those sections constituting one entire scheme of taxation, are necessarily invalid.

The decrees hereinbefore entered in this court will be vacated. The decrees below will be reversed and the cases remanded with instructions to grant the relief prayed.

Sections 27 to 37 of the tariff act of 1894, referred to in the conclusions of the court in the opinion, are all the sections of the act relating to the income tax, so that the entire income act is declared void specifically.

Rush to Roseau County.

A dispatch from Stephen says:—The greatest rush of emigrants to the new county of Roseau ever known here is now taking place. Hundreds of people with their all are now passing through here on their way to the new county. They come from all parts of the United States but most of them from North or South Dakota. Your correspondent has visited this new county, and is fully convinced that it is a splendid county and will soon excel a great many of the older counties of the state. The farming land is rich and productive, and a better place for stock raising could not be found, as the grass grows as high as six feet in some places, and plenty of good water is found. This new county was formerly part of Kittson.

CONCERT.

By a troupe from Hope Academy, Moorhead, Minn. on Thursday June 13th 8:00 p. m. at the Swedish Lutheran church. An excellent program will be rendered, consisting of Vocal and Instrumental Solos, Duets, selections by a Double Quartet, etc. Admission 25 cents, Children 10 cents. Come one and all! [6-9]

ORDERED TO CEASE.

All Work in Connection With the Income Tax Stopped.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Commissioner Miller of the internal revenue bureau has sent this telegram to all collectors of internal revenue:

"Income tax law declared unconstitutional by supreme court. Stop all work in connection therewith and send to this office at once under seal all books, assessment lists, returns and records in your office or hands of deputies relating to income tax."

The commissioner had for some time been prepared for an adverse decision of the court, but, nevertheless, it was to him a matter of deep regret. He believed in the constitutionality of the law and was inclined to regard the decision of the court as one which in its adverse effects

Might Be Very Far Reaching.

In his opinion fully $35,000,000 or $40,000,000 would have been collected during the first year from incomes had the entire law been sustained, and even after it had been shorn of the rent provision at least $15,000,000 and probably $20,000,000 would have been collected. As soon as possible those persons who have already paid their tax will be notified. He will refund all such moneys on application of the payees.

Although the decision of the court will materially cut down the anticipated revenues of the government it is not thought that it will necessitate an extra session of congress, except some unlooked for contingencies arise.

Ex-President Harrison's Views.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Ex-President Harrison was asked during the afternoon for his opinion concerning the decision declaring the income tax to be unconstitutional. He said he had really no opinion to express beyond saying that "in view of the mangled state of the bill it was better it had met the fate it did at the hands of the United States supreme court."

REBUKED MEADE.

Cleveland Retires Him and at the Same Times Gives Him a Roast.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The president has retired Admiral Meade, on his own application, and in doing so has administered a severe rebuke to him. The admiral's application was made to the secretary of the navy May 9, and by him forwarded to the president, who returned it to the navy department with this endorsement:

Executive Mansion, May 20, 1895.

The within recommendation is approved and Read Admiral Richard W. Meade is hereby retired from active service in the navy pursuant to section 1333 of the revised statutes. The president regrets exceedingly that the long active service of this officer, so brilliant in its early stages and so often marked by honorable incidents, should, at its close, be tarnished by conduct at variance with a commendable purpose and inconsistent with the example which an officer in his rank should furnish to submission to the restraints of wholesome discipline and manifest propriety.

(Signed) GROVER CLEVELAND.

Gail Hamilton's Condition Serious.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Secretary Gresham is better. He passed a very comfortable night and is resting easily. Representative Hitt is also better though his improvement is very slight. Miss Mary Abigail Dodge is much worse. Her condition is regarded as very critical, and made more serious in view of her advanced age. She has been sinking steadily for some hours.

Declared a Dividend.

BOSTON, May 21.—At the directors' meeting of the Tamarck Mining company a dividend of $4 a share was declared, payable June 25, to stockholders of record May 31. This makes a total of dividends declared and paid to date of $4,270,000.

Go to Jail for a Year.

WAPAKONETA, O., May 21.—Judge Mooney sentenced John C. Hussey, ex-clerk of courts of Shelby county for presenting false claims, to the county jail for one year. There were six indictments and the other five were nolled.

New York Legislature Adjourns.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 17.—The legislature adjourned without date shortly after 1 o'clock.

WHEAT ADVANCES.

The Continued Rise in Price of the Cereal a Sure Sign of Prosperity.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The country bought wheat with a vengeance and with hardly a setback prices rose over 2 cents a bushel, closing strong at the top. The boom was simply the outcome of a general awakening of speculative energies all over the country. Cotton, oil and stocks have had their turn and wheat is now coming in for its share. Professional traders who scalp the market daily and know the ins and outs pretty thoroughly, bowed before the bull storms, and when there were outside orders in the market trade stood still for local operators realized the futility of trying to follow out ordinary influences which the mad rush of buying kept up. The bears ran like sheep in a storm. In fact, the speculative public may be said to have owned the wheat markets of the country. Brokers had as many orders as they could attend to, and private wires in all directions were kept hot carrying orders. July wheat opened at 70⅛ cents, sold off to 69⅞ cents, and then, with a few pauses,

STARCH OUT OF COIN.

HIS FALLACIES KNOCKED HIGHER THAN GILDEROY'S KITE.

Convincing and Exhaustive Reply Written in a Pleasing and Popular Style—Logical Answers to the Illogical Propositions of its Prototype Given in Geo. E. Roberts' "Coin at School in Finance"—The Work is Recommended by the Honest Money League of Illinois.

(Chicago Tribune.)

The following resolution, passed last Saturday night by such a respectible organization as the Honest Money League of Illinois, is one of the highest compliments that could be paid a book on the silver question just issued from the Chicago Press:

"Resolved, by the Executive committee of the Honest Money League of Illinois, upon the unanimous recommendation of the committee on literature, that Geo. E. Roberts' book entitled "Coin at School in Finance,' published by the W. B. Conkey Co., Chicago, be, and the same is hereby most heartily recommended to all auxiliary leagues in this state as a most convincing and exhaustive reply to 'Coin's Financial School.' It is written in a pleasing and popular style and its circulation should be encouraged."

The above resolution was unanimously adopted.

JACOB W. RICHARDS,
Secretary.

The book which has received this commendation is a pamphlet of six chapters and 168 pages, closely resembling, both externally and internally, Coin's Financial School. It consists of a series of dialogues worked up into the form of a school and illustrated with a profusion of cuts, some of which are of a satirical character. The first two chapters treat of the alleged decline in prices since 1873; the third of the history of bimetalism in the United states; the fourth of the effects of free and unlimited coinage of silver, if it shall be permitted; the fifth of answers to objections; and the sixth of miscellaneous questions and answers.

In respect of literary style and logical force and directness the book affords a striking and pleasing contrast with its prototype. In passing from Mr. Harvey's book to Mr. Roberts' book one passes from darkness to light, from nonsense to sense and from deceit and trickery to sincerity and honesty. The crowning excellence, of the work, however, is its perspicuity. One cannot read Harvey's book five minutes without feeling that he has dropped a stitch somewhere; and if by going back several pages and reading them over again he can pick it up he is fortunate. Mr. Roberts' book, on the other hand, is absolutely clear from beginning to end and the reader becomes increasingly interested in its statements and arguments as he proceeds.

SCENE LAID IN IOWA.

As to the literary plan of 'Coin at School in Finance," the scene is laid at Eagle Grove, Iowa, instead of Chicago. In the depot hotel of the town one evening of the present spring there was casually gathered four persons—a brick-layer, a locomotive engineer and some travelling salesmen. The party naturally fell to discussing the crops, the weather, the prevailing prices and the outlook. One of the travelling salesmen happened to remark that "according to Coin" prices could go no way but down on account of the demonetization of silver. A farmer took him up, and the discussion that followed took up the evening. The next day and thereafter, the same men and others continued the discussion in the opera house of Eagle Grove, with Judge B. P. Birdsell, of the district court, as chairman and instructor. No better illustration of the simple, direct and unanswerable style of the book can be given than is found in the following opening passage of the second day's discussion. Said the travelling man:

"It's Not Stretching the literal truth to say that the train service of The North-Western Line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago is unsurpassed in the United States. The appointments of that Rolling Palace—the North-Western Limited—are the most complete, comfortable and superb that any railway in this Great America has yet offered the public.—The Decorator, Minneapolis, Minn.

"INDUCEMENTS" TO RETAILERS.

Goods and Valuable Articles Given For the Price of the Goods.

"Something will have to be done to discourage 'inducements' to retailers," declared a wholesale grocer. "A good pure food law could do some good. These inducements move the cupidity of the retailer, and the consumer suffers by having imposed upon him inferior or adulterated goods."

"What do you mean by inducements?"

The grocer handed to the inquirer a handsomely illustrated card on which were the words:

"Free with 500 pieces of Jolloppy's (that's not the name) chewing gum, the handsome full gilt clock here pictured at a cost to the retailer of $3—that is, you get $5 worth of gum at retail and a $3 clock all for $3."

"If the manufacturer stopped at chewing gum, the demoralization to the trade would be slight, but this get something for nothing idea is stimulated all along the line. It is bad enough in various lines of tobacco, but in the line of ground spices and coffee it is absolutely pernicious. It's a lucky consumer that gets any genuine ground spices now, or any goods that may be cheapened by mixing. Mustard is mixed with sawdust and made hot in the mouth by the addition of cayenne pepper. So it is with other things.

"Here's a catalogue of a manufacturer who unblushingly labels his book 'absolutely pure spices.' There are about 150 different articles named in it as prizes to grocers who buy these spices in greater or less quantity. Among the inducements are musical boxes, firearms, furniture of all kinds, stoves, sewing machines, store fixtures, show cases, clocks, cyclopedias, bicycles, baby carriages, lawn mowers, mackintoshes, crockery, rugs, silverware, watches and clocks, gold headed canes, umbrellas, and so on up to delivery wagons and two seated carriages. Here's the inducement in the last named:

"'With 750 pounds ground spices, absolutely pure, any assortment of allspice, mustard, ginger, pepper, cinnamon, cloves, etc., at 25 cents a pound, we give one of these carriages free. In other words, 750 pounds of spices and the carriage all for $187.50.'

"The drug trade is afflicted with this same sort of thing and perhaps to as great an extent as the grocery trade. There ought to be some way of heading it off."—Indianapolis News.

LEGAL INSANITY.

Should "Uncontrollable Impulse" Bar Criminal Conviction?

The New York Law Journal recently contained an editorial article favoring a modification of the test of insanity in criminal cases. The ability to distinguish between right and wrong in reference to the act committed and to know that it was wrong is a standard of mental capacity required in New York to render a person responsible for crimes committed by him.

The Law Journal argues in favor of grading punishment according to the mental condition of offenders who may be "partially insane." Many alienists, including Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, do not recognize "partial insanity," saying that a person is either sane or insane. The state in which the mind acts correctly as to its judgment, but the will is controlled by some impulse which the mind cannot master, is not recognized in many criminal courts, because it has been found that the excuse of irresistible impulse led to too great a number of acquittals in cases where defendants were really guilty of serious offenses.

In civil cases it is easier to deal with persons whose minds are so affected that they cannot come to correct conclusions as to certain subjects. The issues at stake are frequently less important, and it is possible to learn whether a particular act was done under the influence of the delusion or mental weakness which affects the person concerned.

First Foreign Salute to Our Flag.

In Quiberon bay there was a great French fleet under the command of Admiral La Motte-Picquet, and from him Paul Jones obtained what he claimed to be the first foreign salute ever given the American flag. It is true that the governor of one of the Dutch West India islands had got in trouble the year before for saluting the American flag, but La Motte-Picquet's was undoubtedly the first direct and unqualified salute. It was not obtained without some address as well as boldness on Paul Jones' part, as the alliance between France and the United States was not then signed, but when the French admiral agreed to salute he did it courteously, paying the compliment of having his guns already manned when Paul Jones sailed through the fleet.—Molly Elliot Seawell's "Paul Jones" in Century.

The Pompadour Roll.

A rumor comes from Paris that parted hair is not to be the fashion much longer; that even more trying still the pompadour roll surrounding the face is to be the thing. If this be so, then for a return of the rats, those curious abominations of our mothers' time over which the hair is brushed, will once more be used. With the hair brushed back in this fashion it is to be arranged in the shape of a figure 8, quite high at the back of the head, and the Psyche knot, which has been with us long enough to become modified into quite a graceful arrangement, will have to go.

The Trilby Waist.

A new wrinkle in designs is the "Trilby" waist, which is trimmed with close bands, laid over the fullness of a plaited or gathered bodice. Trilby herself wore only two of these decorations, which crossed in front, and this adherence to the model is absolute, other forms of trimming filling up deficiencies and making the crossed bands appear like decoration.—New York Advertiser.

MORTGAGE SALE.

(First Pub. May 2d, 1895.)

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a mortgage containing power of sale dated October 17th, 1889, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota, October 22d 1889, in book 42, of mortgages, page 118, whereby Carl Johnsen and Karl Johnsen, his wife, mortgageors, mortgaged to the Middlesex Banking Company, mortgagee, the East Half of the Northwest Quarter and East Half of the Southwest Quarter of Section Thirty-one (31) in Township One hundred and forty-eight (148), of Range Forty-three (43), in said Polk County, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured thereby, or any part thereof, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date hereof, $331 to which amount should be added the taxes on said property paid by said mortgagee, amounting with interest, as provided in said mortgage, to $12.60, making the total amount claimed to be due at the date hereof on said mortgage $343.85.

Now notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises sold at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or his deputy, Saturday, June 15th 1895, at ten o'clock, A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Crookston in said county, to pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Christian O. Espe and Jessie Espe, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, at 4:30 o'clock p. m., in book 47 of mortgages, at page 9.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of six per centum (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and eleven (11) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment dated April 14th, A. D. 1892, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 448 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000, and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1115.00 being the sum of $1000, principal, and $115.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southwest quarter (SW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty-six (46), containing one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure.

Dated April 1st, A. D. 1895.

GREELEY AS A BOY.

HE LOVED TRUTH AND WAS WALLOPED FOR HIS INTEGRITY.

The Famous Journalist Acquired Knowledge Early Through Great Tribulation. Scaggs, "a Child of the Devil," Was Kind to the Boy Who Wanted to Learn.

The oft told and praiseworthy story about the sterling quality of George Washington's truthfulness when a lad and the straightforward confession, "I cannot tell a lie, father; I did it with my little hatchet," that have made the Father of His Country the idol of boyish hearts stands not alone as an example of American youthful integrity.

Another lad, when punishment as keenly dreaded confronted him and a father more irate than George's parent is ever pictured to have been, stood boldly forth when questioned and acknowledged himself the culprit. This other boy was Horace Greeley, and the story is an interesting one.

It happened in the town of Erie, Pa., where Horace spent a great part of his boyhood. The lad was unusually precocious and at the age of 10 years was considered the prodigy of the town. He was a great reader and eagerly devoured anything in the way of useful literature that came in his way. His father was a poor man, and Horace had not many chances for mental culture, but so keen was the boy's love of study and ambition for knowledge that he used to visit by stealth an old neighbor who possessed a handsome and finely stocked library. This old fellow was, to the mind of Horace's father, the essence of all that was irreligious. His name was Scaggs—Nathaniel Scaggs—and despite his quiet method of living and his acknowledged honesty of character he remained, to Mr. Greeley's mind, a vile and hardened sinner. Old Scaggs rarely attended any place of worship and on pleasant Sunday afternoons could always be seen sitting in his front garden boldly smoking his corncob pipe. These were the causes of Mr. Greeley's condemnation, and he dubbed the old scholar "a child of the devil."

But Scaggs had taken a fancy to the bright faced Horace and invited the boy to his home. After the first visit and a glimpse of that wonderful storehouse of books Horace could not stay away. He knew his father hated old Scaggs and called him a "lost soul," and he realized if his visits to their neighbor reached his ears that his father would instantly prohibit his calls.

At the same time old Scaggs' kindness had won his heart. His wisdom had gained his admiration, and he felt the injustice of his father's dislike toward his old friend. Besides the old man was teaching him Latin and opening daily to the boyish mind fields of thought and speculation and pointing out with care and patience philosophic truths so eagerly listened to by young Horace.

Once in the middle of a sentence of Cicero, while the two were engaged in their daily reading the boy stopped short and exclaimed: "Mr. Scaggs, my father doesn't like you. He says you are a child of the devil."

The old man was silent for a moment and then burst out laughing.

"Why does your father dislike me, Horace?" he asked.

"Well, you don't go to meeting, you know, sir, and then you smoke your pipe on Sunday."

"Yes, I do, my boy, but I did not know that was a great sin. I am sorry your father dislikes me, my son. Let us go on with Cicero." And the reading continued. That night Horace Greeley made up his mind to speak to his father and make a plea for old Scaggs' friendship. Accordingly, just before bedtime Horace accosted his father:

"Father, is not God forbearing?" he asked.

"Yes, my son. Why do you ask?"

"Does he not forgive much to those who are kind and intelligent?"

"Why do you ask?" still inquired the father.

"Well, I think Mr. Scaggs is both kind and intellectual, and I somehow hoped the good Lord would overlook his smoking and not going to meeting." The old man at once grew stern, questioned young Horace regarding his solicitude for their neighbor, and eventually the secret of the boy's visits and studies was brought to light. Mr. Greeley forbade his son to go near old Scaggs again, denounced Latin books as impious reading and threatened the lad with the strap.

Horace Greeley, after he got to be the editor of a big New York newspaper, used to tell the story with much feeling.

"After being forbidden old Scaggs' companionship," he said, "I went and told the old man about it. He seemed grieved, but told me to obey my father. The next day I was with my teacher at the usual hour, and after promising him I would tell my father of my visit our lesson went on as usual. Then I went home and told my dad, and he walloped me! For a whole week I continued my visits to my old preceptor, and each night I received a thrashing—more severe each time! At the end of the week I had to eat my meals standing up. Then my father locked me up for a few days, and we left Erie for Vermont in less than a fortnight. Yes. I slipped out and bade old Scaggs goodby. The old man was tearful and gave me the worn volume of Cicero as a parting gift. Of course I got a licking for that visit also, but I had seen my old friend and had my beloved Latin reader buttoned tightly beneath my waistcoat. I honored my father always," Mr. Greeley concluded, "but I never forgave him those lashings. He was a blue Presbyterian and could not tolerate Sabbath breaking. He was a mighty good man, but when I think of those whippings"—and then Mr. Greeley used to squirm, much to the delight of his listeners.—New York Recorder.

WHAT DREAMS ARE.

SIGNIFICATION OF VISIONS THAT ARE BEHELD IN SLEEP.

Scientists and Soothsayers Unsatisfactory In Their Attempted Explanations—Some of the Interpretations Given by the Sages of Long Ago.

Scientists explain that dreams are but reflections of our waking thoughts and actions. We who dream know it is not so. We know that sleep brings visions not of places and things and people we have seen, but of strange, weird images and happenings that our mortal eyes never saw and meditations never conjectured.

The Bible tells of the interpreting of dreams, and ancient experts divined according to principles now unknown. Those wise seers believed in dreams as foretellers of future events, of good and evil to the dreamer, whose sleeping hours were filled with visions of delight, or mayhap with phantoms of horror.

The sage, Abracadabra, in his immortal treatise on the signification of dreams, says among a host of wise and witty conclusions: "It is fortunate to dream of little pigs, but unfortunate to dream of big bullocks." It may occur to the feeble intellect groping for cause and effect that this can be explained by the self evident fact that "little pigs" are harmless, but "big bullocks" are the opposite.

"If you dream you have lost a tooth, you will soon lose a friend," remains prophetic. Indeed the loss of a molar or an incisor is to be deplored, and peradventure the first premonitory twinge of an exposed nerve has caused the dream. But how explain "If you dream your house is on fire, you will soon have news from a far country," and "to dream of clear water is a sign of grief?"

Perhaps the modern system of interpretation may be summed up in the terse aphorism that "dreams go by contraries." So if you dream of receiving money you will likely lose it; if you dream of kisses, fond and sweet, you have blows in store. "If you dream of the dead, you will hear from the living."

It is more conducive to comfort of mind, on the whole, to return to the ancient sages. Abracadabra may again be quoted as declaring that the "most fortunate of all dreams is to dream that you are up to your neck in mud and mire." But, again, "to dream that you stand naked in the streets is a sure sign of trouble, distress and perplexity." Not to be wondered at sure, even in a dream!

Let us go back still further and consult a much older authority than Abracadabra—the wise and learned Tyroscophorus. He gives a long list of significations, embracing almost every known tree and plant, vegetable, flowers and fruits. To dream of a leafless tree is a sign of great sorrow; of a tree without branches, despair and suicide; the yew and the elder mean sickness to the young and death to the old.

"For a maiden to dream of stripping the bark from any tree is a sign of loss of character," declares the hoary old sage, for a married woman it means bereavement. Indeed Tyroscophorus divides his significations according to the sex and condition of the dreamers. Thus to a man the stripping of the bark portends an increase of fortune. The lime tree means a voyage across the ocean; the elder tree is auspicious and the fir tree more so; to dream of the oak portends long life and prosperity—fitting is this, decidedly—and the ash tree foretells a long journey.

Only limited by the number of known shrubs are their significations. To dream of dock leaves means a present or possibly only a visit from your country relatives. Of artichokes we are told that they signify favor from an unexpected source. Sorrel means the approach of calamity which will require all your courage to face. Of the sunflower, the loved of the æsthetic, a deep wound to your pride.

If a fair maiden dreams of daffodils, she must, alas, mistrust her lover! He will bear watching. A sad fate with which to burden the innocent posy. Heart's ease means heartache. Lilies, joy; to dream of roses brings happy love not unmixed with sorrow. The fragrant, modest violet, whose perfumed petals give sweet odor without stint, if seen and carried in dreams, brings sorrow and evil to the unwedded, but the opposite, joy and good, to the married. Water lilies appropriately portend dangers from the sea. Yellow flowers betoken jealousy. Of fruits, pomegranate is the best. To dream of this rosy fruit denotes happy marriage to the single and peace between quarrelsome couples. Green figs mean embarrassment, but dry ones mean money to the poor and mirth to the wealthy. Quinces indicate pleasant company, and lemons tell of separation.

To dream of aloes in bloom betokens a legacy. Without a blossom, long life. The broom flower means an increase of family, and the delicate anemone is a sign that you will soon fall in love or be made love to. To dream of asparagus in bunches, as one buys it from the market stalls, is a sign of tears, but if in your dream you see it growing it means good fortune. Cauliflower is better to eat than to dream of. It signifies when you see it in your dreams that all your friends will drop you for no worse reason than poverty.

There are more disagreeable significations to dreams than pleasant ones. To dream of vermin is a sign of sickness. I have found this true in my own experience. To dream of serpents, false friends are about you. A falling rain foretells tears and broken eggs a quarrel. Eggs unbroken denote good luck and prosperity. To dream of fruit of any kind out of season means anger without reason, which is a rhyme at all events.—Emma L McLagan in St Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE ARCHITECT.

Oh, famous and fine is the rare architect
Who recks not of labor or cost,
Whose buildings with jewels and silver are decked,
Where never a beauty is lost.
In silence works he through the day and the night,
Nor sound of a hammer is heard.
Pagodas and palaces, gleaming with light,
Arise at his beck or his word!

In country or town, on the meadow or hill,
He chooses and uses a site.
No law doth he own but the law of his will,
And none may dare question his right.
Unwearied by time and undaunted by foe,
Untrammeled by fear or command,
He builds for all people, the high and the low,
With patient and provident hand.

The castle and cottage alike he'll adorn,
Nor meanest of things doth disdain.
The peasant sleeps sweetly and finds in the morn
A palace on his window pane.
Oh, famous and fine is this architect rare,
Who recks not of labor or cost,
Who builds gorgeous mansions and yet has to spare,
The king of all builders, Jack Frost!

PLAYED WITH THE BULL'S HEAD.

The Penalties Attached to a Hand In Poker Held Against Five Kings.

Some varieties of cards have the picture of a bull's head upon the fifty-third card, which is known as the "joker," and largely affected by progressive euchre players when they are working assiduously for plated watch charms and cotton lace collars. It is seldom used in a game of poker, but in some sections it is left in the deck upon such occasions, and when a man holds it he is at liberty to give it the same value as any other card in his hand. The other night a party of jovial spirits sat down to while away a few hours at the seductive pastime, and when some one asked what kind of poker should be played another suggested that "everything should go." In the parlance of poker this means a great deal. A player can cheat to his heart's content provided he is not discovered, and as all the players were equally well equipped with tricks the proposition was acceded to.

During the game one of the players excused himself for a moment on some apparently proper plea and left the room. While he was absent he secured a new deck of cards and arranged them so that the person who dealt them would receive four aces, while the man to his left would get four kings. In his hurry he failed to remove the bull's head. Returning to the room, he took his seat, and winking to the man next to him, whose deal it happened to be, he deftly slipped him the "cold deck." The dealer, having confidence in his friend, took the pack and dealt out the hands. Of course he got the four aces. The betting was confined to him and the man to his left, and at last, when each had his cash and all his worldly possessions in the way of jewelry and wearing apparel staked on the result, the hands were called.

The dealer gladly announced the proprietorship of four aces and reached out for the plunder. The other man stopped him instanter. "Why, you can't beat four aces!" ejaculated the dealer.

"Oh, yes, I can," said his opponent. "I've got four kings and the bull's head, and that makes five. That means that I take the pot and all the rest of your clothes, and that every time I meet you on the street in the next six months you'll have to give me a $5 bill."

Then the game broke up.—Washington Post.

A Wonder of Coloring In Flowers.

The editor of "Notes For the Curious" recently read a wonderful (?) account of a bunch of roses kept in a New York herbarium, which still retain their original color, notwithstanding the fact that they were cut from the parent stalk three years and one month before the signing of our Declaration of Independence. The editor of the paper in which the notice appeared, he no doubt considering it the "eighth wonder of the world," asked if any reader could give information concerning a case in which roses or other flowers had retained their natural colors for so long a time.

We would state that we have seen well preserved wreaths and garlands of lotus, red and yellow poppies, and other unclassified flowers which were found on Egyptian mummies known to have been dead over 6,000 years. The red poppies were but a shade lighter than those dried and pressed but a month or a year before, and in the case of the yellow variety there was no distinguishable difference between those from the ancient tombs and specimens which had been dried but a week. If the editor who refers to the colonial roses as wonders will visit the Egyptian museum at Cairo, he will find dried colored flowers of sufficient antiquity to excite his wonder.—St. Louis Republic.

The New Tiara.

The return of the tiara seems to denote that the style of hairdressing is again in the ascendant. This ought to be good news to all except the divinely tall woman, to whom the loss of an inch or two by a coiffure dressed low in the neck was immaterial. To the average woman the Madonna style of headdress was certainly a handicap. It suggested a revival of the archaic scarcely more in keeping with the ordinary British profile than the professed appreciation of Botticelli is with the ordinary British character.—Pall Mall Budget.

Thoughtlessly Frank.

"I suppose you will be out again tonight," remarked Sportington's wife severely.

"I will," he replied with feeling, "unless I manage to hold better hands than I got last night."—Washington Star.

My Wife Is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her blood has become impoverished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Roberson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in every way."

THE income tax was knocked into smithereens by the decision handed down this week by the U. S. supreme court, and now what will the Dems do for the means to run the government? What a dandy set of financial managers they are, to be sure!

THERE is a scheme on foot among a few free silver democrats to nominate Dave Hill on a free silver platform. It is said that there is a $3,000,000 campaign fund behind the plan—and every cent of it will be needed.

THE rumor that has been floating about to the effect that J. J. Hill had secured control of the Northern Pacific, seem to have had their foundation in fact. Mr. Hill has returned from England, and while, as usual, he is not telling all he knows, it sems to be quite evident that he will secure control of the Northern Pacific railroad.

Winding up an article of approval of the idea of choosing Memorial day for erecting a monument to the confederate dead, the Marshal County Leader says: "We should applaud Chicago for her spirit in choosing Memorial Day for dedicating a monument to the memory of the Confederate dead. Let us hope that the time is close at hand in which Memorial Day will be celebrated in a radically different spirit that has been the fashion in years gone by."

Well, that is decidedly rich. The next thing we expect from the Leader will be an article, advising Uncle Sam to choose the Fourth of July to erect a monument to the dead English soldiers who lost their lives in the attempt to enslave this country. It is all proper and right to talk about a true spirit of fraternity but the writer of the above article don't know a little bit about the true spirit of patriotism. Memorial Day was a day set apart by the liberty loving citizens of the United States to commemorate the services of the Union dead, and for no other purpose. The south has its own Decoration day and that is all right and proper, and Chicago could just as well have chosen that day on which to honor the confederate dead, which would have been more appropriate and more acceptable to the people of the south themselves than to thus force themselves upon the notice of a loyal people on this day consecrated to the memory of the loyal dead, for as unpalatable as it seems to all such people as the Leader man shows himself to be it is nevertheless a fact (that even the southern people themselves now recognize) that the confederate soldier was not loyal to the interests of this country, and as much as all loyal people may and do regret this fact they were not responsible because it is a fact. The attempt to so use the day set apart and consecrated to the memory of the dead Union soldier, to commemorate the deeds of the confederate soldier, is an insult to the memory of the union dead, that is not creditable to such a great city as Chicago, and it looks like a deliberate intent on the part of its projectors to perpetuate intersectional strife. No wonder that patriotic soldiers resent the implied insult when every other liberty loving patriot in the United States does the same thing. It is not "flaunting the bloody shirt" as this young upstart seems to imagine, to resent any insult to the old flag from whatever source it comes. The "old soldiers" know more in a minute about that spirit of rebellion than the writer of the Leader article seems to have learned in his entire lifetime.

CHIPPEWAS DISSATISFIED.

Work of the Commission Expensive but of No Account.

DULUTH, May 18.—The present term of the United States court has brought to Duluth half a hundred or more redskins from the several reservations in Minnesota, White Earth, Leech Lake and Red Lake. They have determined that no more time should be lost in securing changes in the administration of their affairs. They find all manner of fault with the Indian commission. Their case, as stated by W. F. Campbell, one of their number, who belongs on the White Earth reservation, is practically as follows:

"Much dissatisfaction exists among the Chippewas at present, owing to the manner in which the government is carrying out the treaty made with them six years ago and also from the fact that the government owes them large sums of money under the provisions of treaties made long ago which for some reason they are not able to get. Under the last treaty all expense of making allotments, etc., is borne by the Indians, the government advancing the money, such money being repaid out of the common fund of the tribe arising from the sale of pine and agricultural lands. Although a commission has been at work five years they have made no permanent allotments of land and have done practically nothing toward winding up the work and relieving the Indians of an enormous expense.

Coal Receipts Light.

DULUTH, May 20.—While ore and lumber are going out of Duluth and Superior at a rapid rate, it is several years since such a poor showing has been made in coal receipts, except last year, when the strike was on at the coal mines. During the past week only a dozen coal boats have arrived in both ports. Lumber shipments amount to 10,000,000 feet a week, and ore shipments to 30,000 tons.

From "New Norway."

BELLA COOLA, B. C., May 4, 1895.

Winter is gone and nature is appearing in her summer garments.

The weather is mild and we have not had rain for quite a time, thunder and lightning we have not been aware of as yet.

The deep crevices in the mountains which are filled with snow are beginning to shake off their heavy burden and down it comes with a crash. The mountains are, however, so steep that they cannot form any land-slides.

In the river is found fish in abundance, principally salmon and trout.

The forest is vibrating with songs of birds in many different dresses.

The grizzly bear thinks he will prefer his mountain home rather than the noisy valley beneath, where trees are falling and fire is reducing the monsters to ashes.

We have now a fair trail up the valley as far as the settlers have taken land.

The colonists are now clearing land for their gardens and planting as fast as they can.

On account of the doubt which the papers express as to the market facilities of Bella Coola, I shall only say this, that, (1) British Columbia imports from ⅔ to ¾ of all that is consumed in the province, as farming is not carried on to any great extent. (2) We have large salmon canneries all over the coast that consume much more than Bella Coola can ever furnish. It is true that at the present the market facilities are not very good; but as soon as the valley is developed and a wharf is built steamers will call in regularly and business will be carried on here as anywhere else. At present a small steamer calls in twice a month. There is also a good prospect for lumbering. All new countries are desolate before they are settled.

As to making a farm in the woods it's true it is hard work, but they have all the material on the ground such as cedar, spruce, fir, hemlock, cottonwood, white alder, soft maple birch, crab-apple, white willow, etc., so they don't need to buy material neither for houses, fencing or fuel.

The valley seems to be overgrown with wild berry bushes of ever so many kinds.

There is only one white man in the valley that has undertaken to raise fruit—John Clayton—and his trees bear well, but now the colonists are planting out trees of different kinds. We have now set out three different kinds of apples, pears, plums, cherries and peaches, and for small fruit we have grapes, three kinds of currants, raspberries and strawberries. We are also trying the Russian mulberry.

For feed we are sowing oats, barley, (small quantities) millet, clover and timothy.

We have a vegetable garden as large as we can possibly take care of.

The whole colony is well and hard at work.

Kind greetings to all friends of the colony.

Close of the Flax Year.

The old crop of flax seed is rapidly disappearing, with prices comparatively high and above the average for the past five or six years. Daily offerings on the Chicago market are small and at other points next to nothing. Preliminary estimates suggest a liberal acreage in the northwest, and operators are beginning to show some interest in new crop deliveries, though up to the present scarcely enough transactions have been recorded to establish a market. Stocks of old seed are very small and the demand for oil and cake are encouraging. Less is heard about the magnitude of the Argentine crop, and while some is coming to this country it is only because of the domestic scarcity and consequent high prices. Late advices hint that further shipments will be small. March imports of flax-seed from South America, India and Russia 564,000 bu. against 333,000 bu. in Feb. and only 44,000 bu. in March '95. Total imports nine months, 2,985,000 against 167,000 bu during the corresponding period a year earlier.

AARON COOKE.

Tuberculosis in Cattle.

The Orange Judd Farmer.

The compulsory tuberculin test has been defeated in Massachusetts, the only government in the word which had specially authorized it in a law enacted a year ago. The measure which is about to become a law in the old Bay state, after a most exciting campaign, permits the use of tuberculin only with the owner's consent unless physical examination reveals the disease, but the compulsory use of tuberculin is permitted on cattle imported from other states which amply protects the commonwealth from becoming a dumping ground for tuberculous stock from neighboring states. Full, sound value is to be paid by the state for all cattle killed and also the farmers' expense or loss by quarantine. An appropriation of $100,000 is made for the state cattle commissioners work. Experiments under this new law against tuberculosis will be carefully awaited before any other state should go as far. The measure provides for effective work in combating tuberculosis, gives the much discussed tuberculin test a fair show, and offers such inducements to farmers to have their herds inspected that (if the test proves what is claimed for it) cattle owners will be eager to adopt it. But it cuts off at one blow the arbitrary powers under which officious vets could inflict untold damage to farmers and stock breeders without sufficiently compensating advantages.

Another Frost.

Moorhead (Clay Co.) News.

Quite unexpectedly people awoke this morning, May 16, and found the ground coated with a heavy frost. The temperature fell to 28 degrees by notation of the weather bureau. Observer Sherrier thinks the lowest temperature occurred about 6 a. m. and that the duration of the extreme cold was very brief. Last evening the wind was east or a little south of east and people did not look for a frost.

The News is informed by farmers who came in during the forenoon that barley and oats and flax are damaged, but the extent of damage is not yet known.

Many of our citizens have come to the front with offers of contributions in money and material, and what once looked like an up-hill undertaking seems now likely to be easily accomplished. All of the boys have labored faithfully to build up this home and they will heartily enjoy it when it is completed, which will be about June 1st, undoubtedly.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself—and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

The owner of one of the choicest farms in this vicinity has placed in our hands for sale his choice farm near this city and offers it at a price that will sell to any person who wants a farm, has a little money to invest and knows a good thing when he sees it. A good opportunity is here presented to any one who wants to step right into a good business. Call on or address with stamp for reply, JOURNAL office, Crookston, Minn.

A few samples of crayon work by Mrs. Edward George; now on exhibition at Charley Misner's barber shop shows that lady to be an artist far above the average in ability. A two-thirds life sized portrait of C. E. Misner, enlarged from a photo, is a most excellent piece of work and shows what the lady can do in that line. We can heartily recommend Mrs. George to any JOURNAL reader who may be in need of such work. She will not only do the work perfectly but will also furnish the frame and all complete if desired.

Herbert, the young son of C. H. Sanke was playing about his father's jewelry store on Thursday and got hold of a brush that had been used to clean silver with cyanide of potassium, and had been left in a bottle of water to soak. He probably put the brush in his mouth which made him deathly sick. His father took him at once to Dr. Jast who administered an emetic. He was taken home as soon as possible and although he has been very ill he is now getting along all right, and said to be entirely recovered from the effects of the mishap.

Charles McColley, state commander of the S. of V., arrived in the city on the Great Northern train on Tuesday morning and was met by a detail from the Camp, who escorted him to the G. A. R. post room, where he was kept busy until train time shaking hands with the Sons and the old vets, except what time was required to discuss an ample breakfast at Renne's restaurant. He took the Fosston train at nine o'clock and will return in time for the camp fire tonight.

Boston Herald:—It has become so apparent as to become almost proverbial that the richer the man is the less, in proportion to his property does he pay for the support of the government. The heaviest burden of taxation is apt to bear upon the middling interest classes of the country. They have a comparatively moderate property, that is almost always in sight, and is thus easily assessed by the tax gatherer. The very rich men are familiar with devices to escape taxation, and they freely resort to them.

"Kill the prodigal, the calf has got back" said Charlie Misner on Thursday of last week when the door opened and in walked his long lost "basso profundo," Walt Bivins. Walt was as dusty and travel-stained as though he had walked all the way from St. Cloud—but he insisted he had not,—said that he had just got in from St. Cloud on a freight train—and we guess that was right too—we have noticed that the brake-beam on a freight always causes the summer tourist to look just like Walt did. His company disbanded at Sauk Centre and all went to Chicago except Walt who came home as aforesaid.

Paul Uzeldinger came in from Euclid on Friday of last week to get a shave at Misner's shop. Says that the frost did not do as much damage up that way as had been done by the high winds, that blew the dirt away exposing the roots to the sun and frost. Some pieces of barley were badly frosted but he thought that they would recover all right enough. Paul is one of the earliest of the early settlers at Euclid—and is still a bachelor. He confesses that the recent capture of his friend Marvin Losey Jr., makes him feel a little shaky, a little apprehensive of his personal safety. Says he don't want to be captured as he thinks he can make more money as a bachelor farmer than as a benedict.

Since arrangments for more money were completed the new hotel seems to have taken a new lease of life. A number of our most public spirited men chipped in and raised a fund sufficient to complete the building and as many carpenters as could work to advantage have been employed and the work is being vigorously pushed to completion. It is the intention to have the building completed by the time the Firemen's tournament occurs, or enough at least to open the house. The landlord, Mr. Baker, after completing arrangments for the lease has gone to purchase his furniture and will be back as soon as the hotel is completed ready to take possession. When completed Crookston will have an elegant new hotel, a credit to our thriving young city.

Geo. Brooks has gone to visit friends and relatives at Litchfield for awhile, during his vacation. George is one of the steadiest and most reliable brakesmen on the Great Northern line.

Quite a lively runaway occured on Monday forenoon. Dave McCleary's horse, attached to a buggy got frightened and breaking the hitching strap started for the Fifth ward at a pace that soon strung the buggy to kindling wood. August George's buggy also suffered the loss of a spoke.

Mr. Fisher in the morning and a "Rally Service" prepared by the Y. P. S. C. E. in the evening. Miss. Emily S. Hartwell of Minneapolis is expected to speak during the first fifteen minutes of the evening service.

Nervous

People should realize that the only true and permanent cure for their condition is to be found in having

The committee appointed by the council to act with the G. A. R. committee met with the latter on Thursday and organized for business. It was unanimously decided to invite Edward George Esq. to deliver the oration, a committee was appointed to look up ways and means and then the committee adjourned subject to call by the chairman.

Every son of a veteran, whether he belongs to the Camp or not, ought to turn out and listen to the talk that commander McColley will give at G. A. R. hall tonight. The commander comes a great ways to see the boys and desires to meet all. The Sons extend a cordial invitation to all who are or who could be members to turn out.

John Pohl the Polander whose wife was gored and trampled to death in Grand Forks, came to this land office last week from the Roseau country to arrange for the entry of a claim he had selected. He was here informed for the first time of the sad home-coming that awaited him and left at once for his desolated home in Grand Forks.

The 17th of May, Norwegian independence day, was an extremely quiet day in this city. Save the display now and then of a bit of bunting, there was no attempt at any kind of public observance of the day except—perhaps now and then a quiet "skoll" as one native of the old sod would chance to meet another.

Saturday was one of those cold, wet, disagreeable days that would be a credit to March or April weather but very much out of place for a May day. It was enough to give a fellow a fit of the blues on general principles. The only consolation one could extract from it was in the reflection that it probable prevented a frost.

The celebrated kidnaping case, mentioned in our last issue, came to a sudden ending in Judge Ives' court on Friday last, by the mother, Mrs. Bray, agreeing to leave the child in Flanders' care. The whole proceedings will now be dropped and she will not be prosecuted further for attempting to kidnap the child. For the present the child will be left with Mrs. Rose.

Levi LeDuc Jr. was united for life to Miss Rosie Boiselle on Monday morning at St. Ann's church. After the marriage ceremony the whole party adjourned to Lynne's photograph parlors where a picture of the group was taken, after which a royal wedding breakfast was spread at the residence of LeDuc Senior, followed by a grand dance in the evening.

M. Jeffers came down from Red Lake Falls on Tuesday evening as a witness in the case of Hamery vs. Ford. Comrade Jeffers is just recovering from a severe accident that occured to him lately whereby he had his right arm dislocated. His wife also had the misfortune recently to fall down the cellar stairs and break an arm. In this instance the old saying that "misfortunes never come singly" was aptly illustrated.

John McLean: "If the story that J. J. Hill has got the Northern Pacific is true I believe it will result in good to Crookston, for it looks to me as though all of the business east of the Red River would then go via the N. P. road, which it seems to me would necessitate division headquarters here and we shall then have as many railroad people here as we ever had if not more."

Poor Pie

is responsible for many of man's (and woman's) physical woes—but the pie needn't be poor, and it mey bring joy instead of woe. How? Use nothing but COTTOLENE for shortening and the pie crust will be delicate, flaky, delicious, and so healthful that even a dyspeptic can eat freely of it and be comfortable. COTTOLENE can't be equalled as a shortening, and is absolutely healthful. Genuine has this trade mark—steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin. Take no other.

Greatest Family Weekly

THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE,

WASHINGTON, D. C.

18th Year of High Success.

THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE is now entering upon its 18th year of phenomenal success.

No other family weekly in the country has had such a growth and maintained it so steadily.

It goes into every County in the United States, and has clubs of subscribers at nearly every Post-office.

It has gained this proud position solely on its merits as a highly interesting family newspaper.

FOR THE YEAR 1895.

Among the contributors to the paper for this year are:

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, the gallant old commander of the Third Corps,

Gen. James A. Beaver, hero of Cold Harbor, and ex-governor of Pennsylvania,

Gen. Russell A. Alger, ex-governor of Michigan, and Past Commander-in-Chief, Grand Army of the Republic.

Gen. Lucius Fairchild, ex-governor of Wisconsin, and Past Commander-in-Chief, Grand Army of the Republic.

Gen. James H. Kidd, 6th Mich. Cav. who commanded the famous Michigan Cav. Brigade.

The Cannoneer, whose story of Battery B, 4th U. S. Art., was admittedly the best narrative of a private soldier ever written.

Gen. O. O. Howard, who commanded successivly the Eleventh and Fourth Corps, and the Army of the Tennessee.

Gen. David M. Stanly, commander of the Fourth Corps.

Gen. Cyrus Bussey, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Interior, formerly commander of the Cavalry Division, Army of the Tennessee.

Gen. James S. Negley, who commanded "Negley's Brigade" and a divison in the Army of the Cumberland.

Gen John Pope, who commanded the Army of the Mississippi and the Army of Virginia. The last literary work done by the distinguished soldier

Gen. R. H. G. Minty, commander of the famous "Saber Brigade" of Cavalry.

Gen. Wager Swayne, [illegible] Assista a brigade in the Army of the Tennessee, nt Commissioner Freedmen's Bureau, etc

Gen. Aquilla Wiley, of the Army of the Cumberland, brevetted for conspicous gallantry in four great battles.

All these are highly important historical contributions.

They are written especially for THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE, and will appear in no other paper.

PRICE, $1 A YEAR,

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

It claims to give more and better matter for the sum of two cents a week than any other publication. Every line that appears in it is written for it, and has appeared in no other paper. It uses no syndicate or boiler plate matter.

SAYREVILLE'S AMAZING HUES.

A Jersey Blasphemy In Yellow Set In a Symphony of Blue.

Probably the most remarkable bit of color to be found within a radius of 100 miles from this city is the little hamlet of Sayreville, N. J. From an artist's point of view Sayreville is impressionistic in the nightmare sense of the word. Its surroundings are beautiful, for it stands on a little bluff overlooking a spreading marsh, through the center of which a sparkling river runs to lose itself in a rift of the faraway hills. The marsh is a dull, grayish blue, the river gives a steel blue effect, and far away the distance of the hills blends in soft gradations into the hue of the sky. In the midst of this gem of a landscape stands Sayreville, yellow in every sense of the word. It is a blasphemy in yellow set in a symphony in blue.

In the neighboring villages there is a legend as to how Sayreville became yellow. They say that when the town was first built there wasn't a painted house in it, and that one day an enterprising peddler on his notion selling rounds saw in this an opportunity for money making. He procured a large quantity of damaged paint at a nearby city, all of the paint being in various hues of yellow, from bright orange down to the dullest buff. This paint he carted to Sayreville and sold at low prices, and still with large profit to himself. Then the town set about painting itself yellow. Some of the people pooled their interests and their paints and ornamented their houses with the combination. Others ran to stripes, and having used up one tint filled in with the rest. One man tried polka dots in chrome on a background of greenish buff, with brilliant effect. When the work was done, the peddler came back with a big consignment of staring green, which the townspeople bought, and with which they painted their blinds. The result was pleasing to the Sayrevillers, but startling to such few outsiders as chanced to journey to that town.

In the course of time two householders found courage to break away from the prevailing yellowness. One repainted his house in robin's egg blue, the other tinted his a deep magenta, and now these two buildings stand out conspicuously and give just enough color tone to the village to accentuate its amazing effects in yellow.—New York Sun.

SEALING IN LABRADOR.

Fields Many Miles Square Fairly Teeming With Seals.

Late in February the Newfoundland sealing steamers break through the ice in St. John's harbor and make their way to some northern outposts, lying there until March 10, the earliest date on which the law allows them to "go to the ice." They stand out to sea until they meet the immense fields of ice from the Arctic ocean. These fields are often many square miles in extent and fairly teem with seals. A great seal hunter told me that the sea seemed suddenly converted into an ocean of seals and ice. The steamer breaks into the jam and floats with it or skirts along the edge, the crew, 200 or 300 in number, taking to the floating ice and living there for days and nights.

The young seals fatten so rapidly that sealers say you can actually see them grow while you are looking at them. The poor creatures are easily killed, a blow with the butt end of a gaff finishing them. The hunter then "sculps," or skins them, inserting a sharp knife under the fat, and with marvelous dexterity taking off the "pelt"—skin and fat together—in about a minute and a half. A party of men will "pan" their pelts—pile them up to the number of about 1,000 and thrust a gaff with the ship's flag into the pan. When there are pans enough, the steamer breaks into the ice and hauls them aboard with a donkey winch, or the men drag them to the vessel's side.

The Newfoundland seal hunters always speak of seals as "swiles," and for our word carry they say "spell." A schoolmaster who had been listening to a seal hunter's story said sneeringly:

"Swiles! How do you spell swilee?"

"We don't spell 'em," replied the hunter; "we most generally houls 'em!"—Gustav Kobbe in St. Nicholas.

The Other Kind.

Not long ago a well dressed woman entered the savings bank in a western town and told the clerk that she wished to deposit some money to the credit of George Sampson.

Recognizing her as the wife of a man of that name, who already had an account open, the clerk rightly guessed that the money in question was to start an account for one of her children.

"Is he a minor?" he inquired.

"Well, I guess not!" responded the depositor indignantly. "That's something we've never had in our family yet! And if Georgie shows any leanin toward it when he gets old enough—he ain't but 10 now—I reckon his pa can tell him yarns about mines explodin and shafts fallin on top of folks that'll settle him quicker'n a wink!"—Youth's Companion.

Orange Trees.

An orange grove in full bearing is one of the most delightful sights the eye can witness. The trees are a beautiful shape if left as nature made them. The limbs come nearly to the ground—so close that an orange picker goes under the tree flat on his back and often cuts 100 oranges from the tree before he comes out. Oranges are never picked, but are cut off with shears having a spring between the handles. An orange that has no stem on it is considered a "cull" and is not packed by a first class packer.—Pomona (Cal.) Progress.

What the Boston Man Said.

"Believe me, dear, I love you more than life. I swear by the honor of my ancestors, by my hopes of happiness, by the sacred cod"—

"Ah, Harold! Now indeed I believe you!"—New York Recorder.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 17, 1895.

Hon. Thos. B. Reed paid Washington an unannounced visit this week, which started no end of stories about his having been sent for in connection with the calling of an extra session of congress, and his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination. None of these things had any connection with Mr. Reed's visit. He was brought to Washington by one of the most holy ties which bind men together—friendship. The condition of Representative Hitt, of Ill., who has been dangerously ill and who is not yet out of danger, was the magnet which drew Mr. Reed to Washington. They have been for years the closest of friends, personal and political, and Mr. Reed wanted to see if his presence would not help his friend. That's the whole story, but Washington news is not over plentiful just now and the correspondents are working this highly praiseworthy visit of one friend to another for all its worth, not bothering about facts, but giving their imagination free rein. Mr. Reed only remained in Washington a few hours.

It is given out by those connected with the administration that the reason for the idea of court-martialing Admiral Meade for his recent criticism of the un-American policy of the administration was abandoned, was that Admiral Meade declined to answer questions as to his responsibility for the newspaper interview in which the criticism appeared and the absence of any law to compel the newspaper man who interviewed the admiral to testify before a naval court martial. But that was not the reason at all; it was merely a pretense. The real reason was the fear of public opinion which was quick to see that Admiral Meade was goaded into making the remarks which constituted a technical violation of the naval regulations, but reflected the sentiments of seven-tenths of the American people, and would have been equally as quick to resent any attempt to punish him by the use of a packed court-martial. Admiral Meade has given the country forty years of gallant service, having a record unsurpassed by any living officer in our navy, and the administration will do well to make the reprimand it proposes to give him as mild as possible.

There is little doubt that the presidency of the Pullman car company has been tendered to Secretary Gresham. A gentleman whose relations with several directors of that company are close, expresses the opinion that if Mr. Gresham declines the position it will be offered to ex-Secretary Robert T. Lincoln.

An open rupture between Mr. Cleveland and Vice President Stevenson, is in the opinion of many, certain to occur in the near future. All of the news received in Washington points to the probable capture of the Democratic party of Illinois by the silver men, and it is no longer denied in any quarter that the entire silver movement in that state has been from the first in the interest of Mr. Stevenson's candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Mr. Cleveland believes that Mr. Stevenson was the moving spirit in whole business and does not hesitate when talking with his friends to call him "a traitor to the administration of which he is part" and other uncomplimentary things. Should the two men meet it is believed that a quarrel is certain.

Some people seem determined to drag silver into everything. A proposition has been made to the governor of Delaware to appoint a Democratic silver man senator to contest the seat to which Republicans claim Col. Dupont was elected, and if the governor agrees an attempt is to be made to get enough Populist votes to make when combined with the solid vote of the Democratic senators, a majority of the Senate and to seat the man appointed by the governor, regardless of the report that will be made by the committee on elections, not because they will believe him entitled to the seat, but because the man can be counted upon to vote for silver at all times. It is difficult to believe that such a scheme as this can be put through, and your correspondent is confident that should Gov. Watson give his consent it will be found that somebody has been trying to dispose of what they did not control. The senate is controlled by the silver men anyway, and the shrewd silver senators will be quick to see that such a scheme would be certain to injure the cause of silver with the public at large, while the vote that would be gained in the senate would not be of the slightest assistance. The next senator from Delaware will be Col. Dupont, if he lives.

Whiskers that are prematurely gray or faded should be colored to prevent the look of age, and Buckingham's Dye equals all others in coloring brown or black.

HAM NUT

No. 16797; Record 2:36¾

"A Few Words to the Wise is Sufficent."

This may be the the last chance of breeding your mares to Ham Nut at the low service fee of $10.00 for the season with a return privilege in 1896 if mare does not prove with foal, or your money refunded at the option of the owner. Season of 1895 to close in July. Ham Nut will then be put in training to lower his present record which he made very easy on the Crookston track last season after a few weeks handling, and every one who saw it knows it was nowhere near the limit of his speed. Ham Nut is very high and fashionably bred and a look at his colts will convince you that his stock is large, well boned with good musceles, all speedy and fine looking. Call and see this young and handsome trotting Stallion before breeding your mares. Stables two blocks west of Post-Office on Robert Street.

Critical Logic Failed

The late Sherlock Holmes had a favorite dictum: "Eliminate the impossible, and what is left, however improbable, must be the truth." This was not at all in accordance with the saying of Victor Hugo: "Nothing is so imminent as the impossible. What must be always foreseen is the unforeseen." Most of us will agree, from experience, with Hugo rather than with Holmes. The impossible does happen. When "Mercy Philbrick's Choice" was published in the "No Name" series, the critics were agreed that it seemed to be written by Helen Hunt Jackson. But, as those who knew her love for flowers and acquaintance with nature also pointed out, she could not be the author, for there were several glaring mistakes in the naming and placing of blossoms in the story. Yet, as was afterward disclosed, she did write it. So all the theorizing went for nothing.—Philadelphia Press.

LIGHT.

When the world was young, man was only a child, with a child's thoughts. Probably the first day, at the close of the first day, was frightened when darkness fell, and wondered whether the light would ever come again. And since, he has, like a child, been continually learning something about light. At one time he supposed the eye was the source of the light, because he saw nothing unless his eyes were open. The great philosopher, Newton, propounded the corpuscular theory, that light is an imponderable substance, whose colors depend on the velocity of transmission. Reflection be compared to the rebounding of an elastic body, while refraction was due to interstices in transparent bodies, which allowed the particles of light to pass through. This idea was accepted for many years, but has now been practically displaced by Huygen's undulatory theory, that light is propagated by the vibrations of the imponderable ether. On this theory the transmission of light is like that of sound, and a corollary of it is that there are lights of different colors, the variety of hue not being caused by varying velocities. Three peculiarities of light are its universal diffusion, its rapidity of motion, and its usefulness. The works of man never equal those of nature, but in these three respects the Burlington Route resembles light. An examination of the map shows its diffusion over the West; the use of its tickets will convince of the speed of its trains; an acquaintance with the lines demonstrate its usefulness. Apply to your home agent for tickets and information, or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent. St. Paul, Minn.

McINTOSH ITEMS.

[From The Tribune.]

The McIntosh Mercantile Company have started up their creamery, and are now prepared to buy unsalted butter. They will buy all the nice and sweet unsalted butter that is offered them.

Another Bemidji party, composed of Chris Mandt, Knute Hofto, M. S. Tveten, E. E. Koppung, and L. T. Nokleby, were over to the Bemidji country last week. They were not favorable impressed with what they saw.

A base ball game between the "fats" and "leans" was to have been played last Sunday afternoon, but the cold wind prevented a full nine on each side coming out. A game was played nevertheless, and each nine had some "fats" and some "leans." It is expected that the regular game will be played next Sunday afternoon.

(From the Times.)

Crop prospects were never better at this season of the year but more rain would do no damage.

F. Fishburn, well known here as the first miller of McIntosh, came over from the Forks Thursday and will remain with us for a time at least.

A delegation of Fosston Odd Fellows will visit with their brethren in this city this evening.

W. G. Hunt has moved his legal head-quarters to the building just south of Engesetter's blacksmith shop.

Sheriff Steenerson came up from Crookston Thursday and was accompanied on his return by Miss Ellen Aune Aune, of Hill River, who was later adjudged insane and taken to the asylum at Fergus Falls.

W. F. Arnold came up from Crookston today and will proceed to establish a grade for Cleveland Ave. and re-survey several other streets, the field notes for which have been lost. This re-surveying of streets puts the city to no little unnecessary expense, and all because of a lack of efficiency in the administration of the city's affairs.

Attorney Steenerson was up from Crookston Saturday and is reported to have purchased the Hoans property while here. Should this prove to be the case some of our procrastinate school board officials are quite likely to be placed in a somewhat uncomfortable position before long. Should worse come to worst, what excuse can they offer for thus neglecting their official duties?

STARCH OUT OF COIN.

"There may have been something done in the last century of interest on this question, but what have seemed to me to be the vital points are not so far distant. It is claimed, I believe, that in 1873 a radical change was made in our monetary system, by reason of which all property has been depreciating in value, and must continue to do so. The entire force and merit of Coin's argument centers in this decline of prices. If no such law as he describes has in fact been suffered there is nothing to be remedied. These people are claiming that no general decline can be shown in farm products as marketed in this locality, and that the position of the western farmer has greatly improved since 1873. Now, I would like you to meet them at once on that point, for if they are right my interest in the whole question becomes much less acute. I don't want to get lost in a maze of theories and charges and statistics covering 100 years and finally leave here without getting what I came for. I beg pardon for the interruption, but if you can first show these people how much their condition has changed for the worse since 1873 I will guarantee they will listen attentively to why it has grown worse. What have you to say to this farmer's statement that corn was so cheap in Iowa in 1872 and 1873 that it was burned for fuel?"

TAKES THE SMIRK OFF COIN.

"I would prefer to take up the various phases of this question in my regular order," said Coin, "but as I always invite questions I will not decline to answer this one. I scarcely need to do more, however, than to refer you to page 116 of Coin's Financial School, which records my reply to a similar question by Mr. Henrotin. The corn crop of Illinois for 1872, which controlled the price until the next crop was in sight, was 217,268,000 bushels, while the crop of Illinois in 1893 was only 160,550,470. The Chicago prices in 1873 and 1894 were about the same, but with the reduced crop of 1892 and increased population. the price should have been much higher. As I said to Mr. Henrotin I say now: Overproduction accounts for the low price in 1873, and the gold standard accounts for the low price in 1893. Is that sufficient?"

And the dapper little fellow waited with a serene smirk for the effect of his words.

"Is that sufficient?" repeated the travelling man, looking first to the farmer and then to the bimetallist.

The farmer looked a little dazed.

"Do you say?" he stammered, "that the corn crop of 1872 was greater than the corn crop of 1893? How can that be? Iowa was scarcely half farmed in 1872, and Nebraska and Kansas barely opened. There is some catch about that."

Coin moved uneasily but said nothing.

The bimetallist arose with a smile.

"He did not say the corn crop of the United States was greater in 1872 than in 1893. He said the crop of Illinois."

"O," said the farmer, his face clearing of perplexity but filling with disgust, "why should a man write such a fool thing as that? The crop of Illinois don't make the price; it is the crop of the whole country."

Coin's dapper smirk had gone.

AUDIENCE VIEWS HIM WITH PITY.

"The corn crop of the United States in 1872," said the bimetallist, "was 1,092,719,000 bushels, and in 1893, 1,619,406,131 bushels, or about 50 per cent. greater. But while the Chicago quotations were about the same in the two years, there was a great difference in favor of 1893-1894 to the farmers. The crop of 1872 could not be moved at the price. It was almost unsalable. In this part of Iowa it was worth only 12½ to 15 cents a bushel at the railroad station. I hold in my hand the report of the Iowa State Agricultural Society for 1873, which says (page 10) of the crop of the previous year: 'Untold quantities were burned for fuel, being cheaper than wood or coal at any reasonable rate.' On the other hand, the crop of 1893 brought the farmers about 25 cents a bushel at the market towns this distance from Chicago. Is that sufficient as to the corn crops of 1882 and 1893?"

It was evidently sufficient for Coin. The starch was out of his collar; his knee pants disclosed his trembling limbs; all the assurance was gone from his face; his lips were dry and he seemed unable to speak.

There was a dead silence in the hall, Coin's attempt to establish his theory by the corn crop of one state, which produced only one tenth of the whole crop, appeared so weak, after it was exposed, that the audience viewed him almost with pity. His argument had been reversed against himself.

In Mr. Roberts book one will find 168 pages of facts and reasoning as clear and conclusive as this; and if the book does not have as large a sale as Harvey's it will be for lack of a sensible and appreciative public.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE.

(Red Wing Republican.)

The state board of health has done a vast service in calling attention to the prevalence of tuberculosis in cattle, and the duty and interest of every farmer to look out for it and keep his herd clear of infection. This can be looked after better if prompted by the motive of self interest than by bringing to bear any compelling force of legislation. It is, indeed, practically useless to pass laws about the matter. If the owner of cattle choose to evade the law he can do so, unless the state should appoint a myriad of agents to apply tests to all the cattle in the state; a task obviously impossible. But the careful farmer, awake to his own best interests, will not fail to exterminate any of his own flock that are infected with this disease as readily as if they were wild beasts.

To begin with, it is a crime to keep cattle afflicted with this disease. It affects the milk and it affects the meat. It is now well enough established that a large number of the cases of tuberculosis in human beings orginate in this way. The disease is quite communicable; and when we consider the number of children who consume milk taken from diseased animals, its prevalence is easily intelligible. Aside from this human consideration, however, it is good business policy to root out the disease by slaughtering the animal wherever found. For it easily runs through a herd and deteriorates the quality of all, finally carrying them off and subjecting the owner to total loss. If it were any other communicable disease, the farmer would isolate the patient as quickly as possible, to spare the rest of his herd. But tuberculosis is about the worst of all, and there are tests by which its presence may be determined. Every owner of cattle should apply those tests and remove the infected beasts at once. In this way Minnesota catte could be made and kept clear of the plague, the loss from its quite spread would be averted, and many human lives might be saved.

THE GREAT WAR SERIES.

SHENANDOAH.

A Story of Sheridan's Great Ride.

BY J. P. TRACY.

This is one of the most fascinating stories ever emanating from the pen of an American author, and is hailed with delight by all who have read it. It is rapidly becoming very popular and is creating a furore wherever introduced. It is a love story pure and simple—founded on the achievements of Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley during the late civil war, and the descriptions of the Battle of Winchester and of Sheridan's Great Ride are here given as seen by an eye-witness. This is truly a wonderful book. The next number is still better and more good things are to follow. All old soldiers, their wives and children will read this great book and enjoy it. The book contains 224 pages, printed on fine paper, handsomely illustrated, and bound in illuminated cover. Published by the Novelist Publishing Co., 61 Beekman St., New York City, and sold throughout the United States and Canada for the low price of 25 cents. All newsdealers handle it.

An Old Farmer of Eighty-two Years Gives His Views on Fifty-cent Wheat.

And Scores the Populistic Ideas of Donnelly and His ilk.

WHAT MAN HAS DONE MAN CAN DO.

The Pioneer Press in its issue of Thursday, has the following letter from an aged farmer, which is so contrary to the pessimistic views of some who think that they are "farmers," and so refreshing to read in these days of growling that we produce it for the benefit of our farmer readers:

There is a great deal of complaint and a great deal of political buncombe about 50-cent wheat, and the country is called poverty-stricken on account of this low rate of wheat. But we ought to take into account the difference in the cost of producing wheat. I am in my eighty-second year and have raised wheat a good many years in different states, and know what I am talking about. In Missouri in the beginning of 1830 to 1836 we raised wheat at from 37 to 50 cents per bushel. In 1864 I hired five binders and one man to rake off and a shocker, and drove the team myself, and we cut seven or eight acres. My hands cost some $2 a day. I paid 5 or 6 cents for threshing. I do not now remember the price of wheat in Mankato, but what I took to Hastings, over 100 miles, I got 63 cents per bushel for. Well, now a man can hire one hand, or if he can't do that, his wife or son, if he is so situated as to have any old enough, and take his reaper and three horses and cut from ten to fifteen acres per day, and have it all shocked up by night. And instead of paying 5 or 6 cents for threshing he can have it done for 3 cents per bushel and instead of being three days with ten hands and twelve horses threshing a thousand bushels, he can have it done in one day or less, with but very little more hands and no horses, except one team to draw water.

It does not cost more than one-half or one third as much for raising wheat as it did twenty or thirty years ago. The idea of a farmer running under on 50-cent wheat these times is all nonsense, when two good hands can take care of 150 or 200 acres, with a few day's help in threshing time. It is of no use to curse the gold bugs or the bulls or the bears for the various prices of wheat. Wheat makes its own price more than anything else. I remember that just after the war wheat was 50 cents a bushel, and a man not far from me got a team for what they called $250, and he agreed to pay in wheat at 50 cents a bushel; that is 500 bushels of wheat. But the wheat crop failed or was very light, and the grasshopper came and money was inflated, and his team cost him a thousand dollars and he lost his farm by it.

Wheat regulates its own price and the reason it has been so low of late was its quantity. Why has it risen ten cents or more lately? Because of the prospects of a scarcity. It is no gold bug or political movement or corner maker. If wheat is scarce it is easy to make a corner, just as it was with beef cattle a few weeks ago. I am sure that cattle and flax and hogs have been more profitable than wheat for the last five years or more, but to say a farmer will run under in raising wheat at 50 cents a bushel is all bosh and I know just what I say.

And the idea of the farmers becoming poor by the hard times is as big a lie as Satan ever invented. I have lived in Minnesota thirty-eight years and I don't see how a country could have advanced faster. But "they are mortgaged to death." How are they? I can tell you. I had a farm and sold it four years ago for $5,000 (it is worth $7,000 now) and the young man who bought it did not have a dollar to pay down, but through his father borrowed $2,000, and then gave me a mortgage for the rest. He is mortgaged to death in the same way with many others, but he is paying up and will eventually pay up. There are many mortgages of the same kind. Many a farmer has begun with forty or fifty acres, twenty or twenty-five years ago, and now owns his hundreds, with good house and barn and windmills and water tank and all the conveniences necessary to live easy. The fact is that any young man who would save his wages for the last four or five years could buy a quarter section of land; that is, could pay enough down to secure it. I am too old a man to be fooled with any such lies as are afloat about the downfall of the farmer.

Three Waifs.

A wee waif scarce two days old was sent from Winona a short time since to the charge of the Children's Home Society, of Minnesota, in St. Paul. It is a vegorous, healthy, little man and evinced his vigor greatly to the astonishment of the Twin City people by drinking his milk out of a cup "like any other man." None of your bottle babies for him. Can any other town beat that for a baby two days old? Winona takes the cake.

But Alexandria has come to the help of the Twin City census enumerators by sending unsought to the society a pair of twin baby boys, born on March 7th. As bright, winsome little fellows as you could find in many a day. The handsome young woman who brought them to the society told a sad tale of the death of both parents; but investigation has revealed that it was all a story and that they were probably her own. But she has left for parts unknown. The society is willing that the census of any other town in the state state should be increased by so much, if any good, Christian family will take the twins, or the Winona wee man, or any of the score of wee ones from one month to two years—mostly boys that it has on its hands to care for.

More than 800 have been thus provided for since Sept. 11, 1889. Who will help a child to find a home?

Address Rev. E. P. Savage, Supt. Children's Home Society, 802, New York Life, St. Paul, Minn.

The Future of Wheat.

With the opening of the first spring month everything that affects the price of wheat indicates a better price for the fall crop. Since then events have fully justified that hope, shortage in every wheat country in the world, the almost entire failure of the winter wheat crop and a great decrease in acreage in spring wheat counties. All of these things combined have operated to confirm first impressions and set wheat booming in a manner that is truly encouraging. Add to this the fact that there is an actual shortage of wheat amounting to many millions over last year and it would seem to be absolutely sure that wheat next fall will be gilt-edged property. With this very brilliant prospect we have the comforting assurance that the Red River Valley will have the biggest crop in her history and about the only good crop raised. Heretofore the winter wheat raisers have had the advantage of being able to get their wheat into the market in time to take advantage of the first prices—just a little ahead of us and the marketing of their wheat had a depressing effect upon the market when we got ready to sell. This year the winter wheat farmer finds that he has little or no wheat to sell thus giving our wheat the cream of the market for once. While we sympathize with the winter wheat man "turn about is fair play" and it is no more than right that he should get once in awhile what we have had to take all of the time and he ought to be able to put up with it this time. Our farmers have every reason this season to "rejoice in hope."

MEMORIAL SABBATH.

Col. Cobham Post, the W. R. C. and the Sons of Vets observed last Sabbath by attending divine services in a body. In the morning they attended the Catholic church, where Rev. Fr. Murphy delivered a powerful, patriotic sermon and put on the cap sheaf at its close by announcing that there would be no services in that house in the evening owing to the fact that Memorial services were to be held at the M. E. church, and he urged all the members of his congregation to attend. In the evening, the Methodist church was crowded to its utmost capacity to listen to the sermon by Rev. L. W. Squier which was highly enjoyed by all. Both morning and evening the Post was well represented, almost every member being present except the commander who was detained at the bedside of his sick father.

BUGG'S BUMP.

While watching the kids playing base-ball we have often heard some urchin yell excitedly: "git a hump on yer!" as some other urchin was doing his "yallerest" to reach a base before the festive ball opened at that point. Just what was meant we could never exactly figure out until we met Will Bugg one day last week with a "hump" on his right cheek as big as a bushel basket. Upon inquiring as to why he considered it essential to his happiness to go about the streets disguised as a camel, Will replied sententiously: "a bile." This, then must be what the urchins mean, "biles." "git a bile yer!"

MAPS.

If we allow plats and charts of small areas to come under the head of maps, then great antiquity must be granted them, for the Egyptian kings have left among their inscriptions rude diagrams of the countries they conquered. It was not, however, until the acceptance of the idea that the earth is a globe, and the consequent invention of latitude and longitude, that maps showing the proper proportions of the various natural and political divisions of the world were made. Even in the sixteenth century a map was published which showed Asia and America as joined on the 38th parallel, or San Francisco and Pekin as united by land and only about 300 miles apart. In the year 1700 the first approximately correct map of the world was published. Now, to such a pitch of accuracy has topographical engineering arrived, and so thoroughly has the face of the globe been explored, that the maps and atlases issued are marvels of accuracy, and as indispensable in a library as is a dictionary. One of the best maps of our country is issued by the Burlington Route, mounted on rollers and ready to hang on the wall. Fifteen cents in stamps sent to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn., will secure one by return mail, and also information as to what is the best line from the Northwest to all principal points East, South or Southwest.

Might or Right.

I have often asked my radical friends what is to be done if, out of every hundred enlightened voters, two-thirds will give their votes one way, but are afraid to fight, and the remaining third will not only vote, but will fight, too, if the poll goes against them. Which has, then, the right to rule? I can tell them which will rule. The brave and resolute minority will rule. Plato says that if one man was stronger than all the rest of mankind he would rule all the rest of mankind. It must be so, because there is no appeal. The majority must be prepared to assert their divine right with their right hands, or it will go the way other divine rights have gone before.

I will not believe the world to have been so ill constructed that there are rights which cannot be enforced. It appears to me that the true right to rule in any nation lies with those who are best and bravest, whether their numbers are large or small, and three centuries ago the best and bravest part of this English nation had determined, though they were but a third of it, that pope and Spaniard should be no masters of theirs.—Froude in Longman's Magazine.

AARON COOKE.

THE S. of V. CAMP-FIRE.

Grand army hall was well filled on Thursday evening to listen to an address by the Department Commander of the Sons, Chas. McColley. The meeting was gracefully presided over by Capt. Wm. Martin, of the Crookston Camp who called upon Lieut. Glenn for a few remarks in behalf of the Camp. The Lieut. responded in a few well-chosen remarks outlining the status of the Camp and its needs—recruits. He was followed by the President of the W. R. C., Mrs. Phœbe Streeter who has labored hard to uphold the corps and place it among the first of the state, and who briefly and eloquently outlined the grand work of the Relief Corps in this community, dwelling upon woman's work in the G. A. R. in a womanly, eloquent maner that won its way to the hearts of her hearers. For Col. Cobham Post the commander of the Post was called upon to act as spokesman, who after rattling about awhile introduced the speaker of the evening, Commander Chas. McColley who gave a fervent burning eloquent address that was listened to with eager attention throughout, outlining the objects of the organization of S. of V., clearly and fluently. Among other things he said that its object was to teach and practice patriotism and he urged every son of a veteran, who had so far failed to join the noble order, to neglect that duty no longer but to join at once and help along that noble work. Many, who were present signified their intention to do so at once. After his address the Relief Corps got in their work by inviting the audience to the hall above where an elegant collation awaited the discussion that it got right speedily and it was crowding 12 o'clock when the bugle sounded "lights out" and all returned to their homes to talk over the events of the evening.

DIED.

At his residence on the farm in Fairfax, three miles from the city on Tuesday morning, May 28th, of paralysis, Aaron Cooke, at the ripe old age of almost 84 years. Aaron Cooke was born in Northampton, Mass., on June 28th 1811 where his early youth was passed. On Oct. 28th 1840 he was united in marriage to Harriet Clarke, at Geneva, New York, whom he survived only a few years she having died on Memorial Day 1890. Four children were born to them two sons and two daughters two of whom, Mrs. M. E. Bartlett and H. E. Cooke are living. In 1851 Mr. Cooke removed with his family to Geneva, and later to Steuben Co., N. Y. where he continued to reside until February 1880, when he came with our mother to make his future home with his sons who were located here. He was a member of the Congregational church of Crookston, and while no person ever heard him utter a prayer or make an open confession of christianity in the church, his whole life was a living embodiment of the true spirit of christianity and during the whole time the writer has known him he has never known him to wrong or defraud one single person, nor to utter one profane or angry word, but his life was one long exemplification of the Golden Rule. Up to Saturday May 18th, he appeared to be in the enjoyment of the most perfect health, and especially during the past winter and spring, but about 4:30 on that day, as he went out of the house to go out to his little garden, the stroke came from which he never recovered, although he rallied somewhat and his mind seemed perfectly unclouded until at the last, when he sank to rest as calmly and peacefully as though going to sleep naturally. Besides his children he leaves to mourn his loss, a grand-daughter Miss Elizabeth Arnold, two sons in law, A. J. Arnold and M. E. Bartlett. Full of years and good deeds he wraps his mantle 'round him and sinks calmly into that deep and dreamless sleep from which no sound shall wake him till the last trump shall sound and the dead shall rise again.

A GENEROUS GIFT

Mr. T. B. Walker has contributed $75 in lumber to the building of the new G. A. R. hall, and offers further to donate a lot if the Grand Army will put its hall upon it, or if they prefer some other location they may sell the lot he gives them and devote the proceeds towards the purchase of such lot. The boys have decided to suspend operations on the hall until they look into this matter and if they can find a suitable lot at proper figures will buy it and move their new building thereon before they put up the chimney and plaster it. They have several eligible lots in view and will decide soon what they will do in the matter. It has been their ambition to own their own home, and this seems to be a most excellent chance to do so.

MEMORIAL SERMON.

Synopsis of the sermon preached by the Rev. L. W. Squier, at the First M. E. church, Sunday night, before the G. A. R., W. R. C. and S. of V.

Text: 2 Sam. 1:27. "How are the Mighty Fallen!"

These are the closing words of the dirge David and his musicians sang over the death of Jonathan. The land of Israel had been racked with civil war. Saul, the proud king, was envious against David, the humble shepherd boy, because of the mighty victories God had given David on behalf of God's host. On Saul's side was the royal army, veterans in the service of the king. On that side also was the resources of the land—the government, the arms, the forts and fortresses. On David's side were only a few friends bound together by a desire to defend the shepherd's life or die with him. Among those who befriended David, though by compulsion following with the royal army, was Johnathan, the King's son and heir to the throne. The friendship that bound him to David was unusual in its strength and sweetness. When the fortunes of war turned at length, as they do when God fights for man, and right subdued might, the army of the king was overthrown and Saul and Jonathan were among the slain. The loss of Jonathan burdened David with a poignant grief. And he closes the funeral dirge with the lament: "O, Jonathan! Slain upon thy high places! I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan! Very pleasant hast though been unto me. Thy love was wonderful, passing the love of women. How are the mighty fallen and the weapons of war perished!"

This lament finds an echo in multitudes of hearts in our land to-day. It is no mere sentiment of custom that moves these veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, with these noble women of the Relief Corps, and these young men of the Sons of Veterans, to assemble in this church to-night for a memorial service. It is more than sentiment. It is friendship; yea, it is love. The friendships of the war are wonderful. Suffering and toiling together in a common cause bound the hearts of these heroes together in a bond that death canot sever. The novelty of being mustered in, the irksomeness of the drill, the pleasure of marching to the front, the camp life with its jokes, its fun, its frolics, the forward march into battle, the roar of the cannon, the rattle of the musketry, the hiss of the shells, the whirr of the bullets, the charge and the counter-charge, now the retreat, then the victory; and after the smoke of battle the ambulance, the hospital, the grave—these experiences have begotten a love in the hearts of the veterans that outlasts time. So to-day the surviving comrades pause in the busy activities of life and religiously commemorate the virtues and the deeds of their fallen friends. And while they respect the memory of those whom heaven mustered out before the war was done, they do not forget those who came through all the hardships and dangers, received their honorable discharge, entered upon the activities of peace, and through the years have one by one heard the bugle call, intended for no ears but theirs, and taken up the march across the lost river, to the eternal encampment beyond. And so to-day, our whole north land is full of the lament: "Oh, my brother, I am distressed for thee! Thy love to us was wonderful! How are the mighty fallen!

Well may every patriot weep for the fallen heroes of the Union army. For they were mighty. The whole world agrees that the Union army of America's civil war was the mightiest army that ever fought for country's flag. To understand and estimate the character of those whom we commemorate in this service, let us analyze that might.

1. The might of the Union Army did not consist in numbers. Armies of ancient and of modern times have contained more men. Two thousand four hundred years ago Xerxes led from Persia into Greece an army that numbered 5,000,000 men. But all the men enlisted on both sides of the civil war would not number nearly as many as this. Napoleon commanded in some of his campaigns more men than were ever under the command of Gen. Grant. And yet the world concedes that in comparison with the Union army, all armies of ancient and modern times are but pygmies.

2. Nor did the might of the Union Army consist in its superior disci-

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 569 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Christian O. Esps and Jessie Esps, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, at 4:30 o'clock p. m., in book 47 of mortgages, at page 9.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of six per centum (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and eleven (11) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment dated April 14th, A. D. 1892, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 448 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000, and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1115.00 being the sum of $1000. principal, and $115.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southwest quarter (SW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty-six (46), containing one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

Dated April 1st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Pierre Lemieux and Philomene Lemieux, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 22nd day of December, A. D. 1887, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, A. D. 1887, at 10:40 o'clock a. m. in book 34 of mortgages on pages 508 &c.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment, dated March 18th, A. D. 1893, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 447 &c.

And whereas default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000 and the interest thereon since December 22nd, 1892, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1163.33, being the sum of $1000. principal, and $163.33 interest, due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northwest quarter (NW¼) of section thirteen (13) in township one hundred and fifty (150), range forty-five (45), containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres more or less, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage, and the debt secured thereby, together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00), attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Andrew H. Arneson, single, as mortgagor, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 1st day of June, A. D. 1888, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 15th day of June, A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 36 of mortgages, at pages 213 &c.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $250.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to H. R. Halloway, by written assignment dated June 28th, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 20th day of February, A. D. 1895, at 8:45 o'clock a. m. in book 68 of mortgages, on pages 389 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $250, and the interest thereon since June 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $281.20 being the sum of $250. principal, and $31.20 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The south half of the northeast quarter (S½ NE¼) of section thirty (30) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty (40), containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any), the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a mortgage containing power of sale dated October 17th, 1889, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota, October 22d, 1889, in book 49 of mortgages, page 15, whereby Carl Johnsen and Kari Johnsen, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to the Middlesex Banking Company, mortgagee, the East Half of the Northwest Quarter and East Half of the Southwest Quarter, of Section Thirty-one (31), in Township One hundred and forty-eight (148), of Range Forty-three (43), in said Polk County, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured thereby, or any part thereof, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date hereof, $331 to which amount should be added the taxes on said property paid by said mortgagee, amounting, with interest, as provided in said mortgage, to $12.60, making the total amount claimed to be due at the date hereof on said mortgage $[illegible].

Now notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises sold at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or his deputy, Saturday June 15th 1895, at ten o'clock A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Crookston in said county, to pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 569 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

"The People Of the Northwest portion of the United States can congratulate themselves on having the elegant travelling accommodations offered by the North-Western line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago which the wealthiest and oldest roads in the effete East have not yet found it possible to excel.—The Times, Monticello, Minn.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Christian O. Espe and Jessie Espe, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, at 4:30 o'clock p. m., in book 47 of mortgages, at page 9.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of six per centum (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and eleven (11) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment dated April 14th, A. D. 1892, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 448 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000, and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1115.00 being the sum of $1000, principal, and $115.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southwest quarter (SW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty-six (46), containing one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

DECORATION DAY.

'Tis lonesome, sort o' lonesome. It's a Sund'y day to me,
It 'pears like, mor'n any day I nearly ever see.
Yit with the stars and stripes above a-flutterin in the air
On ev'ry soldier's grave, I'd love to lay a lily thare.

They say, though, Decoration days is ginerly observed
'Most everywhares—espeshally by soldier boys that's served—
But me and mother's never went—we seldom git away.
In p'int o' fact, we're allas home on Decoration day.

They say the old boys marches through the streets in columns grand,
A-follerin the old war tunes they're playin on the band,
And citizens all jinin in and little children, too—
All marchin under shelter of the old red, white and blue.

With roses, roses, roses—ev'rybody in the town
And crowds o' little girls in white—just fairly loaded down.
Oh, don't the boys know it from theyr camp acrost the hill?
Don't they see theyr com'ardes comin and the old flag wavin still?

Oh, can't they hear the bugul and the rattle of the drum?
Ain't they no way under heavens they can rickollect us some?
Ain't they no way we can coax 'em through the roses jest to say
They know that ev'ry day on earth's theyr Decoration day?

We've tried that, me and mother, whar Elias takes his rest
In the orchard in his uniform and hands acrost his brest,
And the flag he died fer smilin and a-ripplin in the breeze
Above his grave and over that the robin in the trees.

And yit it's lonesome, lonesome. It's a Sund'y day to me,
It 'pears like, mor'n any day I nearly ever see.
Still with the stars and stripes above a-flutterin in the air
On ev'ry soldier's grave, I'd love to lay a lily thare.

VON GRIFF'S SURRENDER.

BY SEWELL FORD.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

All who knew Von Griff, the baker, knew him to be a proud man. Perhaps his pride was so well known because he did not hide it. But concealment was something too subtle for the warm hearted, impetuous German. His likes and his dislikes were as easy to read as the big blue sign above his bakery door. Some there were among his customers whom he treated with open scorn. Yet they were not driven away, for Von Griff's bread was good.

There were several things of which Von Griff was proud, but his ever increasing bank account was not one of them.

Von Griff had a daughter. Rosie was her name. He loved Rosie, and he was proud of her. Von Griff also had a sword. It is not too much to say that he loved his sword, and it is but stating the bare fact to say that he was intensely proud of it.

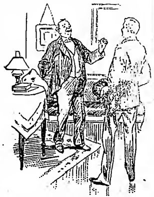
A picture of Von Griff's heart would have revealed two shrines. In one shrine would have been seen his daughter—in the other his sword.

None questioned him his pride in Rosie. There were those, however, who ridiculed his pride in his sword and scoffed at his love for it. The ridiculing and the scoffing took place apart from the presence of Von Griff.

The sword was a huge, wicked looking blade of steel in a brass bound, battered scabbard. It hung by day over the little desk at the end of the bakery counter. At night it was suspended on the wall of Von Griff's chamber and was the first object on which his eyes rested when he woke, as it was the last on which they closed when he lay down to sleep.

All who were friends of his knew the story of that sword, and had admired it. His particular friends had even been allowed to draw the huge blade. This assured them that they stood high in Von Griff's esteem. To these he told stories of his war spent youth, pointed to the white line which started just above his right temple and was lost in the grizzled hair on top of his head, and, with flashing eye and nostrils once more a-quiver, spoke of the field of Sedan, where a French saber had left that mark.

And so it was that many knew the story of that sword. To strangers was pointed out the baker who, as a German soldier, had once met face to face a giant of the terrible Old Guard of Napoleon in deadly conflict and left him with his skull cleft in twain by a single stroke of that big sword. Doubters were shown the very sword and silenced.



"YOU—YOU—YOU VANT TO MARRY MINE ROSIE!"

When Von Griff left the fatherland, his sword was the greater part of his property.

True, there was a tin trunk, and his good wife carried a few precious thalers which the passage money had not absorbed. He had not so much pride in the sword then. But as he prospered in the new land his pride grew, and he fixed it on the cherished blade, and when Rosie grew into a bright eyed, pink cheeked, fluffy haired beauty, she, too, shared in his pride. The hard working mother had died just as the industry of herself and her husband began to bring generous reward.

Von Griff's pride, as has been hinted, was not a purse born pride. Even after he owned two large tenements and two cottages he still lived over his store and wore the same gray clothes

Simple were the habits of Von Griff. He loved to sit, on summer evenings, under the bakery awning, pipe in hand, and gossip with his neighbors. Sometimes he read—always of wars.

It happened that he was thus occupied one evening when Rosie, with sparkling eyes and flushed cheeks, came into the sitting room. He held a magazine in one hand and his long pipe in the other.

"Oh, Rosie, mine dear, come here. I vos reading someding here, und I like you to finish id for me. Eh? That's a good girl."

"All right, papa, after I've"—

"Now, Rosie, now. Let dot vait und read me."

So Rosie, who was a good girl, proceeded to read. It was a story of Gettysburg's fierce fight. The tale was little to Rosie's liking, but she did not hesitate. As she read on and the story pictured that fearful three days' struggle on the hill tops, the warlike baker's blood was stirred. As the story detailed the slaughter in the bloody angle and in the wheatfield, and how Little Round Top was lost and captured again, his eyes flashed with excitement. But it was when the writer told of how, for hour after hour, the troops of both armies lay, face to the ground, while above them flew the iron storm from the opposing batteries, that he was stirred most. Von Griff told himself that not even on the historic field of Austerlitz was there such an awful cannonading. The description of the roar that seemed to shake the earth and sky as well reached him with full force. Had he not known the same terror himself? Heartily he agreed with the writer that the men who stood their ground there and waited during that duel of iron throated monsters until their turn came were indeed brave men and heroes.

"Rosie, dot vos grand, grand, grand!" he exclaimed when she had finished.

"Yes, I know, papa. But now I want you to listen to me. There's some one in the parlor who's coming in to say something to you, and I want you to be real nice to him."

Then she gave her father a kiss and a hug and tripped into the next room.

"Vot is dot you say, Rosie?"

Von Griff could not change the current of his thought so quickly, and Rosie's words were all but lost upon him.

On his mind was still pictured the field of Gettysburg when a young man came in from the parlor.

"Ah, dot vos grand, grand! Heroes dey were, heroes. Yes, und—vell, vell?"

He had realized that some one was present.

"Ah, Meester Fairfieldt. Vell, vot is id now? Vant to dake Rosie to some more dances, eh? My obrachions, but you boys vill turn mine hair vite. Always vanting mine Rosie to go somevere."

"Mr. von Griff," said Jack Fairfield. "I want to ask you something more serious than that this time."

"Vell, vell, oudt with it," said the unsuspecting baker.

"I want—sir, I—I"—

Jack hesitated in spite of himself while he groped for the carefully prepared speech. But it was gone. He could not remember a word of it, and there he was standing stammering like a schoolboy with a half learned lesson.

"Vell, vell," said Von Griff impatiently.

Jack made a last effort to recall that elusive speech and then blurted out, "I want Rosie, Mr. von Griff, for my wife."

"Vat?"

The word seemed to be the result of an internal explosion. The baker had leaned forward in his chair in an effort to rise quickly to his feet, but had failed. All this had added to the lurid color of his face and deducted from his lung power. He made another effort to rise and succeeded.

"Vat!" he exploded again. "You—you—you vant to—to marry mine Rosie?"

"Yes, sir," said Jack, half wondering whether the baker was really going to explode or only choke himself. "She is willing, for I have asked her, and I came to get your consent."

"You—you did, eh? Hah! My consent! Vell, sir, you vill nefer get it—nefer. Vat, mine Rosie marry a jackenapes of a nobody! Mine Rosie"—

"But I'm somebody to Rosie," put in Jack, thinking a little argument might be a relief.

"To Rosie, eh? Hah! But vat are you? Who are you? Answer me dot. Who is your father?"

"You know my father, Mr. von Griff."

"Yes, I know him. He iss another nobody—a nobody, I dell you. Leaf mine house und nefer come here some more. Go avay quick!"

There seemed to be nothing for Jack to do but go. It was very plain that the baker was in no mood for argument, and, much as Jack wished to retort to the statement that he and his father were nobodies, he turned on his heel without a word and left the house.

Jack did not understand the cause of Von Griff's wrath. He looked upon it merely as the temporary ruffling of an old man's temper that a day would smooth out. But Rosie knew better. She fully comprehended the contempt in which her father held those whom he thought were of common clay and far outside the nobility of arms which he had constructed for himself. She knew that his pet project was to take her back to Germany and buy for her an army husband—a creature with waxed mustache, high boots, a clanking sword and epaulets. She realized that her father's money would attract many such and that the giving of her hand in marriage would be only a question of how high a rank the fortune of the rich baker would bring. Rosie did not propose to be made a factor in any such bargain. How to escape it though, she did not know.

Von Griff, after a troubled night, began the day in a passion which was felt by every one within reach of his voice. At last he could contain himself no longer. Putting his broad brimmed brown hat solidly on his head, he started out to find Jack's father.

Now John Fairfield was as quiet and inoffensive as the baker was irascible and pugnacious. As a humble tinsmith, he worked steadily in his little shop day after day, attracting no attention. He was retiring and slow spoken. He seemed to fill a chink in the social scheme—a chink in an out of the way corner. Yet he was not a morose man. He was something of a philosopher in his quiet way, and a cheerful sort of philosophy was his too.

When Von Griff stormed into the tin shop, Fairfield was giving a teakettle an new lease of life by the judicious application of solder.

"Meester Fairfieldt, you haf a son, haf you not?" abruptly began the baker.

"I have," said the tinsmith, suspending operations on the teakettle.

"Und I have a daughter," went on Von Griff. "Your son, Meester Fairfieldt, has asked me for mine Rosie to marry."

"Ah?" said the tinsmith, with a smile.

"Hah, yah!" exploded the baker. "For mine Rosie to marry. Meester Fairfieldt, your son is young. He knows noddings yet. He knows not dot he is a nobodies. See vat he does! He vants to marry the daughter of a Von Griff. Hah!"

The tinsmith smiled placidly at this tirade and put his iron in the blazing charcoal.

"A Von Griff," continued the baker, throwing out his chest and striking it with his clinched fist. "Meester Fairfieldt, I vos a soldtier, und I fights me at Sedan und Metz. Who vos you?"

The tinsmith smiled and took up the teakettle. Turning his back on the baker, he held the kettle to the light and began a search for unwelcome holes. But the baker had not finished.

"Who vos you?" he repeated.

As the tinker did not answer, Von Griff replied to his own question.

"You—you vos—a—dinker—a tam dinker. Und tink you mine Rosie efer marry the son of a dinker? No, py obraclons, never! Meester Fairfieldt, your son petter keep away from mine house. I haf spoken, und I am a man of my vort."

Having thus delivered himself Von Griff turned sharply on his heel.

"Well, I guess Jack can take care of himself," remarked the tinsmith quietly.

"MEESTER FAIRFIELDT," BEGAN THE BAKER.

The baker turned fiercely at the words, glared ferociously at the unruffled object of his anger, and then left the shop.

With many a chuckle Jack's father told him of the baker's visit, and added, "The next time you go courting Rosie Von Griff, you'd better wear a suit of chain armor, my boy."

But Rosie would not let Jack run any such risks. She made him promise not to go near her father until she should give him permission to do so, and to repay him she planned many ingenious meetings. So the courtship went merrily on in spite of Von Griff and his big sword..

May had almost gone and spring was fairly installed in winter's place when one day Rosie met Jack with reddened eyes and serious face.

"Why, Rosie, what's the matter? You've been crying."

"I know I have, and I'm going to make you cry, too," she said dolefully.

"Oh, now don't! Just think, wouldn't I look nice weeping?"

"Now, Jack Fairfield, you just stop making fun of me and listen. Something dreadful's going to happen."

"Well, what is it?"

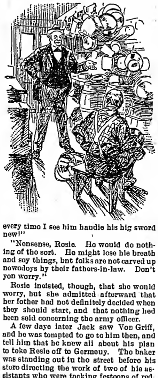
"My papa is going—going—oh, Jack—he's going to take me to Germany and marry me off to an old army officer. There—how do you like that?"

"But he's not going to do anything of the kind."

"Yes, he is. We're to start in June."

"Then we'll be married tomorrow. I'd like to see him take you off to Germany then."

"Oh, Jack, I wouldn't dare do that. He would—oh, he would kill you! I shudder every time I see him handle his big sword now!"



"Nonsense, Rosie. He would do nothing of the sort. He might lose his breath and say things, but folks are not carved up nowadays by their fathers-in-law. Don't you worry."

Rosie insisted, though, that she would worry, but she admitted afterward that her father had not definitely decided when they should start, and that nothing had been said concerning the army officer.

A few days later Jack saw Von Griff, and he was tempted to go to him then, and tell him that he knew all about his plan to take Rosie off to Germany. The baker was standing out in the street before his store directing the work of two of his assistants who were tacking festoons of red, white and blue bunting on the awning. It was the afternoon of the day before Memorial day, and it was in honor of this that the patriotic baker was decorating.

But Jack saw Rosie looking from an upper window, and he contented himself with slyly throwing a kiss in her direction. Rosie hid herself from the view of her father below and threw one back.

When the parade of the veterans passed down the main street of the village the next day, Von Griff's bakery was resplendent with the national colors. What was lacking in taste was made up in lavishness. Flags little and flags big were tacked in rows across the front of the building. The awning posts were swathed in red, white and blue cambric, and there was a big red lettered motto painted on cotton cloth, which read:

"HONOR TO THE HEROES."

Von Griff, the author of all this display, stood under the awning looking happy, and beaming with suppressed enthusiasm.

With a martial roll of drums the parade came down the street. First came the grand marshal on a prancing big gray horse. Then came the local officials, in two open barouches, next the band, and behind, marching with heads erect and in as good time as rheumatism and age stiffened limbs would allow, came the veterans; some in full Grand Army uniform, with white crossed belts over blue suits and brass tipped helmets, and some with only the black slouched hat, ornamented with wreath inclosed post number and the cord and tassel, to denote that they were of those who had fought side by side with those whose graves they had just decorated.

The marshal of the day noticed Von Griff's patriotic display and determined to reward the spirit in which it had been made.

Reining in his gray steed, he wheeled and gave the order to halt. Then bringing the veterans to a company front up and down the street he roared as he waved his sword:

"Com-pan-ee, attention! Sa-a-a-a-alo-o-oot!"

As each veteran swung his right hand up, palm outward, to his hat brim Von Griff, heart swelling and eyes dimmed, drew himself up to the most stiffly martial attitude which his corpulency would allow and returned the salute.

As the veterans again formed into fours and began to march on, Von Griff's gaze fell on a man in veteran's uniform marching modestly in one of the rear ranks. It was John Fairfield.

On the day following the parade the tinsmith was hard at work in his shop when in walked Von Griff.

"Meester Fairfieldt," began the baker, with his usual abruptness, "I am von idiot, und you are von hero. I came here to ask of you your pardons."

"Oh, that's all right," said Fairfield, with a laugh at the baker's earnestness and humility.

"Vill you shake mine handt?"

"Why, of course."

With due formality and solemnity the handshaking was accomplished. But the baker had not finished.

"Meester Fairfieldt," he continued, "yesterday I learn dot you vos a hero. Today I find dot you are also von gentlemane."

"Well, I never considered myself a hero, Mr. von Griff, but I thank you for the latter expression of your esteem," replied Fairfield, still with an amused expression on his face.

"But you are von hero," persisted the baker warmly. "Dey tell me how you fought at Gettysburg. Dot iss enough. Meester Fairfieldt, I vos a soldtier mineself, und I fight at Sedan, but I never fought in von grandt, von terrible struggle like you haf, und vonce more, Meester Fairfieldt, I salute you as vun hero. As for your son, I vant you to say to him dot he iss as welcome in mine house as in his own, und dot when he iss ready vonce more to ask me somedings vich he vonce alretty does I vill be pleased to hear him."

THE supreme court rules that Debs must serve his time in prison. It was the unanimous opinion of the court and ends the matter.

THE president announces that there will be no extra session of congress—and the people will try to worry along somehow without it.

THEY have a habit in England of shutting up in prison their Wilde beasts, that is truly refreshing in this degenerate day and age of the world. Oscar Wilde and his companion in sin will meditate two years in prison.

THE efforts being made by some so-called philanthropists to secure the pardon of the Younger brothers causes us to wonder if somebody will not soon move to obtain a pardon for the Barret brothers? They have "been very quiet and made very little trouble" since they were "placed in confinement," and if pardoned it is positive that they will still continue to be "quiet and respectable," and as these are the only reasons urges for pardoning the Youngers they should be just as strong in one case as the other. Of course the Barrets were HANGED—but the Youngers OUGHT to have been.

MEANS PRACTICAL WORK.

(St. Paul Dispatch.)

The location of an experiment station has been practically assured to Crookston, the people there having complied with the requirements imposed by the agricultural department at Washington, in providing for certain improvements that were made conditions of the location. The donation of 476 acres of land, sixty acres of which are already improved by Great Northern Railroad company, is a splendid investment, not only for the benefit of farmers of the state, but in the immediate interests of the railroad company. The station will show what can be done with the lands along the line of that road, and can thus be made an effective auxiliary in the disposition of unsold lands to settlers. Experimental stations, such as is proposed at Crookston, have been shown to be generally more useful to the farmers as a class, than most of the agricultural colleges, so-called, built and fostered under the land donation act of congress in 1866. In a large number of cases, the amount for which the "agricultural scrip" was sold, has been devoted to general educational purposes, and not for the maintenance of schools specially for agricultural experiments and instruction. The experimental stations are real agricultural colleges, and even more than that to the practical farmer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1895.

Senator Palmer, of Illinois, is in Washington, the principal purpose of his visit being to inform Mr. Cleveland of the total collapse of the administration campaign against free silver in that state, which was inaugurated by Mr. Cleveland's letter to that alleged non-partisan Chicago committee. Incidentally Senator Palmer took occasion to express his opinion of two prominent Illinois Democrats, he accuses of straddling the silver question, in the following language: Nobody expected anything else of Vice President Stevenson, because it is well known that if any question has two sides to it, Stevenson will have no opinion on it. Bill Morrison, however, is not usually so modest, and his position in the beginning was rather surprising, although I think, as affairs are now shaping themselves, he was wise in taking a conservative and noncommittal position. It will give him more influence when the real fighting begins, if it ever does." Speaking of the coming Democratic convention in Illinois Senator Palmer made these paradoxical remarks: "The convention was called for the purpose of endorsing free silver, and the program will be carried out to the letter. There will be a large amount of superfluous enthusiasm, of the manufactured kind, but it will count for nothing. The silver craze is subsiding, and it will continue to subside."

Mr. Cleveland's reports from Kentucky are no more encouraging than those from Illinois. A prominent administration Democrat who has just returned from Kentucky, where he went for the purpose of instigating the free silver strength among the Democrats, says there isn't the slightest doubt of the failure of Secretary Carlisle to stem the silver flood in the party, and that he regards the adoption of a 16 to 1 free coinage platform by the state convention as a certainty. He says also that it would not surprise him to see the Republicans elect a majority of the legislature and a successor to Senator Blackburn. If the administration can control enough votes to prevent, Blackburn will not be reelected, even should the Democrats succeed in retaining control of the legislature.

The administration is now pinning its hopes to the effects of the Memphis "sound money" convention, held this week, upon the Southern Democrats, but it remains to be seen whether these hopes are not of the same soft soap bubble kind as those recently held concerning the defeat of the silver Democrats in Illinois and Kentucky.

Appropriations are to be witheld whenever possible, in order to prevent the calling of an extra session of congress, which Mr. Cleveland acknowledges himself to be afraid of. At the last session of congress $5,000,000 was appropriated to pay deferred sugar bounties. Not one cent of this money has been paid out, and there is little probability that it will be for some time. It is the same with numerous other appropriations.

The annulment of the income tax by the decision of the supreme court has added to the certainty that the next congress will be called upon to provide for additional revenue, in order to furnish the money to meet the enormous deficit which will exist at the close of the present fiscal year, and to prevent a similar deficit during the next fiscal year. A number of ways to do this have already been suggested, but it will not be surprising if the Republicans in congress decide that the best way to raise the money and at the same time boom American industries will be raise the tariff duties upon all articles competing with the products of the United States. That the administration fears this course will be taken is shown by the assertions of its friends that Mr. Cleveland will never sign a bill increasing the tariff duties. Of course they are bluffing, and the bluff will probably be kept up to the last minute for the purpose of influencing the extent to which duties may be raised, but the administration is bound to have more money but it cannot get it without congress. It is probable that Mr. Cleveland will sign any revenue bill that passes congress, although he would do it so very unwillingly if it carried a raise, however slight, of tariff duties. He will have his hands full to pull the government through without having to call an extra session, and by the time the regular session meets he will be glad to accept almost anything that promises to raise the money needed for the expenses of the government.

Justice Jackson wasn't the umpire, after all, in that income tax game, although everybody, himself included, thought he would be when the rehearing was first proposed. Justice Shiras, by exercising the right granted to every man, and taken without asking by every woman, of changing his mind, made himself the umpire and rendered his decision against the tax.

Seat of the Thunder God.

"Trembling mountain," a massive pile of peculiarly arranged rocks lying on Rogue river, almost directly north of Montreal, was known to the Indians by a combination of words signifying "seat of the thunder god." "According to their traditions, the thunder god formerly used a broad and deep indentation on its summit as a seat, and that therein he would sit for three days in spring, seven in summer, five in autumn and two in winter. They also believed that during the time he was present great chasms would open in the side of the mountain, from which fire would stream for hours without ceasing. Nothing is known concerning the early history of the mountain, but it is thought that the legend refers to old time volcanic action, an opinion strengthened by its geographical name of "Trembling mountain."—St. Louis Republic.

SWEET MEMORIES.

THE MELODY GRANDMOTHER SANG FIFTY YEARS AGO.

"As I Lay My Heart on Your Dead Heart, Douglas, Douglas, Tender and True." When Old Age Recalls the Dreams of the Past as Visions, There Is Tragedy.

Three generations sat in the soft glow of the deep crimson lamp shade that mellowed everything in the little parlor. There was one daughter seated at the piano, singing sweet and low. She most of all was glorified by the ruddy rays from the translucent paper that fell over her. There was the mother, and beside her sat the mother's mother, near the circumference of the halo, the one listening with a glow of pride, the other, to whom the girl's voice was new—the grandmother was a visitor at the house—listening as one who hears a voice calling in a lonesome place. She sat there thinking, thinking, thinking, did this dear old soul, of a day when she, too, had sat at the piano herself, so proudly, and had sung the tender ballads of that bygone day with a voice full of passion, a deep contralto voice, one that touched the heart in its most sacred depths, when the strong, clear notes were struck and then broke into a pleading tremolo in the upper register. Fifty years ago that grandam's voice had thrilled hearts now dust, or worse than dust—hearts that were numb to tender things—and there was borne in the burden of her songs one message, that of love—even before her heart had known its meaning her voice had spoken love. The voice of the girl sitting at the piano was like her grandmother's had been. It hunted chords in the hearts of those who heard her and set them pulsing in echo to her own sweet longing that could find no words. God only knows what long, silent, rusted chords she touched with her resonant voice, did this child, in her grandmother's soul.

She sang the simple ballads of the day—"Last Night," "The Clang of the Wooden Shoon," "Marguerite"—and as she sang her mother, to whom the singing was an old story, slipped out of the room—taking all her years with her perhaps—and left them together, together even in youth that sees visions. The young shall see visions, and the old shall dream dreams, saith the prophet. But when, by some magic of a voice or some alchemy of the soul, old age, which has dreamed dreams, sees in one vivid flash of light the dreams of the past as visions—there is tragedy.

The girl under the crimson lamp shade turned idly from leaf to leaf in her portfolio and sang by piecemeal. The elder woman only asked that she keep on singing. She only asked to hear that voice, her own voice, to the very quaver on C. And her dreams were all but visions, and life was all but youth again. There had been a wild song, one that the hearer did not know, and the chorus sobbed out:

Oh, is it forever,
Love, that we must sever,
O love, will you never
Come back again?

And the story that the song told of was of two lovers who had met under the roses and had known "the love of a day, the love of a life." What a swirl of fancies the singing of the child sent eddying through the aged brain! The music did not cease. The girl recalled a sweet old song, a peaceful, sorrowful ditty our grandmothers sang:

Could ye come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,
In the old likeness I knew,
I'd be so faithful, so loving, Douglas, Douglas,
Douglas, tender and true.

The girl sang on until she thought she had tired her grandmother, and then whirling around on the stool she said gayly:

"Well, grandma, how do you like it? Haven't I improved in ten years?"

She rose as she said this, and without even waiting for a reply, as is the way of careless, thoughtless youth, she left the room humming:

Now all men beside are to me like shadows,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

The girl went to her mother, who, she knew, was attending to some duties of the household. The words "all men like shadows" ran through the aged woman's head when the girl left the room, and she was thankful for the child's thoughtlessness which had left her alone for a moment. The spell of the pleading song was upon her. Her life was turned backward.

Young faces smiled at her. She seemed as bold as youth, this shy old woman, who two hours before had been afraid to protest against the overcharge of a cabman. She heard her daughter's steps and the child's in the room above her, and, thrilled with the mesmeric enchantment of the song, she became wrapped in a consuming longing to try if she could not sing the old song again.

She tiptoed about the room, and closing the doors and looking over behind her, she circled to the piano.

She wished to sing out loud something that was in her heart, to put it into words and let it come from her lips. She believed that to say the aching words would ease a throbbing in her heart. She could not at first bring herself to begin the song, so she fumbled among the keys, pretending to hunt for the air, and said the words of the first stanza to herself in silence. She touched the pianissimo pedal of the instrument; then, as her hands upon the keys led her to the second bar, she moaned:

As I lay my heart on your dead heart, Douglas,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

And when she heard the horrid croak of her own voice she remembered—everything. God pitied her and sent her two great tears, tears that were of youth that had been kept sacred through all the years.—Chicago Tribune.

Misery to Follow.

"Maw, what is a horrible example?" asked the youngest boy, looking up from his newspaper.

The eldest boy stop his figuring long enough to say, "Wait till you get into algebra, and you'll find any amount of 'em."—Indianapolis Journal.

MEMORIAL SERMON.

pline. I would not intimate that our armies were wanting in subordination and prompt obedience to their superior officers, but the discipline that obtained was not such as to make each man only a part of a huge machine. This is the ideal of the armies of Europe and Asia. The individul must lose his identity as a man, his personality, and is only worth while because he is a part of the great machine of war, which the commander may wield about as the farmer does his binder. Indeed, in the standing armies of Europe, effort is made to crush out all spirit of individuality. In the standing army of Germany recently, a raw recruit when off duty did something his superior officer did not like. "Why did you do that?" roared the officer. "I thought it wouldn't matter while I was off duty," meekly replied the man. "You thought!" replied the officer. "I'll teach you that I am doing the thinking here," and ordered the poor fellow off to the guard house to take his punishment for the presumption of doing his own thinking. I am glad to say that our army did not consist of mere automatons, called men.

3. But our army, on the contrary, was mighty in the force of its individuality. Our soldiers were MEN. And it is not belittling the officers to say that in the ranks of the private soldiers were men as capable of planning a campaign and leading a command as those whom the government had commissioned. They were men of sound judgment, men of good education, men of business experience, men whom the little red school houses, the academies, the colleges, the universities of the north had taught to do their own thinking. And in more than one place in the war, as in the taking of Lookout Mountain, the private soldier did his own thinking. Gen. Grant, in summing up the Chattanooga campaign, with its succession of wonderful victories, pays a high tribute to the individuality, personality, thoughtfulness of the common soldiers under his command.

4. Our army was mighty in the principles that animated the individual soldier. Our soldiers did not enlist for mercenary purposes. Nor were they moved by the motive of many that followed Napoleon, that of glory; nor was the love of conquest, or thirst for power the principle that led our fathers and brothers to enlist. The only principle that animated them was patriotism. Here were thousands of men in every state of the North, ready to leave home, loved ones, pleasures, joys, comforts and luxuries of life, sacrifice business ventures, duties and prospects, and take up the hardships and dangers of army life, laying on their country's altar their time, their strength, their life, if need be, all to save the Union and perpetuate the blessings of liberty, equality and righteousness, for which this government was established. It is safe to say that not since the Man of Galilee went willingly to His cross on Calvary has there been more unselfish sacrifice than our heroes made in the war.

5. The might of our army consisted in its resources. Not resources of arms and munitions of war. Not resources hoarded and stored to be laid hold of when the war-cloud should finally burst upon the land. It is a matter of history that the leaders of the rebellion had all the arms and equipments of war in their hands. They had the arsenals, the forts. They had all our ships. Moreover, they had all the leading officers of the standing army. So that when President Lincoln called for 90 day volunteers he had no arms for them, no uniforms, no flags, no officers, no rations. And what was worse he had no money to buy equipments. But somehow the soldiers were uniformed, were officered, were armed, were fed. It has been said that necessity is the mother of invention. If this is true, then invention in the Union army had a very large mother. No matter what was wanted, in camp, on the march, in the field, there were always men in the ranks who could do it. And by the time the war was over and the arms and appliances of the Union army and navy became known the whole world of military science took off its hat to the soldiers of the North and proceeded to remodel itself according to the discoveries and inventions that the boys in blue had brought to light.

6. Our army proved itself mighty in victory. This follows necessarily from the analysis that we have made. See the picture as I have tried to outline it before you. Here is the Union army. How beautiful in the light of the morning sun! How splendid the uniforms! How brilliant the buttons and epaulets! How bright the weapons! How handsome the flags and banners! How inspiring the music! And now the order comes: "Forward, march!" Look into the faces of these men as they file away. Every man is a man, strong in his personality, robust in his individuality. On every countenance is the evidence of intelligence, self-reliance, determination. And every heart is a patriot's heart. On they go; company after company, regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade, division after division—mighty as the storm cloud, majestic as a conquerer. Before such might of personality, patriotism, originality, determination, heroism, what could stand? Though they were met with storm of shot and shell, which plows deep furrows in their ranks, the force sweeps onward as invincible as a flood, as irresistable as an earthquake; rifle pits are crossed, ramparts are captured, forts are destroyed, and over the field before them flies the foe, routed in terror and despair. And onward sweeps the mighty host, from Shiloh to Donaldson, from Donaldson to Vicksburg, from Vicksburg to Port Hudson, from Port Hudson to Chattanooga, from Chattanooga to Chicamauga, from Chicamauga to Atlanta, from Atlanta to the sea, to Antietam, to Gettysburg, to Appomatox, and the victory is ours and the war is done.

But of this mighty host 316,000 of the bravest and the best have fallen, But the country is saved, the system of slavery, the sum of all villainies, is destroyed, and the accursed hand of rebellion will not be lifted against our land again. With what gratitude, therefore, do we gather here, thanking God for the gift of the mighty who fought his battle for us. Though they are fallen their work will never fail so long as their comrades live who love them, and their descendants live who love the land for which they fell.

Fortune's Freaks.

Twenty years ago a young man married one of the smartest young ladies anywhere round, and the young couple seemed to start in life with every prospect of happiness. But the girl was ambitions to be rich, and because she was not was very much dissatisfied. After keeping her husband in a peck of trouble for a time she left him and got a divorce. He went into bankruptcy, and she very soon married a wealthy man and rode behind a span in a elegant carriage. Today the former bankrupt is wealthy and prosperous, has a new wife and a happy home. Every comfort surrounds them. His wife of other days now lives in poverty and has to scrub for the bread she eats. Her husband's wealth, under poor management, shrank to worse than nothing. The roses have gone from her cheeks and the light from her eyes. It's as complete a turn around as one ever saw.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Dressing the Small Boy.

A boy of 2½ or 3 three years of age is not too young for kilts and blouses, but do not put him into trousers. Any of the thick flannels or soft cloths that are used for cloaks for little girls will make a suitable coat for him. A coat buttoned down the front, with a deep collar or small caps reaching to the shoulders, is a good style for a boy. Be sure to protect his feet with overshoes and long gaiters when he goes out. It is very important to have the feet warm as well as dry. Neglect of this precaution is apt to bring on an attack of croup in children who are predisposed to it, and it is a fruitful source of colds. A woolen Tam O'Shanter is a pretty head covering when it is not necessary to cover the ears. In that case have a felt hat trimmed with velvet and broad strings to tie under the chin. The three cornered continental hat is still worn and is very picturesque.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Woman's Bible.

(Duluth News-Tribune.)

A bible for women is the newest venture toward the emancipation of the sex. From all accounts the effort is really serious and we may soon expect the scriptures which have been carefully preserved during eighteen centuries to appear in strange form. Just what the new woman objects to in the present version is not entirely clear and there s a vagueness concerning charges to be made. One thing, however, is plainly asserted. The bible does not give woman a place such as she deserves. This it is kindly explained is not due to providence, but is the fault of selfish men, who in their various transactions have twisted and perverted the original text for the purpose of putting the sterner sex to the front and of oppressing and suppressing long suffering woman kind.

Many women are to have a hand in the work of the new translation. It has not been fully decided whether or or not the order of creation will be reversed and Adam be given the second place among human beings or not, but this is not likely. No effort to prove that Solomon was a woman masquerading in accordance with the prejudices of the times is probable, but this is not impossible. The new bible, when in its completed state it represents woman's ideal of what woman should have been during the days of sacred history, is certain to be a volume fearfully and wonderfully made.

But why pause with the bible? Why not a woman's history of the world? If we are to have Christ's sermon on the Mount as revised by Rev. Olympia Brown or Lady Somerset, why not a new history of Rome, a new story of the middle ages and a new record of all civilization as compiled by women, to do justice to their sex? If a man has not hesitated to tamper with the most sacred literature we know, it is likely he has stayed his hand in the domain of mere secular history? True, he has given a place to Elizabeth, Joan of Arc and Anne of Austria. But what, after all, is the position they hold? Think of Cæsar, Hannibal, Napoleon, Louis the Grand and thousands of other men who strut across the pages of history because it is men and not women whose patient effort and whose great ability have given to the world graphic pictures of the past. Woman has held her peace long enough. Her voice and rule have been confined to the fireside. By all means let her take her proper place. Tear down every tradition of history, destory our most cherished ideals, revise the bible even, but give woman what she wants.

W. F. Arnold returned from McIntosh on Friday where he had been for a week or so establishing grades and laying out streets.

News was received here from Ada on Monday that Uncle Johnny Ward was not expected to live. Rev. Fr. Murphy went down at once.

It is said that Alex McKinnon purchased 2,800 acres of land, improved farms, last week. Sandy seems to have faith in Polk county dirt.

August Wentzel was up from the farm near Fisher on Thursday of last week. Thinks the crops were not materially damaged by frost.

Next Sunday at the Congregational church the day of Pentecost will be observed. For the evening the subject will be "The 20th Century's Call to Young Men of the Northwest."

W. E. Walker, who has been so seriously ill as to necessitate absolute quiet, has so far recovered as to be able to see his friends and sit up a little. His case at one time was considered extremely critical.

F. E. Hertz last week purchased the stock of boots and shoes of Carl Riedesel and will continue the business at the old stand. Mr. Hertz is a good business man and should make a success from the start.

Notice the great slaughter sale of shoes elsewhere in this issue and go to Carl Reidesel's old place on Main street and see what Frank Hertz can do for you. Now ready for business.

The decorations at the M. E. church on Sunday night were lovely and appropriate. There were flowers in great profusion, while everywhere that a flag could be put up, there it waved in all its grandeur.

Paties from the Sioux Falls were in the city last week looking the ground over with a view to building a grist-mill here. They were very favorably impressed with the prospects and will build if they can make the necessary arrangments.

Dan McKinnon has changed the name of the Ideal restaurant. We have often wonderd why he did not strike this gait before, as while Dan cannot keep anything but an "Ideal" restaurant the reputation he has made in that line is better than any mere name.

Last week we were told that Sandy McKinnon had sold a carload of wheat at 70 cents, and a few minutes thereafter was told that he had bought 2800 acres of land. Hoot, mon, ye no want to buy up the whole county just because your shorthorns have one inning!

Elsewhere in this issue we present our readers with a synopsis of the eloquent words spoken by Rev. L. W. Squier at the Memorial services at the M. E. church on Sabbath evening. The house was crowed to suffocation and many who would have liked to hear it were unable to get in.

Louis Fontaine met with quite an accident out at his farm last week by which he nearly lost the use of an eye. He was watching a stone mason at work when a small piece flew and hit him in the eye causing considerable pain but, fortunately, no serious injury. He was, however laid up a day or so.

One day last week one of the Horton boys, living at Maple Bay, saw a couple of young wolves playing about, and watching them saw where they went when they went home. He set to work to dig them out, and instead of only two he dug out six fine, strapping fellows, which he brought in on Monday to get the bounty on.

Mrs. Smith, mother of Mrs. T. A. Harris suffered a paralytic stroke on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Harris were about to start for G. A. R. hall to attend the morning church service when the unfortunate event occured and Mrs. H. was obliged to remain at home to care for her mother. It is thought that Mrs. Smith will recover.

Commander Hilliard of the Fosston Post came down on Thursday evening, over-land, bringing along with him the S. of V. Department Commander, Chas. McColly. The comrade takes great interest in G. A. R. matters up there and is a host in himself——a royal worker and is meeting with deserved success. A camp of S. of V. was organized there while Commander McColly was present.

A much needed rain set in on Friday morning which will have a tendency to revive the barley and flax that had been hurt by frost for which grave fears had been felt. It is the opinion that the good soaking they received will bring them out, if not all right at least with far less loss than was threatened. Everybody says: "just what was needed."

"School Day" will be observed at the First M. E. church next Sunday at 11 a. m., the pastor, L. W. Squier, will preach on "Christianity and our Common Schools." At 8 p. m. sermon before the Graduating class of the High school, on "Strength Crowned with Beauty." For this service a fine musical program is being arranged, with members by some of the leading singers of the city.

On Saturday night Otto Pless arrived from Hallock with the remains of his brother, William, who died at that place last week. Mr. Pless was the head miller of the Hallock Roller Mills, and owned a share therein. He was a young, unmarried man, and very highly respected in the community. Was from New Ulm, formerly, and his remains have been taken there for interment.

Ole P. Renne and wife came up from Rindal on Thursday last to transact some business and to see the new Krohn baby of which they are the happy grandparents. Mr. Renne estimates that the frost has done some damage down his way; thinks grain was farther along hence more liable to be nipped. He thought unless rain came soon many pieces of barley would have to be re-sown.

It is a great mistake to suppose that a simple tonic gives strength; it only stimulates the stomach to renewed action. To impart real strength, the blood must be purified and enriched, and this can only be done by such a standard alterative as Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The news from Dr. Denniston, who went below for an operation, last week, is encouraging, leading the genial doctor's many friends in this community to hope for the best. The operation, which was an extremely difficult one, was successfully performed at 3 o'clock on Sunday and at last accounts the patient was doing as well as could be expected, and unless peritonitis sets in he will soon be able to return to his home.

We present our readers with much Memorial matter this week that will prove interesting to all nearly equally alike. To the old soldier on account of the old-time songs of the camp and bivouac——to others as a glimpse of army life seen through the distance, to all us an incentive to that patriotic life without which a nation could not long exist. The boys no doubt will file away their copy so as to preserve those songs.

Rudy Burkhart has rented and will take possession of the Germania hotel about June 1st. His father will take personal charge of the Cleveland house. Rudy has proved a very popular landlord and will without doubt meet with the success in the new house that he did in the old. Everybody likes Rudy for his genial good nature which is quite an essential thing in a manager of a home for the traveling public.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

The owner of one of the choicest farms in this vicinity has placed in our hands for sale his choice farm near this city and offers it at a price that will sell to any person who wants a farm, has a little money to invest and knows a good thing when he sees it. A good opportunity is here presented to any one who wants to step right into a good business. Call on or address with stamp for reply, JOURNAL office, Crookston, Minn.

W. D. George, an old-time Camillas, N. Y. boy, gave this office a pleasant call on Thursday. W. D. arrived in St. Paul in 1872 and has been a resident of this state ever since up to within a short time when he went to Chicago to accept a position as commercial traveler for a large house there. Mr. George used to make this city in the interests of a St. Paul house in the '70s since when he has not been here till the other day and says he finds wonderful changes.

I now have money again to loan on good improved farms.

FOSSTON ITEMS

(From the Thirteen Towns.)

George Dunlavy announces the arrival of a young daughter at his house Thursday morning.

A young daughter now just four days old, claims a share G. N. agent Hebard's time these days.

Geo. F. Carpenter, of Crookston is in town on business connected with the local branch of the Larson & Carpenter company.

H. F. Brown, the Crookston cigar manufacturer, was in town Tuesday taking orders for the famous "Select" and "Broadway Boquets."

Chas. Conger and Wm. Arnold drove up from McIntosh on Sunday afternoon. The latter has been laying out some new street grades in that village.

The match game of baseball played at McIntosh last Friday resulted in a victory for the Fosston team. The score of runs and errors on both sides was immense.

Mrs. J. E. Campbell has been confined to the house with sickness during the past few days.

Lewis Lohn was called away by a telegram on Monday morning from West Mitchell, Ia., which conveyed the news of the serious illness of his mother at her home, that place. It was feared that her sickness would prove fatal.

Shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon the stables belonging to O. F. Carver, in the rear of his residence on Harrison avenue, caught fire and before the department could arrive on the scene were enveloped in flames. The main barn which was 48x18, made a very hot fire and it was only with the greatest exertion that a much more serious fire was prevented. If the wind had been blowing hard, no amount of work by the department with the apparatus at their command could have saved the residence on that side of the avenue along the whole block. As it was, Mr. Carver's dwelling was scorched on the side next to the fire and Mr. Brandt's fine new residence was twice on fire, and it is only by a miracle that Henry Larson's house was not burned to the ground. Fortunately the lake near by furnished plenty of water and there were many willing workers to carry pails and man the pump. Mr. Carver lost his barns, a quantity of feed, blankets, etc., but the horses and cattle were removed before it was too late. A large number of outsiders who were in town lent valuable assistance. No insurance was carried on the property destroyed. The origin of the fire is not known.

FERTILE ITEMS.

[From the Journal]

Rev. H. P. Fisher, of Crookston, preached at the Congregational church in Fertile Tuesday night.

Considerable building must be going on in the country as our lumber merchants are doing a big business in that line.

The race track was put into shape this week for the training of our flyers that will be put in the races at Crookston and East Grand Forks next month.

J. C. Johnson expects to commence work on his new block soon. Mr. Johnson will build a double brick store building and it will have all the latest improvements.

John E. Ophegaard, the efficient county commissioner of this district, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Tilda Thompson, an estimable young lady of Erskine, at that place last Saturday.

Maple Bay Items.

Rev. R. P. Upton left on Monday for Lake Park. He has been an earnest worker here and we are sorry to lose him.

Judge Benson and Oscar Lindqvist spent Sunday at the lake.

They are making arrangements for a grand 4th of July celebration, with S. M. Owen for orator of the day.

Fertile was well represented at the Bay Sunday every-body and his family were up for a day's fishing all report a good time and lots of fish.

Mr. R. G. Spence and family spent Sunday with relatives at the Bay.

V. Godfrey had a sheep killed by a wolf one day last week.

McINTOSH ITEMS.

[From The Tribune.]

Prof. J. F. Hetler, of Fisher was in town Saturday.

Frank Gravel was over from Crookston Saturday.

On Wednesday evening, Nils Larson, of Sletten, accidentally broke his leg, when on his way home from town. Dr. McEachran was called, and he set the leg.

Each of the section foremen, with headquarters at McIntosh, have a crew of 7 men, which, together with the two foremen, make a total of 19 men. Each crew will put in upward of 4,000 new ties.

The saw mill belonging to Lars Lands, in Queen, was totally destroyed by fire last week. About 50,000 feet of lumber was burned, this being the property of different farmers around the country, among them being M. L. Lindfors, who lost 6,000 feet. There was no insurance.

(From the Times.)

Died at the home of his father, on Thursday last, Joseph, the 19 year old son of Hans Imsdahl.

Attorney Walseth, of Fertile, who has been visiting his farm in the town of Chester, is in the city today.

The late extended snap of cold weather has done some good at least. It has killed the wild buckwheat.

C. F. Page made a business trip to Crookston Tuesday and returned Thursday.

County Supt. McCrillis passed through the city Saturday on his way east on a school visiting expedition.

The Fosston and McIntosh scrubs crossed bats on the diamond here Friday and played each other to a finish. The game resulted in a score of 61 to 40 in favor of Fosston. The Fosston boys played White Earth at Rice River Sunday.

Your Physical Condition.

Needs attention at this time. If you are tired, weak and nervous, it is clear that your blood is impure, and without doubt there has been too much over-work or strain on brain and body. The course of treatment for such a condition is plain and simple. The blood must first be purified so that the nervous system, and in fact all the organs will be fed upon pure blood. Intelligent people without number have testified that the best blood purifier, nerve tonic and strength imparting medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Nervousness, loss of sleep and general debility all vanish when Hood's Sarsaparilla is persistently taken; in a word, health and happiness follow after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

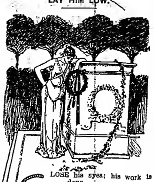
LAY HIM LOW.



Close his eyes; his work is done.
What to him is friend or foeman,
Rise of moon or set of sun,
Hand of man or kiss of woman?
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

As a man may he fought his fight,
Proved his truth by his endeavor.
Let him sleep in solemn night,
Sleep forever and forever.
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

Fold him in his country's stars,
Roll the drum and fire the volley.
What to him are all our wars?
What but death bemocking folly?
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

Leave him to God's watching eye,
Trust him to the hand that made him.
Mortal love weeps idly by.
God alone has power to aid him.
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

ROMANCE OF A NUN.

Her Northern Lover Shot as a Spy by His Southern Rival.

"One day I was strolling through the orange fields of a place on the gulf of Mexico," said M. P. Corcoran of New Orleans, "with Father Bally when we suddenly approached the figure of a nun. She was tall and shapely, and though her face was perfectly white her beauty was such that I paused involuntarily and exclaimed, 'There is a picture for an artist.'

"Father Bally returned dryly that hers was not physical beauty, but beauty of the soul. I replied that I could well believe that, having looked for a moment into her dark, soulful eyes. I saw her frequently thereafter and had no difficulty in learning of her past, for every one seemed to be acquainted with her romantic career.

"Before the war she was the only daughter of an extremely wealthy planter and lived in one of the large, handsome homesteads which then were so often seen in the land of Dixie. She had been educated in Paris and had acquired all the graces which are supposed to accompany a perfect education in the fine arts. As she was an heiress she had many admirers, one of whom was a southerner, while another lived in the north, having met the accomplished girl in Paris. There was a hot race for her hand, but her heart evidently inclined to the latter suitor, who was graceful and talented and altogether a worthy young fellow. The southerner witnessed his rival's success with much chagrin, and when the announcement of the engagement was made he was heard to remark that he would kill his hated rival at the altar. However, the wedding bells did not ring, for war troubles were imminent. The lovers took a sorrowful farewell, vowing to be loyal to each other, though he perforce was going to join the ranks of the enemy of the south and assist in putting down the Confederacy.

"The denouement to the story was sad and startling. One day a man, worn out and travel stained, sought refuge at the house and was admitted into the young woman's presence. She gave a cry of rapture, for it was her northern lover, and then exclaimed with consternation:

"'How did you get here?'

"'By crossing the line.'

"'But if you are found here they will kill you.'

"'I could not resist seeing you.'

"Then, in an agitated manner, she informed him that a detachment of southern soldiers was encamped beyond the small wood and that the officer in command was his former rival.

"At this moment the door was burst open, and a number of soldiers entered the room.

"'Ah, here is the spy!' said a voice. It was the southern rival.

"The young woman threw herself before the southerner.

"'You know he is no spy!' she exclaimed.

"'Well, he will be shot as one.'

"'Have you no mercy?'

"'What mercy have you had for me? He shall die like a dog!'

"'See,' she implored. 'I beg on my knees. Could you not withdraw your men or so arrange it that he may return?'

"'Possibly I could.'

"'And you will?'

"'On one condition.'

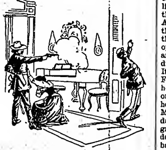
"'Name it!'

"He bent over her and whispered in her ear.

"'Never!' she exclaimed.

"'Then he shall die.'

"'Not as a spy!' exclaimed the northerner, rushing for the window. There was a sharp report. The northerner staggered, placed his hands to his breast, and then fell to the floor, dead, shot by his rival before the eyes of the young women who had been the occasion of the bitter vendetta. She became a nurse and after the war retired to a convent, where doubtless she still cherishes the memory of her lover.



THERE WAS A SHARP REPORT.

A CAVALRY CHARGE.

BY M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

We had been held in reserve on the second day at Gettysburg so long that men and horses became nervous and afraid. My horse was an old veteran who would drop his head and pick at the green grass with a battery firing on either side of us, but as the moments dragged away on this occasion he evinced a woman's nervousness. I looked down the lines and saw that the alignment was constantly being broken by the horses backing up or forging ahead. They could see the fighting to the right and in front, and the smoke from the Union battery to the left and in front of us drove back and over us and the horses breathed it in and blew it out of their nostrils in gasps.

A tremor of excitement—a sort of shiver—ran down the line.

The wind had shifted a bit to blow the smoke to our left, and down across the meadows we saw the Confederate cavalry forming, with the green woods for a background. Jeb Stuart's men were there, Ashby's men, men from Hampton's legion, Imboden's Virginians, Rosser's rangers, guerrillas from Mosby's command. There were fragments from every cavalry command we had met on the turnpikes of old Virginia, and there wasn't a squadron which wouldn't stand for a charge. The battery began firing more rapidly, and there wasn't a man of us who did not realize what was coming long enough before we got the word. Some of the horses knew it too. You could feel them filling their lungs and stringing up their nerves for hard work.

"They are going to charge our battery!" was the exclamation on every man's lips, but we could not be sure of just the part we were to play in the affair. If dismounted and used as infantry to support the guns, we could make a desperate fight of it, and for several minutes we listened to hear such an order given. During this time an aid rode up with an order to the colonel. It was an order from the general to retire the battery. It had come too late. Some of the battery horses had been killed and a number of others wounded by the explosions of the big shells thrown at us from the woods behind the Confederate cavalry, and the way to the rear was also blocked by the ammunition wagons which had come up. The battery would be lost or saved right where it stood.

At the end of five minutes, while we yet sat waiting, the troopers in gray wheeled into line under a fire which must have tried the nerves of the bravest, and then the compact mass got the word to advance. They were coming for our battery, which was without infantry supports. There we stood, two thin, short lines, representing a thousand dragoons, but not numbering one-half of that figure, and a body of five to one was moving down upon us. I saw several of the gunners look back. They saw the odds and wondered perhaps why we did not run away.

"CHARGE!"

"Attention!"

We had obeyed the order before it was given.

"Right dress!"

We were a few seconds ahead of the command.

"Forward—draw sabers—guide right—trot!"

Ah! We are off! The gray moves north and the blue moves south. We are going to meet in the meadow below. We must hold them back until infantry supports can be brought up. Every man knows that he is moving down into a maelstrom of death, but no one lags. A strange exultation creeps into the heart. It is as if you had heard some grand, good news, and wanted to shout over it and tell everybody of your good luck.

"Gallop—charge!"

Death? Why, if one could die a score of times instead of only once, there would be no fear. I sit so lightly in the saddle that my horse seems to have no weight to carry. He skims over the ground as if he had wings, and I begin cheering and yelling in chorus with my comrades. It is a living missile of 500 men thrown at the front of 3,000. What a crash there will be! How horses will go down and men pitch from their saddles! Afraid? No! Why, man, I would not miss this scene for a year's life! My hand clutches the saber with a strength I did not know I possessed. I feel a hunger for blood such as I never felt before.

"Yi, yi! Whoop—rah!" and we strike them fair in the center. The 500 have the greatest momentum, and we drive through the 3,000 as a wedge is pounded into soft wood. Men strike at me. There is a flash, flash, and a pop, pop, of pistols. I strike back. I feel the desire of the tiger to slay.

"Rally!"

We have driven through the mass, and the bugles sound the call to gather for the return. The horses obey it without a touch of the rein. It seems that the whole living mass is riding in a circle, and that there is blood on every man and horse. All of a sudden we shoot out from under the smoke cloud into the sunshine—not the 500, but the 300—and the battery opens again. We are to the right of it, and it sends grapeshot into a wild mob to drive it back into the cover of the woods. It is a sight to look down over that field. Five hundred dead and wounded men and horses are lying there. It is only as I sit on my horse and look over the field that I begin to feel weak and grow frightened. My head begins to swim, things grow dark, and some one helps me to the ground. I have a pistol ball in my shoulder, and the blood is running down my back from a saber cut on the head.

Not Forgotten.

When the sun sinks to rest on Memorial day, lighting with red flashes the green hills of May, wherever the dust of a soldier awaits the call of Gabriel's bugle there will flutter a fresh flag and bloom a wreath of flowers. Man dies, soldier and civilian, in war and peace, but the memory and gratitude of the nation live and will live till republics are no more and the earth is rolled together like a scroll.

MUSIC OF THE WAR

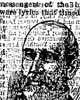
Soul Stirring Songs That Inspired the Soldiers.

PRODUCTS OF FERVENT PATRIOTISM.

Sentimental, Humorous and Purely Patriotic—Authors of "The Battle Cry of Freedom," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "My Maryland" and "The Bonnie Blue Flag."

The songs of a nation are among the most enduring of its memories, and in time of war are the most potent of its moral influences. Frenchmen are moved by "The Marseillaise," Germans are aroused to fighting enthusiasm by "The Watch on the Rhine," Englishmen have marched to battle singing "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the Queen," and we have all read how "Annie Laurie," begun by a sentinel on his post, swept in grand chorus through the British camp in front of Sevastopol. The favorite of the Italian is known as "The Garibaldian Hymn," while we Americans recognize the loftiest and purest patriotism in the stirring measures of our own "Star Spangled Banner."

Nevertheless it is noteworthy that no great war song ever has been written by a great poet. Its melody and verse have been rather the inspired product of fervid patriotism than of the studied effort of genius. During the first three years of the late war thousands of verses were composed by earnest men and women in both the north and south, but how few among these winged messengers of the brain survive! There were lyrics that timed the march to battle, war slogans that rang out like the inspiring rat-a-tat of a drum and elegies that recited the virtues of the hero dead, yet the memory of most of them passed away with the generation that saw their birth. Of those that have lingered longest and bid fair to become a permanent heritage of the struggle brief mention may be here made.



GEORGE F. ROOT.

Opinions will vary as to the degree of their popularity or order of merit, but several will always retain their old ring and make the pulse beat faster wherever veterans of the war are assembled. No one, for instance, will deny a place of honor to "The Battle Cry of Freedom."

It was one of several songs written by George F. Root, a composer and publisher of many other beautiful songs and ballads prior to 1861, and was first sung by the celebrated Hutchinson family at a mass meeting in the city of New York. Mr. Root was born in Sheffield, Mass., Aug. 30, 1820, and as an evidence of his virility the incident may be related that as recently as January of the present year, at a military entertainment in Chicago, the venerable maker of [illegible] music, gray haired, yet alert, [illegible] and in a strong voice sang his own patriotic rallying song. At the end of each verse he was cheered to the echo, and not content with that the audience took the words out of the mouths of the army of singers and joined enthusiastically in the chorus.

The story has been printed that during the desperate fight in the Wilderness, May 6, 1864, a Federal command was driven back in disorder with heavy loss. Reforming, it prepared once more to confront the enemy. At this moment some of the men of the Forty-fifth Pennsylvania began to sing:

We'll rally round the flag, boys, rally once again.

The refrain was taken up by other regiments in line of battle, and, with recovered spirits, the previously disheartened boys dashed back into the thick of the fight. The original words are as follows:

Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys,
We'll rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.
We will rally from the hillside,
We will rally from the plain,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

CHORUS.

The Union forever, Hurrah! boys, hurrah!
Down with the traitor, up with the star,
While we rally round the flag, boys,
Rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

We are springing to the call
Of our brothers gone before,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom,
And we'll fill the vacant ranks
With a million freemen more,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

We are marching to the field, boys,
Going to the fight,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom,
And we'll bear the glorious stripes
Of the Union and the right,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

If we fall amid the fray, boys,
We will face them to the last,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom,
And our comrades brave shall hear us
As we are rushing past,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

Another of the numerous war songs written by Mr. Root and which acquired a popularity that has not yet passed away is known wherever the English language is spoken as

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP, THE BOYS ARE MARCHING.

In the prison cell I sit,
Thinking, mother, dear, of you,
And our bright and happy home so far away,
And the tears they fill my eyes,
Spite of all that I can do,
Though I try to cheer my comrades and be gay.

CHORUS.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching;
Cheer up, comrades, they will come,
And beneath the starry flag
We shall breathe the air again
Of the free land in our own beloved home.

In the battle front we stood,
When their fiercest charge they made,
And they swept us off, a hundred men or more,
But before we reached their lines
They were beaten back, dismayed,
And we heard the cry of vict'ry o'er and o'er.

So within the prison cell
We are waiting for the day
That shall come to open wide the iron door,
And the hollow eye grows bright,
And the poor heart almost gay,
As we think of seeing home and friends once more.

[illegible]

I am thinking most of you.

While upon the field we're watching
With the enemy in view,
Comrades brave around me lying,
Filled with thoughts of home and God,
For well they know that on the morrow
Some will sleep beneath the sod.

[illegible]

Farewell, mother, you may never
Press me to your heart again;
But oh, you'll not forget me, mother,
If I'm numbered with the slain.

Oh, I long to see you, mother,
And the loving ones at home,
But I'll never leave our banner
Till in honor I can come.
Tell the traitors all around you
That their cruel words we know,
In every battle kill our soldiers
By the help they give the foe.

Hark, I hear the bugle sounding.
'Tis the signal for the fight.
Now, may God protect us, mother,
As he ever does the right.
Hear the "Battle Cry of Freedom,"
How it swells upon the air!
Oh, yes, we'll rally round the standard
Or perish nobly there.

"JOHN BROWN'S BODY."

After the execution of John Brown at Harper's Ferry, in December, 1859, a song was adopted that speedily became a part of the marching music of the armies of the north. Its catchy phrases were not only familiar around the firesides of the country, but in all public gatherings where music was wont to inspire the multitude. It relieved the tedium of camp life, and as it resounded through columns of men tramping patiently along the dusty highways it lightened the weariness of their footsteps.

It is said that the words, with the exception of the first stanza, were written by Mr. Charles S. Hall of Massachusetts, but long before the war the air, wedded to other words, was familiar on every plantation in the south. It was the favorite camp meeting melody of the negroes, and few spectacles were more inspiring than when, with grotesque gestures, they joined in singing (the women first):

Say, my bruddors, will we meet yo'?
Say, my bruddors, will we meet yo'?
Say, my bruddors, will we meet yo'?
On Ca-ni-yun's happy sho'?

Then the men responding:

Ya-a-s, my sistern, we will meet yo',
Ya-a-s, my sistern, we will meet yo',
Ya-a-s, my sistern, we will meet ye',
Where partin is no mo'.

CHORUS.

Glory, glory, hallelujer! Glory, glory, hallelujer!
Glory, glory, hallelujer! On Ca-ni-yun's happy sho'.

The war song is as follows:

John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
His soul is marching on.

CHORUS.

Glory, halle-hallelujah! Glory, halle-hallelujah!
Glory, halle-hallelujah!
His soul is marching on!

He's gone to be a soldier in the army of the Lord (thrice),
His soul is marching on.

John Brown's knapsack is strapped upon his back (thrice),
His soul is marching on.

His pet lambs will meet him on the way (thrice),
As they go marching on.

We will hang Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree (thrice),
As they go marching on.

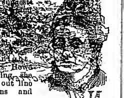
Now, three cheers for the Union (thrice),
As we are marching on.

[illegible] Glory, halle-halle-luiah!
Glory, halle-hallelujah!
Hip, hip, hip, hurrah!

"THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC."

For loftiness of sentiment "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" will easily take rank with the grandest of our martial songs. Having been sung many times during the war, and under a variety of circumstances, a description of the manner in which it was composed by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe will be of interest.

Being in Washington near the end of the year 1861, she witnessed a review of the Union troops on the Virginia side of the Potomac and was deeply impressed by her experience. In the return journey to the city a number of war songs were sung, among others "John Brown's Body," whereupon one of the party suggested [illegible] That night, while Mrs. Howe was resting, she thought out line after line and verse after verse of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and with the inspiration yet warm sprang from her bed and committed the patriotic stanzas to paper. They are as follows:



JULIA WARD HOWE.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord.
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.

I have seen him in the watchfires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps;
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel:
"As ye deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal;
Let the hero born of woman crush the serpent with his heel,"
Since God is marching on.

He has sounded forth a trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat;
Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer him; be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me;
As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

WE ARE COMING, FATHER ABRAHAM.

[illegible] above title [illegible] President Lincoln's call for 300,000 volunteers to swell the army, and it doubtless contributed to that result.

At first the stanzas appeared anonymously in the New York Evening Post of July 16, 1862, and the authorship was attributed to William Cullen Bryant and then to Julia Ward Howe. Subsequently it became known that the author was Mr. James Sloane Gibbons, a native of Wilmington, Del., but a resident of New York city. He was an ardent abolitionist and for a time was one of the editors of The Antislavery Standard. The words are as follows:

We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more,
From Mississippi's winding stream
And from New England's shore.
We leave our plows and workshops,
Our wives and children dear,
With hearts too full for utterance,
With but a silent tear.
We dare not look behind us,
But steadfastly before—
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.

CHORUS.

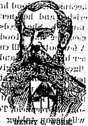
We are coming, we are coming,
Our Union to restore;
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.

If you look across the hilltops
That meet the northern sky,
Long, moving lines of rising dust
Your vision may descry,
And now the wind an instant
Tears the cloudy veil aside
And floats our spangled flag
In glory and in pride,
And bayonets in the sunlight gleam,
And bands brave music pour.
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.

"MARCHING THROUGH GEORGIA."

Although written late in the war, probably no song commemorating the struggle or intended to inspire the troops has a stronger foothold in the hearts of the people than "Marching Through Georgia." In the very melody is an expression of enthusiasm that even after 30 years makes the song dear to the hearts of the old soldiers and sets their feet to keeping time with the music. That the sentiment of the Grand Army of the Republic is in its favor was well illustrated by an old backwoodsman in an Ohio post. He was dressed, so the story goes, in a faded suit of homespun, and his shaggy head was surmounted by a greasy broadbrimmed hat. In his right hand he was carrying a small sized cord wood stick as a cane. But after he had traveled a couple of miles it was plain that the strain was beginning to tell on the old fellow.

He was traveling at a go as you please rate, when his commander, anxious to make a good appearance with his post on dress parade, stepped up to him and said, "Say, Tom, keep step; you are throwing out the whole line."



HENRY C. WORK.

"Cap, how kin a feller keep step to that music?" he replied, pointing to the band leading the line with one of the popular airs of the day. "Why don't they play something like this?" and he hummed, in a voice husky and scratchy and out of tune, a strain from "Marching Through Georgia."

The captain laughed and turned away, held a moment's conversation with the leader of the band, and the introductory notes of the next piece caused the old fellow to straighten up. His cudgel waved about like the baton of a drum major, and a little later a thousand feet were coming down as one, the fatigue of the march was forgotten, and a thousand voices were joined in the rousing chorus. The words of the famous song were written by Henry C. Work. He was born in Middletown, Conn., in 1832 and died in Hartford June 8, 1884.

Bring the good old bugle, boys, we'll sing another song,
Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along,
Sing it as we used to sing it—
Fifty thousand strong—
While we were marching through Georgia.

CHORUS.

Hurrah! Hurrah! we sing the jubilee!
Hurrah! Hurrah! the flag that makes us free!
So we sang the chorus from Atlanta to the sea,
While we were marching through Georgia.

How the darkeys shouted
When they heard the joyful sound!
How the turkeys gobbled
Which our commissary found!
How the sweet potatoes even
Started from the ground
While we were marching through Georgia!

"Sherman's dashing Yankee boys
Will never reach the coast!"
So the saucy rebels said,
And 'twas a handsome boast.
Had they not forgot, alas,
To reckon with the host,
While we were marching through Georgia.

So we made a thoroughfare
For freedom and her train,
Sixty miles in latitude,
Three hundred to the main.
Treason fled before us,
For resistance was in vain,
While we were marching through Georgia.

"WHEN JOHNNY COMES MARCHING HOME."

A favorite among the boys in the army as well as in the social circle at home is known far and near by the above title. The song was written by the late Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, famous as the leader of the band which bears his name. It has also been ascribed to Mr. Louis Lambert. Whatever may be the merit of the words, however, the song owes its popularity to the rollicking tune which has long been known as "Johnny, Fill Up the Bowl:"

When Johnnie comes marching home again,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
We'll give him a hearty welcome then,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
The men will cheer, the boys will shout,
The ladies they will all turn out,
And we'll all feel gay
When Johnnie comes marching home.

The old church bell will peal with joy,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
To welcome home our darling boy,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
The village lads and lassies gay
With roses they will strew the way,
And we'll all feel gay
When Johnnie comes marching home.

[illegible] "Annie Laurie" [illegible] the Crimean war. So, during our own war [illegible] "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" [illegible] soldiers both of the north and the south [illegible] may yet be heard in many a home circle. It was composed by Walter Kittredge, who was born in Merrimac, N. H., in 1832, and is known as a public singer and writer of songs and ballads. Having been drafted in 1862, he was preparing to go to the front when the words and music occurred to him, and in a few minutes he transcribed them to paper. At first the song was refused by music publishers, but it is said that when published its sale reached hundreds of thousands of copies.

TENTING ON THE OLD CAMP GROUND.

We're tenting tonight on the old camp ground.
Give us a song to cheer
Our weary hearts, a song of home,
And friends we love so dear.

CHORUS.

Many are the hearts that are weary tonight,
Wishing for the war to cease.
Many are the hearts looking for the right,
To see the dawn of peace.
Tenting tonight, tenting tonight,
Tenting on the old camp ground.

We've been tenting tonight on the old camp ground,
Thinking of days gone by,
Of the loved ones at home that gave us the hand
And the tear that said "goodby."

We are tired of war on the old camp ground.
Many are dead and gone
Of the brave and true who left their homes;
Others have been wounded long.

We've been fighting today on the old camp ground,
Many are lying near;
Some are dead and some are dying;
Many are in tears.

Among the authors of the time was the late Charles C. Sawyer of Brooklyn, to whom we are indebted for the following, which quickly found its way across the lines and became popular in the south. It was written in the autumn of 1861, and more than 1,000,000 copies have been sold:

WHEN THIS CRUEL WAR IS OVER.

Dearest love, do you remember
When we last did meet,
How you told me that you loved me,
Kneeling at my feet?
Oh, how proud you stood before me
In your suit of blue,
When you vowed to me and country
Ever to be true.

CHORUS.

Weeping, sad and lonely,
Hopes and fears, how vain!
Yet praying, when this cruel war is over,
Praying that we meet again.

When the summer breeze is sighing
Mournfully along,
Or when autumn leaves are falling,
Sadly breathes the song.
Oft in dreams I see thee lying
On the battle plain,
Lonely, wounded, even dying,
Calling, but in vain.

WHO WILL CARE FOR MOTHER NOW?

Why am I so weak and weary?
See how faint my heated breath.
All around to me seems darkness,
Tell me, comrades, is this death?
Ah, how well I knew your answer!
To my fate I meekly bow,
If you'll only tell me truly
Who will care for mother now?

CHORUS.

Soon with angels I'll be marching,
With bright laurels on my brow;
I have for my country fallen.
Who will care for mother now?

Who will comfort her in sorrow?
Who will dry the falling tear—
Gently smooth her wrinkled forehead?
Who will whisper words of cheer?
Even now I think I see her
Kneeling, praying for me—how
Can I leave her in anguish?
Who will care for mother now?

Let this knapsack be my pillow
And my mantle be the sky.
Hasten, comrades, to the battle,
I will like a soldier die.
Soon with angels I'll be marching,
With bright laurels on my brow.
I have for my country fallen.
Who will care for mother now?

Other touching songs of affection that belong to this group are "Mother, I've Come Home to Die," "Brother's Fainting at the Door" and "The Vacant Chair." The latter, by Henry S. Washburn, is still a favorite throughout the country.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

We shall meet, but we shall miss him;
There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him
While we breathe our evening prayer.
When, a year ago, we gathered,
Joy was in his mild blue eye,
But a golden cord is severed,
And our hopes in ruin lie.

CHORUS.

At our fireside, sad and lonely,
Often will the bosom swell
At remembrance of the story
How our noble Willie fell;
How he strove to bear our banner
Through the thickest of the fight,
And upheld our country's honor
In the strength of manhood's might.

True, they tell us wreaths of glory
Evermore will deck his brow,
But this soothes the anguish only
Sweeping o'er our heartstrings now.
Sleep today, O early fallen,
In thy green and narrow bed!
Dirges from the pine and cypress
Mingle with the tears we shed.

Among the songs commemorative of the death of Colonel Ephraim E. Ellsworth was the following:

DEATH OF ELLSWORTH.

Down where the patriot army,
Near Potomac's side,
Guards the glorious cause of freedom,
Gallant Ellsworth died.
Brave was the noble chieftain,
Who at his country's call
Hastened to the field of battle
And was the first to fall.

CHORUS.

Strike, freemen, for the Union;
Sheathe your swords no more
While remains in arms a traitor
On Columbia's shore.

First to fall, thou youthful martyr,
Hapless was thy fate;
Hasten we as thy avengers
From thy native state.
Speed we on from town to city,
[illegible]

HUMOR IN SONG.

Humor had its place among the war songs as well as sentiment and martial spirit. Henry C. Work, the author of "Marching Through Georgia," wrote "Grafted Into the Army."

Our Jimmy has gone to live in a tent;
They have grafted him into the army;
He finally puckered up courage and went
When they grafted him into the army.
I told them the child was too young, alas!
At the captain's forequarters they said he would pass;
They'd train him up well in the infantry class—
So they grafted him into the army.

[illegible]

I thought they would spare a lone widder's heir,
But they grafted him into the army.

Dressed up in his unicorn, dear little chap!
They have grafted him into the army.
It seems but a day since he sot on my lap,
But they have grafted him into the army.
And these are the trousies he used to wear,
Them very same buttons—the patch and the tear—
But Uncle Sam gave him a brand new pair
When they grafted him into the army.

Rhymesters in the army were not only numerous, but never without a theme. Sometimes it concerned a company, at others a regiment or brigade. For instance, a certain Chicago company, having distinguished itself at Shiloh, adopted a song the refrain of which, sung to the rollicking air, "The Leg of a Duck," announced to their comrades that

Company K has shown the way,
Bully for you! Bully for you!
Your turn's coming some other day,
Bully for you! Bully for you!

Every popular air in vogue was appropriated that suited the passing whim of the merry soldiers. "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?" "Vive l'Amour," "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," "Such a Climbing Up Stairs," "Philadelphia Gals, Won't You Come Out Tonight?" "Shoo Fly," "Old Uncle Ned" and a score of others are members of this family. Here is one of the favorites sung to the tune of "The Low Back Car," by Miles O'Reilly:

SAMBO AS A SOLDIER.

Some tell us it is a burning shame
To make the naygurs fight,
And that the trade of being kilt
Belongs to but the white.
But as for me, upon my sowl,
So liberal are we here
I'll let Sambo be murthered in place of myself
On every day in the year.

CHORUS.

On every day in the year, boys,
And every hour in the day,
The right to be kilt I'll divide with him,
And divil a word I'll say.

The men who object to Sambo
Should take his place and fight,
And it's better to have a naygur's hue
Than a liver that's wake and white.
Though Sambo's black as the ace of spades,
His fingers a trigger can pull,
And his eye runs straight on the barrel sights
From under his thatch of wool.

CHORUS.

So hear me all, boys, darlings,
Don't think I'm tipping you chaff,
The right to be kilt I'll divide wid him,
And give him the largest half.

"The Year of Jubilee" was an especial favorite and many a time has beguiled the boys on their march:

THE YEAR OF JUBILEE.

Say, darkies, hab you seen de massa,
Wid de muffstash on his face,
Go long de road some time dis mornin
Like he's gwine to leave de place?
He seen de smoke way up de ribber,
Whar de Linkum gunboats lay;
He took his hat, an he lef' berry sudden,
An I specs he's runned away.

CHORUS.

De massa run, ha, ha!
De darky stay, ho, ho!
It mus' be now de kingdom comin,
An de year ob jubilo.

He's six foot one way, two foot tudder,
An he weighs tree hundred poun;
His coat so big he couldn't pay de tailer,
An it won't reach half way roun.
He drills so much dey calls him cap'n,
An he gits so mighty tanned,
I specs he'll try to fool dem Yankees
For to t'ink he's contraband.

De darkies got so lonesome libbin
In de log hut on de lawn,
Dey moved dere t'ings in de massa's parlor
For to keep it while he's gone.
Dar's wine an cider in de kitchen,
An de darkies dey hab some.
I specs it will all be 'fiscated
When de Linkum sojers come.

De oberseer, he make us trouble,
An he dribes us roun a spell;
We lock him up in de smokehouse cellar,
Wid de key flung in de well.
De whip is lost, de han'cuff broke,
But de massa'll hab his pay;
He's big enough, an ole enough, to know better
Dan to went an run away.

OLD SHADY.

Oh, yah, yah, darkies, laugh wid me,
Fur de white folks say Ole Shady's free,
So don't you see dat de jubilee
Is a-coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

CHORUS.

Den away, away, for I can't wait any longer,
Hooray, hooray, I'm going home!

Oh, mass' got scared and so did his lady,
Dis chile breaks fur Ole Uncle Aby;
Open de gates, out here's Ole Shady
A-coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

Goodby, Mass' Jeff, goodby Mis'r Stephens,
'Scuse dis niggah fur takin his leavins,
'Spect purty soon you'll hear Uncle Abram's
Coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

Goodby, hard work wid never any pay,
I'ze a-gwine up north where de goodfolks say
Dat white wheat bread and a dollar a day
Are coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

Oh, I've got a wife and I've got a baby,
Livin up yonder in Lower Canady,
Won't dey laugh when dey see Ole Shady
A-coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

SONGS OF THE SOUTH.

With the advent of war, poems and song began in one shape or another to find their themes throughout the south—the woman at her hearthstone and the soldier in the field; to represent all aspects of popular feeling—the enthusiasm of victory, the despondency of defeat, the pride that exulted in the hero and the grief that mourned his loss.

Three distinctive songs, however, quickly became so popular and were adopted as expressive of the popular feeling—"Dixie," "My Maryland" and "The Bonnie Blue Flag." The history of each is interesting, especially that of the first, which appears to have taken a place with "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Doodle." Its author is Dan Emmett, who still lives at the ripe old age of 79. Recently, being asked to relate the circumstances of its composition, he said: "In the spring of 1859 I was in the employ of the Bryant minstrels in New York, [illegible]

Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.
In Dixie land whar I was born in,
Early on one frosty mornin',
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.
Den I wish I was in Dixie,
Hooray! Hooray!
In Dixie land I'll take my stand,
To lib and die in Dixie,
Away, away, away down south in Dixie;
Away, away, away down south in Dixie.

Old missus marry "Will de weaber,"
William was a gay deceaber;
Look away, etc.
But when he put his arm around 'er,
He smiled as fierce as a forty pounder;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

His face was sharp as a butcher's cleaber,
But dat did not seem to greatly greab 'er;
Look away, etc.
Old missus acted the foolish part,
And died for the man who broke her heart;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

Now, here's health to the next old missus,
And all the gals that want to kiss us;
Look away, etc.
But if you want to drive away sorrow,
Come and hear dis nig tomorrow;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

Dar's buckwheat cakes and Injun batter,
Makes you fat or a little fatter;
Look away, etc.
Den hoe it down and scratch your grabble;
To Dixie's land I'm bound to trabble;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

When the war broke out other lines were written to fit the measure, and the stirring melody at once became the chief war song of the south. It is said that President Lincoln requested a band to play "Dixie" in 1865, a short time after the surrender of Appomattox, remarking that "as we had captured the rebel army we had captured also the rebel tune."

Of "My Maryland," which James Russell Lowell pronounced the finest poem inspired by the civil war, the following story is told: It was in April, 1861, that James R. Randall, a native Marylander, then in Louisiana, published "An Exiled Son's Appeal" to his mother state to cast her fortunes with the seceding commonwealths of the south. Political feeling in Maryland at the time was intense. The residence of Colonel William Miles Cary was one of the many centers of Confederate feeling among the patrician element of the population, the greater portion of which was ardently in sympathy with the secession movement. It was here, one evening in June, 1861, during the meeting of a musical club, that Miss Hattie Cary, one of the daughters, suggested that the words of "My Maryland" should be adapted to some music. In order to make the suggestion more impressive she recited the poem. In a moment Miss Jenny Cary, her sister, exclaimed as if inspired, "Lauriger Horatius!" the well known college song that has resounded from the musical throat of almost every college boy. Thus the words found voice in the great hymn that has since been heard around the world.

A few months later a memorable scene occurred at Manassas. While visiting friends in the army the two sisters were serenaded by the now celebrated Washington artillery of New Orleans. When the band ceased playing, one of the officers exclaimed, "Let's hear a woman's voice." Miss Jenny Cary, standing in the tent door, thereupon sang "My Maryland." The refrain was speedily taken up by hundreds of southern soldiers, and from that moment the verses lived and grew into [illegible] song in the army. [illegible] words [illegible] be generally remembered, they are repeated here:

The despot's heel is on thy shore,
Maryland!
His touch is at thy temple door,
Maryland!
Avenge the patriotic gore
That flecked the streets of Baltimore,
And be the battle queen of yore,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Hark to thy wandering son's appeal,
Maryland!
My mother state, to thee I kneel,
Maryland!
For life and death, for woe and weal,
Thy peerless chivalry reveal,
And gird thy beauteous limbs with steel,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Thou wilt not cower in the dust,
Maryland!
Thy beaming sword shall never rust,
Maryland!
Remember Carroll's sacred trust,
Remember Howard's warlike thrust,
And all thy slumberers with the just,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Come, for thy shield is bright and strong,
Maryland!
Come, for thy dalliance does thee wrong,
Maryland!
Come to thine own heroic throng
That stalks with liberty along,
And give a new key to thy song,
Maryland, my Maryland!

I see the blush upon thy cheek,
Maryland!
But thou wast ever bravely meek,
Maryland!
But lo! there surges forth a shriek
From hill to hill, from creek to creek,
Potomac calls to Chesapeake,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Thou wilt not yield the Vandal toll,
Maryland!
Thou wilt not crook to his control,
Maryland!
Better the fire upon thee roll,
Better the blade, the shot, the bowl,
Than crucifixion of the soul,
Maryland, my Maryland!

I hear the distant thunder hum,
Maryland!
The old line's bugle, fife and drum,
Maryland!
She is not dead, nor deaf, nor dumb—
Huzza, she spurns the northern scum!
She breathes, she burns! she'll come! she'll come!
Maryland, my Maryland!

Next to "Dixie" in its power of arousing enthusiasm and as a marching song is "The Bonnie Blue Flag." It is a singular coincidence that, like "Dixie," it was written and first produced on the stage, and both were introduced to the southern people in New Orleans. The composer was an Irish [illegible]

MUSIC OF THE WAR

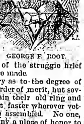
Soul-Stirring Songs That Inspired the Soldiers.

PRODUCTS OF FERVID PATRIOTISM.

Sentimental, Humorous and Purely Patriotic—Authors of "The Battle Cry of Freedom," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "My Maryland" and "The Bonnie Blue Flag."

The songs of a nation are among the most enduring of its memories, and in time of war are the most potent of its moral influences. Frenchmen are moved by "The Marseillaise," Germans are aroused to fighting enthusiasm by "The Watch on the Rhine," Englishmen have marched to battle singing "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the Queen," and we have all read how "Annie Laurie," begun by a sentinel on his post, swept in grand chorus through the British camp in front of Sevastopol. The favorite of the Italian is known as "The Garibaldian Hymn," while we Americans recognize the loftiest and purest patriotism in the stirring measures of our own "Star Spangled Banner."

Nevertheless it is noteworthy that no great war song ever has been written by a great poet. Its melody and verse have been rather the inspired product of fervid patriotism than of the studied effort of genius. During the first three years of the late war thousands of verses were composed by earnest men and women in both the north and south, but how few among these winged messengers of the brain survive! There were lyrics that timed the march to battle, war slogans that rang out like the inspiring rat-a-tat of a drum and elegies that recited the virtues of the hero dead, yet the memory of most of them passed away with the generation that saw their birth. Of those that have lingered longest and bid fair to become a permanent heritage of the struggle brief mention may be here made.



GEORGE F. ROOT.

Opinions will vary as to the degree of their popularity or order of merit, but several will always retain their old ring and make the pulse beat faster wherever veterans of the war are assembled. No one, for instance, will deny a place of honor to "The Battle Cry of Freedom."

It was one of several songs written by George F. Root, a composer and publisher of many other beautiful songs and ballads prior to 1861, and was first sung by the celebrated Hutchinson family at a mass meeting in the city of New York. Mr. Root was born in Sheffield, Mass., Aug. 30, 1820, and as an evidence of his virility the incident may be related that as recently as January of the present year, at a military entertainment in Chicago, the venerable maker of the verse and music, gray haired, yet alert, was called to the stage and in a strong voice sang his own patriotic rallying song. At the end of each verse he was cheered to the echo and not content with that the audience took the words out of the mouths of the army of singers and joined enthusiastically in the chorus.

The story has been printed that during the desperate fight in the Wilderness, May 6, 1864, a Federal command was driven back in disorder with heavy loss. Reforming, it prepared once more to confront the enemy. At this moment some of the men of the Forty-fifth Pennsylvania began to sing:

We'll rally round the flag, boys, rally once again.

The refrain was taken up by other regiments in line of battle, and, with recovered spirits, the previously disheartened boys dashed back into the thick of the fight. The original words are as follows:

Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys,
We'll rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.
We will rally from the hillside,
We will rally from the plain,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

CHORUS.

The Union forever! Hurrah, boys, hurrah!
Down with the traitor, up with the stars,
While we rally round the flag, boys,
Rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

We are springing to the call
Of our brothers gone before,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.
And we'll fill the vacant ranks
With a million freemen more,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

We are marching to the field, boys,
Going to the fight,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom,
And we'll bear the glorious stars
Of the Union and the right,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

If we fall amid the fray, boys,
We will face them to the last,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom,
And our comrades brave shall hear us
As we are rushing past,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

Another of the numerous war songs written by Mr. Root and which acquired a popularity that has not yet passed away is known wherever the English language is spoken as

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP, THE BOYS ARE MARCHING.

In the prison cell I sit,
Thinking, mother, dear, of you,
And our bright and happy home so far away;
And the tears they fill my eyes,
Spite of all that I can do,
Though I try to cheer my comrades and be gay.

CHORUS.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching;
Cheer up, comrades, they will come,
And beneath the starry flag
We shall breathe the air again
Of the free land in our own beloved home.

In the battle front we stood
When their fiercest charge they made,
And they swept us off, a hundred men or more,
But before we reached their lines
They were beaten back, dismayed,
And we heard the cry of vict'ry o'er and o'er.

So within the prison cell
We are waiting for the day
That shall come to open wide the iron door,
And the hollow eye grows bright,
And the poor heart almost gay,
As we think of seeing home and friends once
more.

In a different strain, but with a pathos that endeared the song to thousands of households as well as to the boys in camp, the same composer wrote:

JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE, MOTHER.

Just before the battle, mother,
I am thinking most of you,
While upon the field we're watching
With the enemy in view.
Comrades brave around me lying,
Filled with thoughts of home and God,
For well they know that on the morrow
Some will sleep beneath the sod.

Farewell, mother, you may never
Press me to your heart again,
But oh, you'll not forget me, mother,
If I'm numbered with the slain.

Oh, I long to see you, mother,
And the loving ones at home,
But I'll never leave our banner
Till in honor I can come.
Tell the traitors all around you
That their cruel words we know,
In every battle kill our soldiers
By the help they give the foe.

Hark, I hear the bugle sounding,
'Tis the signal for the fight.
Now, may God protect us, mother,
As he ever does the right.
Hear the "Battle Cry of Freedom,"
How it swells upon the air!
Oh, yes, we'll rally round the standard
Or perish nobly there.

"JOHN BROWN'S BODY."

After the execution of John Brown at Harper's Ferry in December, 1859, a song was adopted that speedily became a part of the marching music of the armies of the north. Its catchy phrases were not only familiar around the firesides of the country, but in all public gatherings where music was wont to inspire the multitude. It relieved the tedium of camp life, and as it resounded through columns of men tramping patiently along the dusty highways it lightened the weariness of their footsteps.

It is said that the words, with the exception of the first stanza, were written by Mr. Charles S. Hall of Massachusetts, but long before the war the air, wedded to other words, was familiar on every plantation in the south. It was the favorite camp meeting melody of the negroes, and few spectacles were more inspiring than when, with grotesque gestures, they joined in singing (the women first):

Say, my brudders, will we meet yo'?
Say, my brudders, will we meet yo'?
Say, my brudders, will we meet yo'?
On Ca-nl-yun's happy sho'?

Then the men responding:

Ya-a-s, my sistern, we will meet yo',
Ya-a-s, my sistern, we will meet yo',
Ya-a-s, my sistern, we will meet yo',
Where partin is no mo'.

CHORUS.

Glory, glory, hallelujer! Glory, glory, hallelujer!
Glory, glory, hallelujer! On Ca-nl-yun's happy sho'.

The war song is as follows:

John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
His soul is marching on.

CHORUS.

Glory, halle-hallelujah! Glory, halle-hallelujah!
Glory, halle-hallelujah!
His soul is marching on!

He's gone to be a soldier in the army of the Lord (thrice),
His soul is marching on.

John Brown's knapsack is strapped upon his back (thrice),
His soul is marching on.

His pet lambs will meet him on the way
(thrice),
As they go marching on.

We will hang Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree
(thrice),
As they go marching on.

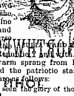
Now, three cheers for the Union (thrice),
As we are marching on.

Glory, halle-hallelujah! Glory, halle-hallelujah!
Glory, halle-hallelujah!
Hip, hip, hip, hurrah!

"THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC."

For loftiness of sentiment "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" will easily take rank with the grandest of our martial songs. Having been sung many times during the war, and under a variety of circumstances, a description of the manner in which it was composed by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe will be of interest.

Being in Washington near the end of the year 1861, she witnessed a review of the Union troops on the Virginia side of the Potomac and was deeply impressed by her experience. In the return journey to the city a number of war songs were sung, among others "John Brown's Body," whereupon one of the party suggested that so grand a melody deserved worthy words, and that she should write them.



JULIA WARD HOWE.

That night, while Mrs. Howe was resting, she thought out line after line and verse after verse of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and with the inspiration yet warm sprang from her bed and committed the patriotic stanzas to paper. They are as follows:

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.

I have seen him in the watchfires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded him an altar in the evening
dews and damps;
I can read his righteous sentence by the dim
and flaring lamps;
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished
rows of steel:
"As ye deal with my contemners, so with you
my grace shall deal;
Let the hero born of woman crush the serpent with his heel,"
Since God is marching on.

He has sounded forth a trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat;
Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer him; be jubilant,
my feet,
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures
you and me;
As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free
While God is marching on.

"WE ARE COMING, FATHER ABRAHAM."

A stirring war song that was famous in its day and generation, and which served its purpose at the time, was known by the above title. It was in answer to the proclamation of President Lincoln in 1862 calling for 300,000 volunteers to swell the army, and it doubtless contributed to that result.

At first the stanzas appeared anonymously in the New York Evening Post of July 16, 1862, and the authorship was attributed to William Cullen Bryant and then to Julia Ward Howe. Subsequently it became known that the author was Mr. James Sloane Gibbons, a native of Wilmington, Del., but a resident of New York city. He was an ardent abolitionist, and for a time was one of the editors of The Antislavery Standard. The words are as follows:

We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more,
From Mississippi's winding stream
And from New England's shore.
We leave our plows and workshops,
Our wives and children dear,
With hearts too full for utterance,
With but a silent tear.
We dare not look behind us,
But steadfastly before.
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.

CHORUS.

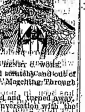
We are coming, we are coming,
Our Union to restore;
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.

If you look across the hilltops
That meet the northern sky,
Long, moving lines of rising dust
Your vision may descry,
And now the wind an instant
Tears the cloudy veil aside
And floats our spangled flag
In glory and in pride,
And bayonets in the sunlight gleam
And bands brave music pour.
We are coming, Father Abraham,
Three hundred thousand more.

"MARCHING THROUGH GEORGIA."

Although written late in the war, probably no song commemorating the struggle or intended to inspire the troops has a stronger foothold in the hearts of the people than "Marching Through Georgia." In the very melody is an expression of enthusiasm that even after 30 years makes the song dear to the hearts of the old soldiers and sets their feet to keeping time with the music. That the sentiment of the Grand Army of the Republic is in its favor was well illustrated by an old backwoodsman in an Ohio post. He was dressed, so the story goes, in a faded suit of homespun, and his shaggy head was surmounted by a greasy, broad brimmed hat. In his right hand he was carrying a small sized cord wood stick as a cane. But after he had traveled a couple of miles it was plain that the strain was beginning to tell on the old fellow.

"He was traveling at a go as you please rate, when his commander, anxious to make a good appearance with his post on dress parade, stepped up to him and said, 'Say, Tom, keep step; you are throwing out the whole line.'



HENRY C. WORK.

"'Cap, how kin a feller keep step to that music?' he replied, pointing to the band leading the line with one of the popular airs of the day. 'Why don't they play something like this?' and he hummed, in a voice husky and scratchy and out of tune, a strain from 'Marching Through Georgia.'

"The captain laughed and turned away, held a moment's conversation with the leader of the band, and the introductory notes of the next piece caused the old fellow to straighten up. His cudgel waved about like the baton of a drum major, and a little later a thousand feet were coming down as one, the fatigue of the march was forgotten, and a thousand voices were joined in the rousing chorus." The words of the famous song were written by Henry C. Work. He was born in Middletown, Conn., in 1832 and died in Hartford June 8, 1884.

Bring the good old bugle, boys,
We'll sing another song—
Sing it with a spirit
That will start the world along—
Sing it as we used to sing it,
Fifty thousand strong—
While we were marching through Georgia.

CHORUS.

Hurrah! Hurrah! we sing the jubilee!
Hurrah! Hurrah! the flag that makes us free!
So we sang the chorus from Atlanta to the sea,
While we were marching through Georgia.

How the darkies shouted
When they heard the joyful sound!
How the turkeys gobbled
Which our commissary found!
How the sweet potatoes even
Started from the ground
While we were marching through Georgia!

Sherman's dashing Yankee boys
Will never reach the coast!
So the saucy rebels said,
And 'twas a handsome boast;
Had they not forgot, alas,
To reckon with the host,
While we were marching through Georgia.

So we made a thoroughfare
For freedom and her train,
Sixty miles in latitude,
Three hundred to the main.
Treason fled before us,
For resistance was in vain,
While we were marching through Georgia.

"WHEN JOHNNY COMES MARCHING HOME."

A favorite among the boys in the army as well as in the social circles at home is known far and near by the above title. The song was written by the late Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, famous as the leader of the band which bears his name. It has also been ascribed to Mr. Louis Lambert. Whatever may be the merit of the words, however, the song owes its popularity to the rollicking tune which has long been known as "Johnny, Fill Up the Bowl:"

When Johnnie comes marching home again,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
We'll give him a hearty welcome then,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
The men will cheer, the boys will shout,
The ladies they will all turn out,
And we'll all feel gay
When Johnnie comes marching home.

The old church bell will peal with joy,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
To welcome home our darling boy,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
The village lads and lassies gay,
With roses they will strew the way,
And we'll all feel gay
When Johnnie comes marching home.

SONGS OF AFFECTION.

Brief reference has been made to "Annie Laurie" as a sentimental song that became popular in the English army during the Crimean war. So, during our own struggle, pathetic words were allied to touching music and sung around the campfires and domestic firesides. One of those, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," is still remembered by the old soldiers both of the north and south, and may yet be heard in many a home circle. It was composed by Walter Kittredge, who was born in Merrimac, N. H., [illegible] 1834, and known as a public singer and writer of song and ballad. Having been drafted in 1862, he was preparing to go to the front when the words and music occurred to him, and in a few minutes he transcribed them to paper. At first the song was refused by music publishers, but it is said that when published its sale reached hundreds of thousands of copies.

TENTING ON THE OLD CAMP GROUND.

We're tenting tonight on the old camp ground.
Give us a song to cheer
Our weary hearts, a song of home
And friends we love so dear.

CHORUS.

Many are the hearts that are weary tonight,
Wishing for the war to cease.
Many are the hearts looking for the right,
To see the dawn of peace.
Tenting tonight, tenting tonight,
Tenting on the old camp ground.

We've been tenting tonight on the old camp ground,
Thinking of days gone by,
Of the loved ones at home that gave us the hand
And the tear that said "goodby."

We are tired of war on the old camp ground.
Many are dead and gone
Of the brave and true who left their homes;
Others have been wounded long.

We've been fighting today on the old camp ground.
Many are lying near;
Some are dead and some are dying;
Many are in tears.

Among the authors of the time was the late Charles C. Sawyer of Brooklyn, to whom we are indebted for the following, which quickly found its way across the lines and became popular in the south. It was written in the autumn of 1861, and more than 1,000,000 copies have been sold:

WHEN THIS CRUEL WAR IS OVER.

Dearest love, do you remember
When we last did meet,
How you told me that you loved me,
Kneeling at my feet?
Oh, how proud you stood before me,
In your suit of blue,
When you vowed to me and country
Ever to be true.

CHORUS.

Weeping, sad and lonely,
Hopes and fears, how vain!
Yet praying, when this cruel war is over,
Praying that we meet again.

When the summer breeze is sighing
Mournfully along,
Or when autumn leaves are falling,
Sadly breathes the song.
Oft in dreams I see thee lying
On the battle plain,
Lonely, wounded, even dying,
Calling, but in vain.

WHO WILL CARE FOR MOTHER NOW?

Why am I so weak and weary?
See how faint my heated breath.
All around to me seems darkness.
Tell me, comrades, is this death?
Ah, how well I know your answer!
To my fate I meekly bow,
If you'll only tell me truly
Who will care for mother now?

CHORUS.

Soon with angels I'll be marching,
With bright laurels on my brow;
I have for my country fallen.
Who will care for mother now?

Who will comfort her in sorrow?
Who will dry the falling tear—
Gently smooth her wrinkled forehead?
Who will whisper words of cheer?
Even now I think I see her
Kneeling, praying for me—how
Can I leave her in anguish?
Who will care for mother now?

Let this knapsack be my pillow
And my mantle be the sky.
Hasten, comrades, to the battle,
I will like a soldier die.
Soon with angels I'll be marching,
With bright laurels on my brow.
I have for my country fallen.
Who will care for mother now?

Other touching songs of affection that belong to this group are "Mother, I've Come Home to Die," "Brother's Fainting at the Door" and "The Vacant Chair." The latter, by Henry S. Washburn, is still a favorite throughout the country.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

We shall meet, but we shall miss him;
There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him
While we breathe our evening prayer.
When, a year ago, we gathered,
Joy was in his mild blue eye;
But a golden cord is severed
And our hopes in ruin lie.

Chorus—[illegible]

At our fireside, sad and lonely,
Often will the bosom swell
At remembrance of the story
How our noble Willie fell;
How he strove to bear our banner
Through the thickest of the fight,
And uphold our country's honor
In the strength of manhood's might.

True, they tell us wreaths of glory
Evermore will deck his brow,
But this soothes the anguish only
Sweeping o'er our heartstrings now.
Sleep today, O early fallen,
In thy green and narrow bed!
Dirges from the pine and cypress
Mingle with the tears we shed.

Among the songs commemorative of the death of Colonel Ephraim E. Ellsworth was the following:

DEATH OF ELLSWORTH.

Down where the patriot army,
Near Potomac's side,
Guards the glorious cause of freedom,
Gallant Ellsworth died.
Brave was the noble chieftain,
Who at his country's call
Hastened to the field of battle
And was the first to fall.

CHORUS.

Strike, freemen, for the Union;
Sheathe your swords no more!
While remains in arms a traitor
On Columbia's shore.

First to fall, thou youthful martyr,
Hapless was thy fate;
Hasten we as thy avengers
From thy native state.
Speed we on from town to city,
Not for wealth or fame,
But because we love the Union
And our Ellsworth's name.

HUMOR IN SONG.

Humor had its place among the war songs as well as sentiment and martial spirit. Henry C. Work, the author of "Marching Through Georgia," wrote:

GRAFTED INTO THE ARMY.

Our Jimmy has gone to live in a tent;
They have grafted him into the army.
He finally puckered up courage and went
When they grafted him into the army.
I told them the child was too young. Alas,
At the captain's forequarters they said he would pass—
They'd train him up well in the infantry class—
So they grafted him into the army!

CHORUS.

Oh, Jimmy, farewell! Your brothers fell
Way down in Alabarmy;
I thought they would spare a lone widder's heir,
But they grafted him into the army!

Dressed up in his unicorn, dear little chap!
They have grafted him into the army.
It seems but a day since he sot on my lap,
But they have grafted him into the army.
And these are the trousers he used to wear—
Them very same buttons—the patch and the tear—
But Uncle Sam gave him a brand new pair
When they grafted him into the army.

Rhymesters in the army were not only numerous, but never without a theme. Sometimes it concerned a company, at others a regiment or brigade. For instance, a certain Chicago company, having distinguished itself at Shiloh, adopted a song the refrain of which, sung to the rollicking air, "The Leg of a Duck," announced to their comrades that

Company K has shown the way,
Bully for you! Bully for you!
Your turn's coming some other day,
Bully for you! Bully for you!

Every popular air in vogue was appropriated that suited the passing whim of the merry soldiers. "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?" "Vive l'Amour," "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," "Such a Climbing Up Stairs," "Philadelphia Gals, Won't You Come Out Tonight?" "Shoo Fly," "Old Uncle Ned" and a score of others are members of this family. Here is one of the favorites sung to the tune of "The Low Back Car," by Miles O'Reilly:

SAMBO AS A SOLDIER.

Some tell us it is a burning shame
To make the naygurs fight,
And that the trade of being kilt
Belongs to but the white.
But as for me, upon my sowl,
So liberal are we here
I'll let Sambo be murthered in place of myself
On every day in the year.

CHORUS.

On every day in the year, boys,
And every hour in the day,
The right to be kilt I'll divide with him,
And divil a word I'll say.

The men who object to Sambo
Should take his place and fight,
And it's better to have a naygur's hue
Than a liver that's wake and white.
Though Sambo's black as the ace of spades,
His finger a trigger can pull,
And his eye runs straight on the barrel sights
From under his thatch of wool.

CHORUS.

So hear me all, boys, darlings,
Don't think I'm tipping you chaff,
The right to be kilt I'll divide wid him,
And give him the largest half.

"The Year of Jubilee" was an especial favorite and many a time has beguiled the boys on their march:

THE YEAR OF JUBILEE.

Say, darkies, hab you seen de massa,
Wid de muff-stash in his face,
Go long de road some time dis mornin
Like he's gwine to leave do place?
He seen de smoke way up de ribber,
Whare de Linkum gunboats lay;
He took his hot, an he lef' berry sudden,
An I specs he's runned away.

CHORUS.

De massa run, ha, ha!
De darky stay, ho, ho!
It must be now de kingdom comin
An de y'ar ob jubilo.

He's six foot one way, two foot tudder,
An he weighs t'ree hundred poun';
His coat so big he couldn't pay de tailor,
An it won't reach half way roun.
He drills so much dey calls him cap'n,
An he gits so mighty tanned,
I specs he'll try to fool dem Yankees
For to t'ink he's contraband.

De darkies got so lonesome libbin
In de log hut on de lawn,
Dey moved dere t'ings in de massa's parlor
For to keep it while he's gone.
Dar's wine an cider in de kitchen,
An de darkies dey hab some.
I specs it will all be 'fiscated
When de Linkum sojers come.

De oberseer, he make us trouble,
An he dribes us roun a spell.
We lock him up in de smokehouse cellar,
Wid de key flung in de well.
De whip is lost, de han'cuff broke,
But de massa hab his pay.
He's big an ole enough for to know hetter
Dan to went an run away.

OLD SHADY.

Oh, yah, yah, darkies, laugh wid me,
Fur de white folks say Ole Shady's free,
So don't you see dat de jubilee
Is a-coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

CHORUS.

Den away, away, fur I can't wait any longer,
Hooray, hooray, I'm going home!

Oh, mass' got scared and so did his lady,
Dis chile breaks fur Ole Uncle Aby;
"Open de gates, out here's Ole Shady
A-coming, coming"—Hail mighty day!

Goodby, Mass' Jeff, goodby Mis'r Stephens,
'Scuse dis niggah fur takin his leaving,
'Spect purty soon you'll hear Uncle Abram's
Coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

Goodby, hard work, wid never any pay,
I'ze a-gwine up north where de goodfolks say
Dat white wheat bread and a dollar a day
Are coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

Oh, I've got a wife and I've got a baby,
Livin up yonder in Lower Canady,
Won't dey laugh when dey see Ole Shady
A-coming, coming—Hail mighty day!

SONGS OF THE SOUTH.

With the advent of war, poetry and song began in one shape or another to find their themes throughout the south—the woman at her hearthstone and the soldier in the field; to represent all aspects of popular feeling—the enthusiasm of victory, the despondency of defeat, the pride that exulted in the hero and the grief that mourned his loss.

Three distinctive songs, however, quickly became sectional and were adopted as expressive of the popular feeling—"Dixie," "My Maryland" and "The Bonnie Blue Flag." The history of each is interesting, especially that of the first, which appears to have taken a place with "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Doodle." Its author is Dan Emmett, who still lives at the ripe old age of 79. Recently, being asked to relate the circumstances of its composition, he said: "In the spring of 1859 I was in the employ of the Bryant minstrels in New York, at 472 Broadway, and my particular business was to invent 'walk arounds.' One Saturday night Jerry Bryant came to me and asked if I couldn't write a 'hurrah'—something to make a noise with and get the people stirred up. I told him I thought I could. Sunday being a rainy day, I remained at home and composed what I then named 'I Wish I Was In Dixie's Land.' Nobody ever knew how it came to be called 'Dixie.' Well, Jerry was so delighted with it that he made us rehearse all day Monday for the evening's performance. The song was a 'go' right from the start. Bands played it. Musical people in Cincinnati, Louisville and New Orleans cribbed it, and lawsuits followed until Firth & Pond published it under my own name and so settled the dispute as to authorship. It was first sung in New Orleans in 1860. The original words, from which all other versions sprang, being as follows:

I wish I was in de land ob cotton,
Old times dar am not forgotten;
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.
In Dixie land whar I was born in,
Early on one frosty mornin,
Look away, look away, look away, Dixie land.
Den I wish I was in Dixie,
Hooray! hooray!
In Dixie land I'll took my stand,
To lib and die in Dixie.
Away, away, away down south in Dixie;
Away, away, away down south in Dixie.

Old missus marry "Will de weaber,"
William was a gay deceaber;
Look away, etc.
But when he put his arms around 'er,
He smiled as fierce as a forty pounder;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

His face was sharp as a butcher's cleaber,
But dat did not seem to greatly greab 'er;
Look away, etc.
Old missus acted the foolish part,
And died for the man who broke her heart;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

Now, here's health to the next old missus,
And all the gals that want to kiss us;
Look away, etc.
But if you want to drive away sorrow,
Come and hear dis song tomorrow;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

Dar's buckwheat cakes and Injun batter,
Makes you fat or a little fatter;
Look away, etc.
Den hoe it down and scratch your grabble;
To Dixie's land I'm bound to trabble;
Look away, etc.
Den I wish I was in Dixie, etc.

When the war broke out, other lines were written to fit the measure, and the stirring melody at once became the chief war song of the south. It is said that President Lincoln requested a band to play "Dixie" in 1865, a short time after the surrender of Appomattox, remarking that "as we had captured the rebel army we had captured also the rebel tune."

Of "My Maryland," which James Russell Lowell pronounced the finest poem inspired by the civil war, the following story is told: It was in April, 1861, that James R. Randall, a native Marylander, then in Louisiana, published "An Exiled Son's Appeal" to his mother state to cast her fortunes with the seceding commonwealths of the south. Political feeling in Maryland at the time was intense. The residence of Colonel William Miles Cary was one of the many centers of Confederate feeling among the patrician element of the population, the greater portion of which was ardently in sympathy with the secession movement. It was here, one evening in June, 1861, during the meeting of a musical club, that Miss Hettie Cary, one of the daughters, suggested that the words of "My Maryland" should be adapted to some music. In order to make the suggestion more impressive she recited the poem. In a moment Miss Jenny Cary, her sister, exclaimed as if inspired, "Lauriger Horatius!" the well known college song that has resounded from the musical throat of almost every college boy. Thus the words found voice in the great hymn that has since been heard around the world.

A few months later a memorable scene occurred at Manassas. While visiting friends in the army the two sisters were serenaded by the now celebrated Washington artillery of New Orleans. When the band ceased playing, one of the officers exclaimed, "Let's hear a woman's voice." Miss Jenny Cary, standing in the tent door, thereupon sang "My Maryland." The refrain was speedily taken up by hundreds of the southern soldiers, and from that moment the verses lived and grew into a power. It was the birth of the song in the army. As the words may not now be generally remembered, they are repeated here:

The despot's heel is on thy shore,
Maryland!
His touch is at thy temple door,
Maryland!
Avenge the patriotic gore
That flecked the streets of Baltimore,
And be the battle queen of yore,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Hark to thy wandering son's appeal,
Maryland!
My mother state, to thee I kneel,
Maryland!
For life and death, for woe and weal,
Thy peerless chivalry reveal,
And gird thy beauteous limbs with steel,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Thou wilt not cower in the dust,
Maryland!
Thy beaming sword shall never rust,
Maryland!
Remember Carroll's sacred trust,
Remember Howard's warlike thrust,
And all thy slumberers with the just,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Come, for thy shield is bright and strong,
Maryland!
Come, for thy dalliance does thee wrong,
Maryland!
Come to thine own heroic throng
That stalks with liberty along,
And give a new key to thy song,
Maryland, my Maryland!

I see the blush upon thy cheek,
Maryland!
But thou wast ever bravely meek,
Maryland!
But lo, there surges forth a shriek
From hill to hill, from creek to creek,
Potomac calls to Chesapeake,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Thou wilt not yield the Vandal toll,
Maryland!
Thou wilt not crook to his control,
Maryland!
Better the fire upon thee roll,
Better the blade, the shot, the bowl,
Than crucifixion of the soul,
Maryland, my Maryland!

I hear the distant thunder hum,
Maryland!
The old line's bugle, fife and drum,
Maryland!
She is not dead nor deaf nor dumb—
Huzza, she spurns the northern scum!
She breathes, she burns! She'll come,
she'll come!
Maryland, my Maryland!

Next to "Dixie" in its power of arousing enthusiasm and as a marching song is "The Bonnie Blue Flag." It is a singular coincidence that, like "Dixie," it was written and first produced on the stage, and both were presented to the southern people in New Orleans. The composer was an Irish [illegible] the late Harry Macarthy, [illegible] convey an idea both [illegible] movement:

We are a band of brothers and native to the soil,
Fighting for our liberty with treasure, blood and toil,
And when our rights were threatened the cry
rose near and far,
Hurrah for the Bonnie Blue Flag that bears a
single star.

Hurrah, hurrah, for southern rights hurrah!
Hurrah for the Bonnie Blue Flag that bears a single star.

Many other songs were written in various parts of the south during the war, but all were adapted to familiar melodies, the old time negro airs being most popular, but they are only memorable as indicating the spirit and temper of those stormy times.

"Which reaches you the quicker," asked the teacher, "sight or sound?"

"Sound," replied the new boy.

"No, William, that's not the right answer. Sight reaches us first. If you watch a band playing a good way off, you'll see the drummer hit the drum a second or so before you hear the sound of it."

"Yes'm. But sometimes sight don't reach you first."

"Can you give me an example?"

The Life Plant.

There is a plant in Jamaica called the life plant because it is almost impossible to kill it or any portion of it. When a leaf is cut off and hung up by a string, it sends out white, threadlike roots, gathers moisture from the air and begins to grow new leaves. Even when pressed and packed away in a botanist's herbarium it has been known to outgrow the leaves of the book in which it was placed. The only way to kill it is by the heat of a hot iron or of boiling water.

Moses Kimball.

The late Moses Kimball of Boston, who made his money as a theatrical manager in that city, was an interesting character. For many years his ambition was to be mayor, but the politicians never took kindly to his aspiration. When he was an alderman, before the war, he voted and spoke against allowing Daniel Webster the use of Faneuil hall to refute the abolition arguments of Wendell Phillips.—Boston Letter.

Gas lamps were introduced in the Paris streets in 1819. Their employment caused no little remark among the country people, who got an idea that there was some magic about the matter.

To prevent wrinkles, the ladies of the court of Catherine de' Medici wore a forehead cloth tightly bound on their heads.

My Wife is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her blood has become impoverished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Roberson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in every way."

A NARROW ESCAPE

ST. PAUL NEGRO JERKED UP BY AN ANGRY MOB.

He Attempted Criminal Assault, But Was Frightened Away and Captured—His Neck Saved by the Entreaties of the Women He Would Have Outraged.

ST. PAUL, June 3.—About daylight Sunday morning a negro giving his name as Huston Osborne had a narrow escape from lynching. He climbed in the window of a little cottage, 1095 Iglehart street, in which slept Maggie, Frieda and Katherine Ketcheli. His object was criminal assault. He was discovered in the attempt, and the screams of the frightened women, who rushed from the house, aroused their brother, who slept in the cottage next door. In an instant he was out, and discovered the negro in flight. Divining the situation the brother gave chase, attired only in his night shirt. On his way he was and others who were abroad, and after one of the most exciting and remarkable chases for a man that ever occurred the negro was captured and brought back to the scene of his intended crime. Here, in the presence of all, he was strung up to the big tree in the yard of the brother's house, and had it not been for the entreaties of the women he would now be a corpse. He was taken to the Rondo street station. He admitted his object and gave his name as Huston Oshorne, admitted having served time in prison for burglary, and said that for the last two weeks he had been an extra writer at the West hotel, in Minneapolis.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER KILLED.

Deed Supposed to Have Been Done by a Discharged Lunatic.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 3.—A terrible tragedy occurred in the room over Hurst's drug store, 1229 Nicollet avenue. The rooms were occupied by Mrs. Martha Elias, a widow 55 years old, and her daughter Annie. Shortly after 4 o'clock a. m. a young man in the drug store heard a pistol shot. This was followed by another shot five or ten minutes later.

A policeman coming up at the time the two went upstairs. They forced the door open and the bodies of the two women were found on the bed. The girl was under the clothes, the mother on the outside. The girl had been shot behind the ear. The upper part of Mrs. Elias' head had been shot off. The shot had entered between the eyes. It was at first thought to be a case of murder and suicide. Later developments, however, indicate that

It Was a Double Murder.

Loren D. Elias, son of Mrs. Elias, is suspected of committing the crime. He was discharged from the St. Peter asylum May 1. He was not known to be dangerously insane. There is evidence, however, to connect him with the crime. His grip contained $109 and some clothing marked with his name has been found in the rear of the Elias apartments. A curtain in the kitchen of the suite, which is at the extreme rear, has been found badly torn. There is other evidence to show that, instead of sleeping with her daughter Mrs. Elias when she retired went to bed in a room between that in which the bodies were found and the rear of the house. The fact that the revolver was not clutched in the hand of the dead mother also points to the supposition that the shooting was done by a third party. The son was arrested for the crime, but denied it and accounted for his movements.

SHOCKING SUICIDE.

A Woman Saturates Her Clothing With Gasoline and Applies a Match.

ELLSWORTH, Kan., June 3.—Mrs. William Irvin of Freeport, Ills., who for several months has been living here with her father, a prominent citizen named Leavitt, committed suicide in a shocking manner. She was insane and had been carefully watched, but during the evening she eluded vigilance and stole into the cellar. There she saturated her clothing with gasoline and applied a match. When found she was enveloped in flames and died a few minutes later, in intense agony.

The funeral of Aaron Cooke took place at the Congregational church at 10 a. m., on Thursday of last week. The Rev. Herman P. Fisher delivered an eloquent discourse. One very touching feature was the attendance in a body of the Grand Army Post, every member being on duty on the occasion. Churches, founded on Christian Love, are supposed to set an example before the world in their attendance upon the burial of one of their members, but how often do we see on such an occasion every member present? The Grand Army is composed of men whose love for each other was cemented by a baptism of blood upon Southern battle fields—and its members never neglect or slight a comrade, however unpleasant or irksome the duty imposed, and rain or shine, through thick and thin, they are always in line for duty. God bless and reward Col. Cobham Post.

KENDRICK DEPOSED.

The Venerable Archbishop of St. Louis Retired by an Order From Rome.

ST. LOUIS, June 4.—Archbishop Kendrick has been deposed by Rome. A cablegram announcing his deposition and the appointment of Rev. John J. Kain as the new archbishop of St. Louis was publicly read during solemn pentecostal services at the cathedral Sunday morning by Vicar General Muehlsiepen.

The cablegram was signed by Cardinal Prefect Ledochowski of the congregation of the propaganda, and stated that the action had been taken at a meeting held on May 21.

The effect of the decision was to effectually retire Archbishop Kendrick from all rights, titles and privileges pertaining to the archbishopric of St. Louis. Under supplementary instructions, expected from the propaganda, the order will come to provide a fitting annuity for him out of the resources of the archdiocese. Though a matter of urgent necessity, of the venerable metropolitan will come as a rude shock to the Catholics of his archdiocese. Archbishop Kendrick was in no sense provincial. His attitude at the Vatican council, which declared the dogmas of papal infallibility and the immaculate conception gained him a worldwide reputation and involved him in controversies with the greatest theologians within and without his church.

The Compulsory Retirement

The deposition, or retirement, of Archbishop Kendrick is the result of a petition to the propaganda setting forth his mental incapacity and the dangerous condition of the business affairs of the diocese.

M'KINLEY IS ALL RIGHT.

M. A. Hanna Says the Foraker Victory Will Not Affect His Chances.

CLEVELAND, June 1.—No man stands closer to Governor McKinley or is more interested in his candidacy for the presidency than Hon. M. A. Hanna of this city. Speaking to an Associated Press representative concerning the speculation as to the effect of the Foraker victory in the state Republican convention upon McKinley's prospects, he said:

"They will not be affected in the least. Governor McKinley has more friends in Ohio now than he ever had before, and he has more in all the other states of the Union. This talk about a divided Ohio delegation in the national Republican convention is all bosh. More than that, it is all a lie. The Republicans in this state are true to McKinley, or their convention platform is a farce. Do you suppose a state that holds so proud a place as Ohio can afford to be false? Ohio will send a solid and loyal McKinley delegation to the national convention."

Concerning the recent campaign for the nomination for governor, Mr. Hanna said: "Governor McKinley kept entirely out of it. General Bushnell is the nominee and he will be elected."

A GOLD STANDARD

Chili Resumes Specie Payments After Seventeen Years of Paper.

THE RATIO FIXED AT 41 TO 1.

Will Furnish Some Interesting Lessons on Coinage Legislation.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Senor Don Gana, the Chilian minister, has received the following cablegram:

Santiago, June 4.—Chilian Minister, Washington: It is very gratifying to me to inform you that after 17 years of the regime of paper money, Chili has returned with satisfaction and confidence to the gold standard. The law is in force. FERNANDEZ,

Minister of Finance

The resumption of specie payments by Chili, which occurred on last Saturday, promises to furnish some interesting lessons on coinage legislation. Reports from there state that the government tried to familiarize the people with the new forms of silver and gold coin by getting out

A Preliminary Issue.

These were quickly exchanged for the old paper money, but as soon as the novelty had worn off the people were glad to go back to the more convenient form of paper currency. Another embarrassment occurred when the government found that coin was being exported in great quantities. The new specie payment law fixed the ratio between the metals at 41 to 1. This ignored the current ratio of the remainder of the world, that in the London market at the present time being about 31 to 1. As a result of this difference gold bullion of Chili at an alarming rate. The silver coins were also exported, because the law provided that they should contain 444 grains of pure silver, which made them worth intrinsically more than the current silver dollar. Thus both gold and silver were being drained out of Chili, so that the government ordered the mints to stop further coinage. Under the law the mints began last Saturday, and there is much interest to learn what the result will be of this latest step.

Began to Flow Out

Rheumatism Cured.

Rheumatism is caused by lactic acid in the blood attacking the fibrous tissues of the joints. Keep your blood pure and healthy and you will not have Rheumatism. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives the blood vitality and richness and tones the whole body, neutralizes the acidity of the blood and thus cures rheumatism.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The Biggest Turnout Ever Seen on Such an Occasion in Our City.

Memorial day dawned cloudy and cool, "just the day for a march," the old boys said and so it proved, being neither too hot nor too cold all day. Early in the morning the city began to fill with teams from the surrounding country and by the time the parade was formed there were thousands ready to join it. The parade was formed soon after dinner and extended for over one mile. Upon reaching the cemetery the sad and solemn rites of the Grand Army were performed and Edward George, Esq., delivered an eloquent memorial address, after which the great crowd broke up and returned to the city. These events occurring year after year teach such a lesson of patriotism to the youth and rising generation as they cannot soon forget.

Went by Mail, Probably.

A few weeks ago the JOURNAL mentioned the fact that "Paul Useldinger came down from Euclid to get a shave of Charlie Misner," and that Paul was very pronounced in his views against matrimony, etc. Whether Charlie hypnotized the youth, or whatever did come over the spirit of his dreams we know not, but it is a fact that very soon Paul went to Barnesville to wed a young Barnesvillain of the female persuasion. But alas, here Paul met up with the old proverb, "there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip," or such a business, and it all occurred on this wise: The young lady and Paul's sister went to the post-office just before the auspicious event was to occur and the young lady went inside to post a letter, leaving Paul's sister outside to hold down the horse and buggy. Without a doubt the young lady mistook the package that was intended to go by male and dropped herself into the mail sack—at least she never came out—not as anybody knows of, and Paul, after waiting a respectable quantity of time, took the Great Northern train, labelled for Euclid. Paul insists be "don't give a continental darn, there's as good fish in the sea as ever were caught out of it" and he thinks that a young lady liable to go off at so short a notice is no earthly good for a wealthy young farmer's wife, anyhow."

That Honest Farmer.

Some time in early part of May or latter part of April, one of our business men bought a cow of a farmer who lives not a hundred miles from the city, and after she had been tied to a stake for a few hours she broke the rope and departed. After a diligent search for a fortnight the cow was duly advertised, but another fortnight elapsed before the cow was heard from. Meantime the farmer had been informed of the absence of the cow, but he "hadn't seen anything of her" and expressed a great deal of sympathy for the loss of so valuable a cow. On Monday of last week a neighbor of the man who had sold the cow was in the store and to him the man related his loss, whereupon the neighbor said: "Why I am sure that cow is back at her old home all right, as I am positive I saw her in his pasture this very morning." So the business man said nothing more, but on Memorial day he quietly hitched up and drove out to the farm of the honest granger, and, sure enough, there was his cow in the pasture all right enough, where she had been all this time. Comment is unnecessary but we are glad to know that there are not many such honest (?) farmers in Polk county.

WARM IN THE EAST

HOT WEATHER RECORD FOR THE SEASON BROKEN.

Twenty-five Deaths from the Heat Occur in New York Alone—Fatalities Also Reported from Chicago and Philadelphia—Heavy Rains in the West and Southwest.

NEW YORK, June 4.—A cool easterly breeze sprung up shortly after 3 a. m. and it is hoped put an end to hot weather record breaking days for a season at least. For five days the mercury has ranged from 70 to 95 above zero and sweltering humanity have longed in vain for a breath of fresh air. It is safe to say that at least 25 people have died during the past five days as a result of the heated term and that over 150 have been prostrated and taken to the different hospitals of the city. A good many of those taken to the different public institutions will not recover.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The fifth day of intense heat which has oppressed Chicago saw the mercury up to 96 in the shade during the afternoon. A lake breeze which sprung up during the afternoon made matters more endurable for a time—but the breeze wandered off the shady side of the street and was sunstruck. Then the sun had his own way without interruption. The number of prostrations was larger than on any preceding day.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—Seven deaths was the day's addition to the heated term fatalities. There were nearly 50 prostrations, about one-third of which number was made up of policemen and firemen, who held their annual parade during the day, marching under the broiling sun for several hours. The fatal cases were principally infants and old persons. The maximum temperature was 96 at 3 p. m.

DETROIT, June 4.—Detroit was the hottest place in Michigan. At 3 o'clock it was 96.4, being 1.3 degs. warmer than the day before. No prostrations were reported, however.

LOUISVILLE, June 4.—The maximum reached by the mercury here was 100 deg. at the signal service office. This was registered about 2 o'clock. This breaks the season's record by 3 degs.

BALTIMORE, June 4.—There were four fatal cases of prostration by the heat during the day. The thermometer marked 97 degs.

HEAVIEST IN YEARS.

Six Inches of Rain Reported in Southern and Western Kansas.

KANSAS CITY, June 4.—The rain storm that prevailed over Southern and Western Kansas was the heaviest known in the history of many years. At some points not less than six inches of water fell. Every draw is running bank full, low places are lakes and the ground is more thoroughly soaked than it has been for five years. Several washouts are reported on the Salina branch of the Union Pacific and one on the main line near Greenfield. The rain extended as far south as Hennessy, I. T., and as far west as the Colorado line. It will prove of great value to wheat. Corn was never in so good a condition as now. Chinch bugs are bad in some sections but have been checked by wet weather.

FOUR WERE KILLED.

Repair Train on a Nebraska Railroad Plunges Into a Washout.

OMAHA, June 4.—A special to The Bee from McCook, Neb., says:

About 9 p. m., while searching for washouts between Edison and Oxford, the engine of the repair train plunged into a washout about two miles east of Edison, and of the five men on the engine, four were killed. The names of the dead are: B. V. Haley, roadmaster; Frank Jeffries, engineer; C. C. M. Rowell, fireman; Samuel Mundy, conductor. Frank Harris, private secretary to Superintendent Campbell of the Burlington, miraculously escaped with slight injuries.

All but Mundy are married men whose families reside in McCook, where the dead men were brought. This is the most disastrous accident to life that has ever occurred on this division, and is one of the results of the breaking of Curtis lake dam.

Lost Time.

If it is true that "procrastination is the thief of time," then Procrastination is the man N. B. Soper came in town to look for the other day. He had a hired man early in the week and he also had at the same time, an elegant, expensive gold watch—now he has neither. One morning he awoke to the realization of the fact that the hired man had vamoosed the ranch during the silent watches of the night, which would not have worried him so much since seeding is all done, if it had not been for the fact that the watch had also disappeared. So it was that he came over to consult with Chief of Police Frank Creamer, who at once took steps to ascertain where the hired man had gone at. He located the man at Ada, had him arrested and brought to the city. Was tried before Judge McLean and alleged that as Soper owed him and could not pay him, he supposed he had a right to take the watch. He was discharged and by the time another creditor had garnisheed the watch for a debt.

THE W. R. C.

Entertain a Big Crowd at the Opera House on Thursday Evening.

SINGING THE OLD SONGS.

On the evening of Memorial Day a large audience gathered at the opera house to listen to an entertainment given by the ladies of the W. R. C., consisting for the most part of war songs and war scenes by home talent. John Crawford, Crookston's dramatic reader, favored the audience with "The Blind Veteran" and "The Whistling Regiment," in his usual felicitous style. Victor Fontaine illustrated the Zouave drill with a squad of boys that he had drilled to a high state of proficiency. The performance closed with a fine tableau representing Washington, Lincoln, Sheridan, Sherman and Logan; the Goddess of Liberty and an Angel of Peace, and Grant seated upon a real live horse. Everybody seemed to enjoy the entertainment very highly and the ladies took in about $160 as the result of very hard and faithful work. To Mrs. A. J. Streeter, the worthy president of the corps, a great deal of credit is due for indefatigable work to bring the entertainment to a successful issue. Everybody speaks in terms of the highest praise of the affair as a whole.

"Them's" Our Sentiments.

The following opinion of the Moorhead News man as to the summer outing echoes our sentiments exactly:

"Editor Myers of the Lake City Graphic-Sentinel publishes an earnest appeal for the editors of the state to take their annual summer outing at Lake City and promises excellent entertainment and a most delightful time. He requests the editors to express their sentiments freely on the proposition, which is the basis for what we shall say. We do not doubt any statement of the beauty and attractiveness of Lake City that Bro. Myers has made, or any promise of hospitality that will be given to the editors and their wives and daughters, should they decide to go to Lake City; but here is the point of objection: There are many beautiful places, having lakes, in Minnesota, with all the appurtenances implied, and these are available to any of us. We can pack up and go to a lake resort for an outing at any time during the season, at small expense, on individual account. When the association in its official capacity undertakes an excursion the members expect something more than that; they expect the executive committee to secure transportation privileges that are not easily available by the single individual editor, and they expect the committee to arrange for a trip to some point or other place not before visited and which could not otherwise be visited except at heavy expense. It is true that a reunion at Lake City would be extremely pleasant and would promote the fraternal relations and acquaintanceship that ought to subsist between members of the state press, but when we pack up for a summer excursion under the auspices of the association we feel like going farther, to less accessible places, and these afford not only the same opportunities for social and fraternal enjoyments, but increase our knowledge of our own country, add to our fund of information of people and places, and generally broaden our views. Let the excursion be to Atlanta or to some remote point of interest which the most of us have never visited.

WIND BREAKS.

For several years past the farmers of the Red River Valley have seen the benefits that wind breaks would be to them in the protection of their fields and yet so far as we know there is not a rod of trees set out for that purpose. A row of cotton-wood trees set around every section would every year save its cost in seed that is now blown from the ground every spring and while this is impracticable owing to the existence of so much railroad land and other lands yet there is land enough in the hands of actual settlers to accomplish the same results if every farm had a row of trees around it. Some plan of this sort is a necessity if would protect our soil from the high winds of spring-time and the wind-break seems to be the most available method.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1895.

Republicans have not lacked important conversational topics this week. First, there was the great bimetallic speech of Senator Sherman, which strongly indicates that the republican party intends to maintain its friendly position towards silver and not follow Mr. Cleveland's lead in worshipping at the shrine of the single gold standard Then came the harmonious action of the Ohio republican convention, in nominating a winning ticket, adopting a platform that all good republicans can stand upon, and endorsing ex-Gov. Foraker for the U. S. Senate and Gov. McKinley for the Presidential nomination. Gov. McKinley may or may not be the national standard bearer of the republican party next year, but the Ohio convention made it plain that he is to be earnestly pushed in the national convention by his own State.

Another topic much discussed by republicans is the "harmony" dinner given by Chauncey M. Depew, at his New York home, in honor of ex-President Harrison, and attended by a number of leading republicans, including Gov. Morton and Gov. McKinley. A gentleman who was a guest at that dinner told your correspondent that what struck him most was the extreme cordiality shown towards each other by the gentlemen who are by general consent regarded as leading candidates for the republican nomination. He said he was convinced that whatever envy and jealousy might exist between some few of the followers of the principal guests at Mr. Depew's dinner no such feeling existed between the gentlemen themselves.

I have no desire to wave the "bloody shirt," but it does have a queer look when you come to think about it, that in all the various celebrations of Memorial Day in the immediate vicinity of Washington not a single official of any prominence connected with the administration took any part. It is only fair to mention in this connection that Secretary Herbert had accepted an invitation to deliver the address at St. Elizabeth Asylum cemetery, but was prevented by having to accompany the funeral cortege of Secretary Gresham to Chicago. But it does seem strange that of all the hundreds of assistant secretaries and bureau chiefs under the government which those soldiers fought to preserve, and did preserve, not one should have taken part in the ceremonies in honor of the dead defenders of the nation.

With the sudden and entirely unexpected death of Secretary Gresham all hard feelings towards him were buried, his mistakes forgotten, or at least overlooked, and everybody who had ever known the man could recall some pleasant trait of the personal geniality which made him easily the most popular man personally in the cabinet. It is a matter of deep regret to his warmest personal admirers that he ever became Secretary of State. He had ability enough to have successfully administered the office, but his education, temperament, previous life and modes of thought were all so many stumbling blocks in the way of his doing so. This is not a time to criticize his career at the head of that department, but his most partial friends do not claim it to have been the success his judicial career was.

Some people got a little mixed up about the length of time within which Mr. Cleveland would be compelled to select the successor to the late Secretary Gresham. The old law said the President could appoint an acting Secretary for a period of only ten days, but in 1891 the law was amended to read as follows: "A vacancy occasioned by death or resignation must not be temporarily filled for a longer period than thirty days." Thus it will be seen that Mr. Cleveland having designated Assistant Secretary Uhl to act as Secretary of State has thirty days in which to select a permanent Secretary of State. Only one thing appears to be certain about it at this time, and that is, that Mr. Cleveland will endeavor to use the vacancy to strengthen his financial policy. Some of those who are being discussed as eligible for the vacancy are impossibilities. One of these is ex-Secretary Whitney, who very positively declined to become a member of Mr. Cleveland's second cabinet when it was being formed. Mr. Whitney may, if he decides to become a candidate for the democratic nomination next year, be willing to accept all the support the administration may care to give him, but he is far too smart to become a member of the administration; he knows too well the odium it has earned.

I now have money again to loan on good improved farms.

CHICKEN COOPS.

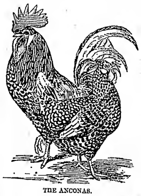
Look Out For the Young Chicks the First Ten Days.

The proper housing for young chicks has much to do with their future. A greater loss is sustained with the chicks for the first week than at any other period, says Farm and Orchard. If they can be protected during the first ten days, the chances are greater for early maturing and healthy chicks. There is everything in keeping the chicks warm and dry for the first two weeks. When hatched, their temperature is 100 degrees, and this should be limited as far as possible. When the hen and chicks are allowed to run at large in the early spring, the latter becomes chilled, and bad results follow. In the construction of the coop, dryness and warmth should be the first consideration, the roof to be water tight and the floor of the coop raised from the ground.

A dry and well drained place should be selected for the coops, to avoid dampness and chill. It is advisable to keep them under a shed, to protect them from the driving rains of early spring. Chicks should be confined until the sun is well up and the chill of early morn is over. Keep everything clean and change the location of coops frequently. Never allow filth to accumulate on the floor, as it breeds vermin and disease to the youngsters. Dust insect powder on the hen and brood and in the cracks and crevices to prevent lice. Perhaps it is a better plan in building coops to have the runs attached. There are many advantages to such coops. By having the hens and chicks confined in them there is less liability of the chicks becoming chilled than where they are on range. The hen is in easy access, and when they become cold they can find warmth near by. In the runs the chicks are also free from molestation of larger fowls, cats and hawks, and they have a chance to grow more rapidly under these conditions.

An Attractive New Breed.

The Ancona came from the district of Italy around Ancona. It seems to be a relative or branch of the Leghorn family, also natives of Italy. Lewis Wright thinks that the origin of Anconas is to be found in accidental "sports" of this color from crossing White and Black Minorcas. They are good layers and nonsitters. By careful breeding it is expected that they will rival in egg qualities other members of the Mediterranean family. This breed is very active in habit, capital foragers; yet, like the Leghorns, they are small eaters. Their food is turned into eggs rather than flesh.



THE ANCONAS.

Poultry and Cash.

The production of poultry and eggs is a cash business. True, the farmer may at times buy on credit, but he is never compelled to sell eggs on credit. If prices are liable to fluctuate, they never get below the cost value of the eggs. Eggs can be produced at a very small cost compared with other articles sold off the farm, and they are produced every day in the year. It is the daily returns of cash that give the farmer such an advantage, for while he must wait two or three years for a steer to reach maturity there is no such delay with poultry, and within such a period several flocks will have been marketed as well as produced a supply of eggs. If it were not for the quick returns from poultry, they would not be retained on farms at all, but as they keep the egg basket full during winter and summer they largely assist in providing for immediate necessities.—Exchange.

Eggs For Hatching.

The eggshell is porous, and whenever it comes in contact with filth of any kind the quality of the egg is very quickly injured, says The American Cultivator. Eggs for hatching ought to be washed in warm or at least tepid water before being set. This removes obstructions that may have closed the pores of the egg. Whenever the egg is broken in the nest the thorough washing of all the remaining eggs should be attended to at once. If the albumen remains over the eggshell even a short time after the germ has started into life, the egg will quickly be addled. Chicks in the shell need the air which comes to them through their covering. If the broken egg is smeared over an egg which contains a living chick, the latter quickly dies.

The First Cost.

The beginner who buys a sitting of eggs from good pure bred stock at $1.50 a sitting and starts in early in the season is quite sure to make a good investment of it. Take the Brown Leghorns, for instance. There is money for all in this noble breed. Any one that gets as many as four pullets and cockerel from a sitting of Brown Leghorns' eggs at $1.50 has made a good thing of it, because the Leghorn pullets are worth twice as much as a common chicken as a layer of eggs for market, whereas in the fancier's market such a pullet is rated all the way from $1 to $5 in value. Two dollars is a very common price and is readily paid for such fowls.

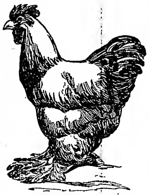
Geese, besides yielding a regular income in the way of feathers, are a profitable fowl to raise for market.

THEY COME HIGH.

A Thousand Dollars For a Cock and Six Hens.

Probably the highest priced rooster in America is the property of Adams, Purdue & Young, and he was raised by Mr. Newton Adams at his farm near Utica, N. Y. America is a lemon buff colored cochin, and to obtain this particular purity of shading brings a feeling to the fancier very much like the satisfaction a potter feels when a perfect peachblow vase is produced.

America was sired by Wonder, a bird that took first prize at the New York poultry show as a cock and first prize the year previous as a cockerel, and whose get are said to be better birds in every way than their sire. The particular breed is known in England as the Mrs. Harris strain. The characteristic mark is the extreme length of feather all over the body as well as the heavy foot feathers. Mr. George Purdue, one of the owners of America and sisters, says that Mr. Adams experimented a long time before he was able to produce their particular shade of color and still retain the proper form. The rooster, with six hens, are not for sale, although $1,000 has been offered for the lot.



AMERICA.

Cost of Keeping Ducks.

An exchange states that it costs about $2 to keep a duck a year. If this were true, it would be pretty hard to figure out any profit from keeping ducks. We have found that ducks could be kept about as cheaply as any other fowls of the same weight. It stands to reason that this is true, for it does not require any more food to support a pound in a duck than it does in any other bird. It has been found that birds eat more than mammals, pound for pound, and this has been explained by the fact that birds have a higher temperature than any other part of animal creation. To keep up this higher temperature it is necessary to consume more food, but in this respect ducks do not differ from any other birds, and a ten pound duck can be kept with the same amount of food that would be required by a ten pound chicken. One advantage in keeping ducks is that they produce all the eggs they lay in a year in a comparatively short time, and the remainder of the time they can be fed on coarse food without any care as to whether it is good egg food or not.

Aylesbury Ducks.

Of all ducks the Aylesburys are among the best. Plumage of unspotted white, a pale flesh colored bill, a dark prominent eye, with orange legs and a stately carriage, are the characteristics of this race, whose name is derived from the town of Aylesbury, England, in which neighborhood they are kept in large numbers for the supply of the London markets. The weight of the adult Aylesbury duck should at least average, if properly fed, from 10 to 12 pounds the pair (duck and drake). Instances have, however, occurred where the drakes have come up to eight pounds and upward and would in all probability, if fattened, reach ten pounds each. They are prolific layers. From two of these ducks 300 eggs have been obtained in the course of the year, in addition to which one of them sat twice, the other only once, the three nests giving 30 young ones. The eggs vary in color, some being white, while others are of a pale blue tint, the average weight being three ounces.

California Ranch Eggs.

A carload of eggs was shipped recently from San Francisco to Chicago. This is an entirely new idea. In speaking about this shipment a Chicago dealer said: "The price in San Francisco frequently ranges from 50 cents to 60 cents a dozen. Thirteen months ago we shipped four or five carloads of eggs to San Francisco and sold them for 16¼ cents a dozen, but last winter was warm, and eggs were cheap in Chicago. The wholesale price here in February was 28 cents a dozen. The carload we bought in San Francisco cost us 16 cents a dozen. The freight cost us 3¾ cents a dozen, leaving us a nice profit. The carload contained 12,000 dozen. They are what are called California ranch eggs. The cold rains on the coast were over in February, and the warm weather caused the hens to lay rapidly, and eggs were cheaper then than they have been for many years."

A Word For Thoroughbreds.

There was a time, says a successful poultryman, when I began poultry breeding as a business, that I hearkened to the voice of the charmer and bought common hens at 35 cents each for layers. The first winter I had 40 thoroughbred hens and over 80 common ones. To my surprise, the thoroughbreds laid fully two-thirds of all the eggs gathered. I sold the common stock and vowed that there should never be another common hen on the place. Our experience is that of many poultry keepers. In four years I have known not a single flock of common fowls that furnished their owner a surplus of eggs in cold weather.

Constant handling of the eggs in the incubator sometimes causes a failure to hatch if the hands are greasy.

THE START IN POULTRY.

A Few Words of Warning to the Ambitious Beginners.

Many persons who desire to go into the poultry business as a relief from some other pursuit make the mistake of investing a large amount of money without knowing whether they are right or wrong in so doing. It is safe to assert that the majority of the persons composing this class have not lived on farms, says The Poultry Keeper, and derived their partial knowledge of poultry from what they have seen. They are accustomed to witnessing the ease with which the hens seem to secure the pickings of the farm, a poultry house of a rude kind is visible, and the lady who holds the position as the farmer's wife gives an occasional feed. To the novice it is an easy and profitable way of making a living, being just the thing that has long been sought as a panacea for the ills of city life.

No experienced person in any branch of business will accept risks unless there is a possibility of gain, and the inexperienced person performs an indiscreet act by venturing into business without first considering the consequences of a mistake. While the novice sees the basket of eggs as the result of keeping poultry he knows nothing of the diseases to be encountered, the care to be given and the labor necessary to be bestowed before the desire can be consummated.

While we are prepared to claim that poultry pays better than anything else on the farm in proportion to capital invested, yet we believe that the beginner should be careful. No inexperienced person can launch off into success. He must learn, and to do so he must begin at the bottom. A beginner knows nothing of the breeds; he has never met a contagious disease, and he has no conception of the many details of management that will stare him in the face and cause him many little vexations and disappointments. Like all other occupations, there is always a possibility of heavy loss, and no one is exempt.

It is an old saying that before one can succeed with a large flock he must first learn to manage a small one. It is by being constantly with the flock and learning the peculiarities and characteristics of each individual that the novice becomes familiar with many details to which he may be a stranger. It is but an easy portion of the duties to feed a flock and collect the eggs.

Poultry as a business and poultry for pleasure are different pursuits. In the first place there is labor that must be performed or paid for, and in the second the labor is not even considered. Begin at the bottom and gradually extend your operations. By so doing you will learn as you enlarge and gradually reach a position from which success will be assured.

Eggs For Hatching.

There are several reasons why it is best and cheapest for any one desiring to begin pure bred poultry breeding to buy fine eggs instead of fowls. In the first place, the express charge is only one-half as much on eggs as it is on fowls of equal weight. This is a big item for the buyer when the stock comes from a distance by express. In the second place, eggs from the most choice fowls may be had at a reasonable price—say 13 eggs for the price of one fowl in the yards where the eggs come from. If a fancier values his fowls at $5 each, he will likely put the price of their eggs at $5 a sitting. Thirteen eggs from birds of that class would likely give the buyer, with ordinary success, a half a dozen chickens, each one of which would average at least one-half the original cost of the eggs, while more than likely there will be one or two chickens in the lot which are alone worth the price of the eggs.

Pigeons on the Farm.

There is nothing more attractive to a boy on a farm than a flock of pigeons, says a writer in Farm News, and there is no farm on which a few might not be kept. The common variety is easily obtained, and they will take care of themselves if given a nesting place. They are quite prolific, breeding four or five times a year, two birds being hatched at a time. The young make nice stews, and the old ones made into a potpie are a dish fit for a king. Much amusement may be got from the fancy sorts, such as pouters, tumblers, fantails, trumpeters and homers. We have kept all sorts and found ready sale for them at good prices. The squabs are always in good demand, and the old pigeons bring a good price always in the markets. It costs but very little to keep them, as they pick up most of their living about the farm. They make nice pets and serve a good purpose in keeping boys interested in the farm.

Poultry Points.

The conditions for raising chickens after hatching from an incubator are: All the out of door room they want, good housing, pure spring water, with ground sown to wheat, rye, buckwheat, peas, etc., for them to scratch in and feed upon.

On the large establishments, where hundreds of ducks are raised, the principal food for ducks is cooked turnips, with a small proportion of ground grain. Ducks and turnips are adjuncts to each other on the duck farms, for without turnips the ducks could not be made to lay so well.

If the hens are confined in order to protect the garden, they must have a daily supply of chopped grass. Too much grain will cause them to become overfat, and fewer eggs will be obtained. The best egg producing food is lean meat.

Soft food will tend to the production of eggs at the expense of health, but the exclusive use of hard food will tend to keep the hens from laying. Both kinds of food should be given if the best results are desired. Whole grain alternated with milk, meat and vegetables will make the hens productive and profitable.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia wind in stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve fluid or force. This is likewise true of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system, as will be seen by the accompanying cut. The little white lines are the nerves which convey the nerve force from the nerve centers to every part of the body, just as the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wires to every station, large or small. Ordinary physicians fail to regard this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorders arising therefrom they treat the part affected.

Franklin Miles, M. D. LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, long since realized the truth of the first statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. [illegible] Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind. on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Christian O. Espe and Jessie Espe, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 47 of mortgages, at page 9.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of six per centum (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and eleven (11) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment dated April 14th, A. D. 1892, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 448 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000. and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1893, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1115.00 being the sum of $1000. principal, and $115.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southwest quarter (SW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty-six (46), containing one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

Dated April 1st, A. D. 1895.

BADGER AND SUCKER.

The Way Illinois and Wisconsin Came to Get Their Nicknames.

"If there had been no badgers in Wisconsin," said a native of that state, "Wisconsin would not be known as the Badger State, and yet it did not receive the name because badgers were there. There were very few white people in Wisconsin territory in its early days, the population being confined to the military posts, the missionary and trading stations, and the lead mining regions in the southwestern part of the territory. The miners were of two classes, men who worked the mines all the year round and men who came up from the Illinois country in the spring and worked until the fall, when they returned to their prairies and groves. The miners who were permanent dwellers in the region didn't bother to put up cabins or even huts. In fact, material for such dwellings was not abundant. They simply dug holes in the sides of the hills large enough to give them room to sleep and cook in. Nowadays those burrows would perhaps be called dugouts, but as they closely resembled the subterranean homes of the badgers they were promptly called badger holes, and the miners who occupied them were called badgers.

"Any one who cares to tramp through that part of Wisconsin today will come upon deep excavations in the rocks—regular quarry holes bearing every evidence of having been made long ago. And so they were. Some of them were excavated 60 years ago and more. They were the work of the lead miners who went up from Illinois in the spring to the mining region. They, being there only for a short season, did not mine by digging shafts, as the permanent miners did, nor did they live in burrows. They blasted the surface rock, making large pits by their work, seeking what was called the float lead and ore that was easily obtained near the top. They occupied the pits they made, as the other miners did their hillside burrows.

"Owing to the similarity of the migrations of these quarry miners to those of that familiar fish which goes up stream in the spring and down again in the fall, they soon became known as suckers, and their pits in the rocks were called sucker holes. In the course of years the names badger and sucker came to be applied to the entire people of Wisconsin and Illinois. Many of the original badgers and suckers became the leading citizens of their respective localities and helped make the country's history. When Wisconsin was admitted to the Union, the badger was placed on her coat of arms in recognition of this fact, and it was from the miners who quarried in the rocks of Wisconsin that Illinois got her name of the Sucker State."—New York Sun.

Worth's Generosity.

An anecdote of the great Worth's generosity has been going the rounds. Just where the generosity comes in, however, is what I have failed to detect.

It was during the days of the empire that a leader of fashion in Paris, finding that she had overdrawn her husband's munificent allowance, and that a great fancy ball was imminent, went to the great man milliner and prayed him to hire her a costume.

He was shocked. Such mean expedients had never come in his line. The lady prayed. The great man denied. Finally the prayers of beauty prevailed. But she was to wear a costume entirely of his devising.

He dressed her as the flag of Paris. The tricolor fluttered in her skirts, on her shoes, in her enameled earrings. Her hair was dressed to represent a stormy sea in which rode the famous three masted galley bearing the arms of Paris. The lady was enraptured. The great man only charged her 1,500 francs. The dress was here for one night only.

A Railroader's Prayer.

A railroad man is responsible for the following prayer:

"O Lord, now that I have flagged thee, lift my feet from off the road of life and plant them safely on deck of the train of salvation! Let me use the safety lamp known as prudence, make all couplings in the train with the strong link of thy love and let my lamp be the Bible. And, heavenly Father, keep all switches closed that lead off on the sidings, especially those with a blind end! O Lord, if it be thy pleasure, have every semaphore block along the line to show the white light of hope that I may make the run of life without stopping. And, Lord, give us the Ten Commandments as a schedule, and when I have finished the run, and have on schedule time pulled into the great station of death, may thou, the Superintendent of the Universe, say with a smile: 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Come and sign the pay roll and receive your check for eternal happiness.'"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Equal to the Emergency.

An old admiral well known for his power of exaggeration was describing a voyage at supper one night. "While cruising in the Pacific," he said, "we passed an island which was positively red with lobsters."

"But," said one of the guests, smiling incredulously, "lobsters are not red until boiled."

"Of course not," replied the undaunted admiral, "but this was a volcanic island with boiling springs."—Pearson's Weekly.

Baldness.

Men become bald more frequently than women because of the closeness of the hats they wear, which keep the head too hot, induce perspiration and weaken the hair. The boys of the famous Blue Coat schools of London, who never wear hats, never become bald late in life.

Robespierre had a thin face, sharp nose, narrow forehead and small mouth, with thin lips. He always dressed neatly and was often mistaken for a department clerk or bookkeeper.

ROYAL FLUSHES A DELUSION.

They Come Once In a While, but Do Not Always Win Much.

"These stories about men making big winnings by accidentally catching a straight flush when luck seemed down on them make me very weary," said an amateur poker player, who has been "poking" off and on for about 18 years, playing, however, nothing more imposing than "penny ante."

"I always class such stories with snake stories and fishing tales," the player went on. "There may be some truth in them, but I have never had any such luck—and I have held my own very well at 'penny ante' too.

"I have had just two 'royal flushes' in my experience. So far as the accidental and surprising part of them was concerned, that was all right, but for the big winnings—I never saw them. On the contrary, on both occasions, my opponents—I was playing two handed games each time—'lay down' on me unceremoniously. And I don't think I gave my hand away either.

"The first royal flush I ever had the fortune to hold in my hand was about six years ago, when I was having a quiet little game with an old friend. It was a modest 'jackpot.'

"My opponent opened it for a nickel—the limit. I skinned my hand, but could not find a pair. A king and queen of hearts looked pretty, and I chipped in my nickel and drew to them.

"Imagine my surprise when an ace, a ten and a jack of hearts came to me. I kept mighty quiet, hoping to make a 'killing.'

"My opponent threw in a nickel chip, and I saw it and raised it the nickel limit. He lay down. He had not bettered a measly pair of jacks.

"The other time I had a royal flush was about a year and a half ago. My opponent asked me if I had ever had one and said that he had not.

"The second hand after his remark I had the 'ace,' and he staid in. I had a queen, jack and ten of clubs and thought I would try for a straight or flush. The king and then the ace of clubs came to me.

"My opponent skinned his hand and then said, 'I'll give it to you.' He had only an ace high, with king next.

"I showed him my hand, and he volubly congratulated himself that he had not 'bettered' his draw, while I—well, I never swear in company, but I felt mighty like it."—Kansas City Star.

Prince Charlie.

He was a young Prince Charming, beautiful, brave, capable of enduring hardships and, till his misfortune soured him, not only kind, but of an uncommon and almost impolitic humanity. Well might Walton, the spy, pronounce him, with the blood of John Sobieski in his veins, "a far more dangerous enemy to the present establishment of the government in England than ever his father was."

In those days, when a king of some sort was a necessity, England seemed to have in Charles a king born to be adored. But the tendency of things was invincibly against him. He appears, I own to myself, to have had better qualities than any man of his line since the fourth James fell at Flodden. There was nothing in his Scotch expedition, till the fatal morrow of Culloden, that did not become a gentleman and a king. The Cameronians, a feeble, but virulent remnant of the auld leaven of the covenant, publicly blamed his "foolish lenity and pity" to the "redcoats whom Providence put into his hands."

If his courage is accused, so has that of Marlborough been, and the evidence of Malcolm McLeod, "never was a man not a coward so prudent, nor a man not rash so brave," may be taken as disposing of a childishly malevolent accusation. He was gentle and considerate till misfortune taught him suspicion and hope deferred made the heart sick. The exposure, which he bore so gallantly in the highlands, and the habits of that country, taught him his fatal vice, which corrupted and debased a character naturally noble and generous.—Scribner's Magazine.

He Returned the Tip.

The Bristol (England) Mercury says that while Paderewski, the pianist, was in a nearby town recently he received a courteously worded letter asking to allow an invalid lady to call upon him and hear him play one piece, promising in return for "this great treat" a douceur of half a guinea, which was tendered with much apology. The letter was so worded as to be a courteous and delicate appeal to the pianist's generosity. The letter had the desired effect, and he appointed a time. Punctual to the moment, the lady appeared, and Paderewski played her a few pieces. The lady thanked him and slipped the promised half guinea, in the most gracious mode of tipgiving into his palm. "Ah! what is this?" blandly asked the pianist. "The half guinea I promised you." "I really believe," he answered, with a smile, "that I shall be able to get to the next town without it," saying which he returned the proffered largesse, bowed the lady out and sat down to his interrupted breakfast.

The Tramp's Opportunity.

Queer things happen in this world. A tramp took refuge in an old graveyard in Georgia and prepared for a sound night's rest between two graves. About the hour when churchyards are supposed to "yawn" he was awakened by a strange noise, and on looking up he discovered an escaped convict, in the act of filing his shackles. As the tramp stood up the convict, in superstitious terror, fell upon his knees, whereupon the tramp arrested him, delivered him over to the authorities at the camp near by and received a reward of $20.—Atlanta Constitution.

Bishop Fleming.

In Lincolnshire, England, it is the current belief that Bishop Fleming, founder of Lincoln college, Oxford, died while attempting to imitate the Saviour's miraculous fast of 40 days.

TWO AUTOGRAPHS.

Bismarck Saw Von Moltke's Sentiment and Went Him One Better.

A young German lady of rank, possessed of great personal charms and singularly winning manners, the daughter of a prominent politician, herself now a happy wife and mother, once beguiled Moltke, who was paying a brief visit to her father's country home in Silesia, into writing something in her autograph album. This was the entry:

> Luge vergeht;
> Wahrheit besteht.
> V. MOLTKE, Feldmarschall.

Which in English would be:

> A lie must fail;
> Truth will prevail.

The wily damsel now determined to bide her time until she should be able to match Moltke's dictum. When her family had again settled down in their Berlin quarters for the winter season, Prince Bismarck called one afternoon, and she showed him her book, calling his attention to what the great strategist had written, adding artlessly: "Do you think the same, dear prince? Perhaps you would like to add your comment? And on the same page? Oh, thank you so very much! And may I send the volume to the Wilhelmstrasse?" The chancellor next day returned the book, now a greatly treasured family possession, and this is what he had written beneath the contribution of his colleague:

> Wohl weiss ich, dass in jener Welt
> Die Wahrheit stets den Sieg behalt.
> Doch gegen Luge dieses Lebens
> Kampft selbst ein Feldmarschall vergebens.
> V. BISMARCK, Reichskanzler.

Very roughly Englished, the chancellor's lines might run something like this:

> In future worlds, beyond the pale,
> The truth is strong and shall prevail.
> But 'gainst our mundane lies, 'tis plain,
> Field marshals even fight in vain.
> —Westminster Gazette.

LAMPS THAT ARE CLOCKS.

They Were Commonly Used In the Seventeenth Century.

Of the various examples that have been given of early specimens of the clockmaker's art not the least interesting are the several types of lamp clocks. One of these was of a kind quite common in the seventeenth century and consisted of a lamp burner placed at the base of a glass oil receptacle mounted vertically on a suitable standard. The oil reservoir had attached to it a scale, facing the burner and showing the hours, beginning at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the lamp was to be lighted in winter, and ending at 7 o'clock in the morning. The lamp being lighted, the gradually descending level of the oil, as combustion proceeded, marked the hours.

The other device, of later origin, dating back to the beginning of the present century, utilized the same principle. It consisted of two communicating oil chambers, superposed by a clock dial. In one of the chambers was placed a night lamp to illuminate the [illegible] in the other was suspended a [illegible] a cord which passed around [illegible] ley. The latter was mounted on a horizontal axis ending in the center of the dial. The float of course [illegible] the oil was consumed and [illegible] index hand along with it, thus [illegible] the hours precisely as in the case above cited. At their best these timepieces could have had only an indifferent degree of accuracy, yet they probably served their purpose well and certainly are interesting at the present time as illustrating some of the expedients adopted by mechanicians of an earlier period.—Cassier's Magazine.

An Independent Lawyer.

A lawyer, with his client, called one day at the office of a gentleman who is considered to be one of the leading men of the Philadelphia bar. The lawyer had an important case, and he wanted to take the legal big gun in as adviser. He explained his business and said he and the client would be back in the afternoon. "I won't be here then," said the legal giant. "I have an engagement at 3 o'clock, and I won't be here after that hour." "But there is a $5,000 fee in this for you," explained the younger lawyer. "Can't help it. I won't be here. You will have to come tomorrow."

"But my client can't come tomorrow."

"Well, I can't break my engagement," said the senior. After some further talk it was agreed that a meeting be held that night. That afternoon, having nothing else to do, the young lawyer and his client went to a ball game. The first man they saw inside the grounds was the great lawyer, who was hurrahing for the "Phillies" with all the vigor of his lungs. That was his important engagement. Needless to say the lawyer's practice nets him enough money each year to make him independent.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Old Time Football.

Football has never been a very gentle game, to judge from what Master Stubbes says about it in his "Anatomie of Abuses," published in 1583:

For, as concerning football playing, I protest unto you it may rather be called a friendly kinde of fight than a play of recreation, a bloody and murthering practice than a sport or pastime, for dooth not every one lye in waight for his adversarie, seeking to overthrow him and to picke him on his nose, though it be on hard stones, so that by this meanes sometimes their necks are broken, sometimes their backs, sometimes their legs, sometimes their armes, sometimes one part thrust out of joynt, sometimes another; sometimes the noses gush out with blood; sometimes their eyes start out.

Servia.

Servia is thus called because it was originally inhabited by the Suedi, or Suevi, who located there, designing to remain, but were driven out toward the north by other tribes, and finally made their way to Sweden.

HE WAS HARD TO BEAT

A SLY OLD WOODCHUCK AND HIS PERSISTENT ENEMY.

A Long Island Farmer Relates His Experience With a Chuck That Had Become Very Smart Through Close Touch With Civilization.

"Speakin of woodchucks," said an old Long Island farmer the other day, "reminds me of some curious incidents with 'em. 'Twern't more'n 50 years ago when they was thick as flies on this island, an we ate them instead of rabbits an made mufflers and mittens out of their skins. They was mighty warm, too, those old woodchuck mittens an mufflers. When a man wanted a big fellow, he only had to walk down into the nearest field an take his pick out of two or three. They was so plentiful that it was no trouble to kill 'em. But they have been killed off now so that there ain't many more roun. Once in awhile a big fellow brings up a litter into the lower clover lot an we have to root 'em out.

"Ever hunt woodchucks? Waal, it ain't much if they be young ones. If you wait long enough, you'll catch them runnin across the lot in broad daylight. If you are a good shot, you can bring one down. They're tough, an a big fellow will carry away a big load of shot. But if you get hold of a big fellow, an old veteran, so to speak, you'll find it no easy job to dislodge him. He's too knowin a cuss to live. He'll only eat your clover at night, an, Lord, how much he can get away with in one night! In the daytime he keeps close into his hole an laughs at you. Dig him out? Waal, yes, you can try it, but he'll dig a good deal faster on the other end than you will an take it easy at that. Mind you, I'm talkin of old ones—those know all the tricks of the business. The woodchucks that you find on Long Island are wiser than those most anywhere else 'cause they have to be cunnin an shrewd not to get killed. They're so close to civilization that they learn new tricks all the time.

"A few years ago a cunnin old fellow took up his home in that clover field just off the lower medders, an we had the hardest time to kill him that you can imagine. I guess afore we got through with him he cost us 'bout $100—that is, fur clover destroyed an labor at $1.50 per day lost in trying to capture him. 'Twarn't any use layin in wait fur him with a shotgun. He was too wise to poke his nose out of the hole. But every night he'd come out an eat clover fast enough. He brought up seven litters of young chucks in that field, but we killed 'em all except the old one. He'd bring a new mate with him to his home every season, but she'd be shot in tryin to save her young ones. But we could never get a shot at the prime mover of the whole trouble. We waited fur him on moonlight nights an did get a shot at him once. But I guess we only crippled him, an he never ventured out again except on dark nights. We had no chance then. We tried to dig him out, but after three days of steady work we got tired. Then we started to burn an smoke him out, but it ain't no easy matter to make smoke go down hill an get into all of the holes that a woodchuck can make. Finally we decided to drown the old critter out. We got together all the old pork an oil barrels that we could find an filled them full of water. Then when everything was ready Si an Jake, my two sons, stood ready with a pitchfork an shotgun while I poured the water into the hole.

"Waal, sir, that hole held more water than my millpond. It took the hull ten barrelfuls to bring it up to the surface, an then, jest as I put in the last pailful, that pesky old chuck showed his nose. Si jabbed at him with the pitchfork, an Jake shot the handle to pieces as he banged away at the critter. But it warn't no use. The water soaked away rapidly, an the woodchuck went down again, grinnin at our failure.

"But we warn't so easily discouraged. Next day we added five more barrels an all the tubs an pails round the house. Then we began to flood that hole again. This time we had plenty of water, but there was no woodchuck to appear. The water came up to the surface an flowed out of the hole, but no woodchuck. We thought he had left his home for good after his first duckin. But no. He came out again that night, an ate more clover than usual jest as if ta spite us. Waal, we found out in time that the critter was so wise that he had dug his hole way up toward a hill so that he could sit up there an watch us pourin water in at the other end. This put a stop to any attempt to drown him out.

"It was Si that rigged up the trap that finally caught the old fellow. He took a big stone weight 'bout 50 pounds an suspended it right over the hole. Then he fixed a little stick down below jist as he would set a rabbit trap. The old muskrat couldn't get out of the hole nowhy without hitting that stick, an—well, the thing happened two nights later. The first night the critter didn't venture out, but the second mornin the stone was down, an the old fellow was crushed beneath it. We ain't had none in the fields since then."—New York Post.

Great Courtesy.

Mme. Calve had an experience with the courtesy of the Spanish thieves once while she was in Madrid. Two well dressed strangers stole her satchel, which contained some money and a number of luck pieces and talismans, including a bunch of dried flowers from her father's grave. The loss worried the artiste, but when the newspapers reported the theft the thieves sent her the precious relics neatly inclosed in a packet, in which was a polite note begging that the "finder" of the reticule might be permitted to keep the money as a souvenir of so charming a vocalist.—New York World.

THE business end of the Minnesota Editorial Association meets in St. Paul tomorrow to consider matters of importance to the fraternity.

IN two more years "Grover and clover" will be relegated to innocuous desuetude and then the American people will do justice to the gallant Meade.

THE death of Walter Q. Gresham removes from the administration one of its strongest, one of its purest members. Whatever may be said of Gresham's mistakes, the honesty of his motives may not be called into question.

THE absence of intoxicated persons upon our streets upon Memorial day was one of the pleasing features of the day. This was the more noticeable because that day has come to be considered a sort of a holiday and some people do not seem to consider that they can have much of a celebration without intoxicants. The entire absence of drunken men upon our streets shows an improvement that is truly gratifying.

WE are not among those who expect to see two-dollar wheat in the near future, but we are and for some time have been among those who expect to see greatly improved prices in the near future—as soon as the coming fall. If there were not other strong reasons to inspire that hope, the very fact that wheat prices have been depressed so long would be good and sufficient reason for a great change for the better in the early future. We will be satisfied with one dollar wheat in this market, if we can get that price.

REPORTS from all over the United States indicate that Memorial day was more universally observed this year than ever showing that patriotism in this country is not on the wane. And we are pleased to see fewer accounts of ball games and other amusements which shows that the people are awaking to the fact that this day, while it is a holiday has another and higher significance than simply a day to be devoted to recreation and amusements. Everywhere great crowds turned out to do honor to the old soldiers who lost their lives in the cause of universal freedom and those who have since died. This is a grand augury for this great and glorious nation and indicates that that patriotism that is the corner-stone upon which our liberties are founded, shall live so long as there is one live American citizen to keep it alive.

National Educational Association.

About one month from this time, the National Education Association will meet in Denver, Colorado. It seems hardly necessary to say anything about the objects of this Association, and the help its meetings are to educators, but it is seasonable to remind the teachers in our own schools that in casting about for a vacation trip, nothing will so fully combine pleasure with profit, as a journey to Colorado, and attendance on the Association meetings July 5th to 12th. The railroads have made a very low rate for the trip, and the tickets will be good for return until September 1st, affording ample time, after the week of meetings, to visit the pleasure resorts and mountain scenery of the "Centennial State," or to spend the time with friends resident there, while the railroads of Colorado offer low rates for trips to all points of interest. A word as to routes. From whatever place you start you will necessarily strike the lines of the Burlington Route, either at points east of the Missouri and Mississippi, or at Omaha. Remember that this is the pioneer route from the East to Denver and is the preferable route in all respects. In buying a ticket, see that it reads, for some part of the journey over the Burlington. For full particulars and any special information, address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Detroit Free Press: "I never use window screens," said a wise housekeeper the other day, "because I have a fancy that they shut out all the air in hot weather, and, besides, they serve to keep the flies in the house equally as well as out." "But I never see a fly in your house," said her friend. "How do you manage it? For my part I must confess that screens or no screens, summer means to me one long battle with the little pests." "My remedy is a very simple one," said the good housekeeper, "and I learned it years ago from my grandmother, when I used to watch her putting bunches of lavender flowers around to keep the flies away. My method is simple. I buy five cents worth of oil of lavender at the drug store and mix it with the same quantity of water. Then I put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the room wherever flies are apt to congregate, especially in the dining room, where I sprinkle it plentifully over the table linen. The odor is especially disagreeable to flies, and they never venture in its neighborhood, though to most people it has a peculiar and grateful smell."

New York Fashion Letter.

Madame la Mode showers so many artistic novel designs and shades of colors on the new cotton fabrics that it will not be the fault of her toilette if the summer girl is not a picture this season.

The new cottons are not only exquisit in ornament and elegant in effect, but they are, what is most desirable of all, inexpensive, and when made up according to the latest caprice of la Mode, they are dreams of beauty and daintiness. Lovely crepe-challies come in a variety of Dresden effects. Sometimes the whole gown is scattered with exquisite blossoms or ornamented with a charming Dresden border.

One cannot imagine the fascinating and fairylike effect of the new flowered lawns trimmed with gauze Pompadour ribbons, combined with embroidery or lace. One beautiful imported gown of green organdie is so exactly the shade of June grass that with the perfectly colored wild flowers scattered over it, the effect brought to the mind is a vision of fresh country fields with bright blossoms. The very full Paysanne skirt is made over a foundation slip of pale violet silk. A black gauze ribbon painted with buttercups and tied in knots at intervals borders the bottom of the dress. The corsage is trimmed in fichu effect, with delicate mull embroidery and the same buttercup ribbon.

As for points of information concerning street gowns, the drooping waists, large sleeves and full skirts increase in popularity.

Modistes from Paris bring skirts very wide, but less stiffened than formerly. The average width is five or six yards at the foot and close-fitting about the hips. Those like design on first page of "La Mode de Paris" for June are specially popular.

An exquisite little summer gown is illustrated in the Paris Fashion Letter of the "Paris Album of Fashion." The most charming and picturesque group of children's summer costumes and dainty little bonnets are seen in "La Mode." The very toilette on the cover of the "French Dressmaker" is a poem in itself. All the above mentioned journals are published by the well-known house of A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th Street.

"La Mode de Paris" and "Paris Album of Fashion" cost $3.50 each for a year's subscription or 35 cents a copy; "The French Dressmaker" is $3.00 per annum, or 30 cents a copy; and "La Mode" is $1.50 a year, or 15 cents per copy. If you are unable to secure either of these journals from your newsdealer do not take any substitute, but apply by mail to Messrs. A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th Street, New York.

Blackie and the Magician.

Many years ago "the Wizard of the North" gave some performances in Edinburgh, and Professor Blackie was one of the crowd who went to see them. As he was making his way in he felt something at his coattail, and putting his hand into his pocket he found an egg. This he took out and most adroitly transferred it to the pocket of a young man just in front of him, a person as unlike himself as can well be imagined. Arrived in the hall, he remarked where this young man placed himself and chose his own seat in a corner as remote as possible. When the time came for "Wizard" Anderson to "trouble" him for the egg, he arose and explained that he had nothing of the sort in his pocket, but that he believed "that gentleman" could produce it, pointing to the astonished young man, whose surprise, however, by no means equaled that of the wizard.—M. A. in London News.

The dwelling house owned by Mrs. Chris Mickler is being torn down and the lumber hauled to her farm east of town, where she will erect a new building some time this season.

THE June number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW offers a table of contents extremely varied, timely, and interesting. The opening pages are devoted to an important paper upon the "Power and Wealth of the United States," by MICHAEL G. MULHALL, the noted foreign statistician, who forcibly maintains that the American people possess the greatest productive power in the world. Senator HENRY CABOT LODGE, of Massachusetts, discusses, England, Venezuela, and the Monroe Doctrine, in an article of political interest, while J. HENNIKER HEATON, M. P., writes most entertainingly concerning "A Cable Post," and the possibilities of Atlantic submarine communication. General JOHN GIBSON, U. S. A., asks "Can West Point Be Made More Useful?" suggesting certain modifications in the rules at present governing that famous military academy, and in the second and concluding portion of "Glimpses of Charles Dickens," the last days of the great novelist are pathetically described by CHARLES DICKENS, the younger. A valuable contribution on the Military Lessons of the China-Japanese War," by the Hon. HILARY A. HERBERT, the Secretary of the Navy, will commend itself to everyone interested in the recent warfare in the East. "The Silver Question" is treated this month by COUNT VON MIRBACH, of the Prussian House of Lords and German Reichstag, who considers "Germany's Attitude as to a Bi-metallic Union," and by the Mexican Minister at Washington, who describes the effect of "The Silver Standard in Mexico." The former Governor General of Canada, the MARQUIS of LORNE, furnishes "Some Thoughts on Canada," and the sixth installment of ALBERT D. VANDAM'S "Personal History of the Second Empire, is devoted to "The Renovation of Paris." "Nordau's Theory of Degeneration" is vigorously dealt with in a symposium which includes KENYON COX, the artist; ANTON SEIDL, the popular music director, and MAYO W. HAZELTINE, the well-known literary critic of the New York SUN. Other topics considered are "The Modern Woman and Marriage," by ELIZABETH BISLAND; Poor CITY BOYS in the Country," by ALVAN F. SANBORN: "Harnessing the Sun," by PETER T. AUSTEN, and The Silver Question in Ancient Times," by PLAIN-SPEAKER.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Walker and Will Munch were over from Crookston Sunday.

Mrs. Thus. Johnson of Crookston was visiting friends in and about Fisher the first of the week.

Mr. J. Gleason of Crookston, has the thanks of our band boys for a donation of $2.00 to their benefit.

The Crookston police felt constrained to decline the G. A. R. invitation to take part in the Memorial day exercises, as they are not provided with dress parade uniforms.

We are informed by some of our farmer friends that the flax and barley crops are not as badly damaged by the frost as was at first supposed, and are coming on in fine shape and bid fair to yield a good crop.

Our band boys drove to Crookston Memorial Day and had the honor of furnishing the music for the occasion. They did themselves proud, and our town is fortunate in having a gentleman to instruct the boys who is as capable as Prof Hetler. The boys say they were treated in a most excelent manner and consequently had a most enjoyable time. They recieved $40. for their services.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative power that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

One Day For The Old Soldiers.

Minneapolis Tribune.

A vivid cartoon in an Eastern paper calls prominent attention to the larger space now given to athletic sports on Memorial Day in many localities, than to the proper observance of that day. Athletic sports are an excellent thing in their way; but athletic sports of some kind may be indulged in on every day in the year, while there is but one day set apart for doing honor to the memory of the men who died that the nation might live. It would seem that no excercises of a public character ought to be permitted to interfere with the regular Memorial Day ceremonies. The nation's heroes are entitled to some consideration. The young men should not seek to crowd out the memory of the fathers. Each generation is accorded its own mission and duties in the scheme of providence. It was the mission of the generation of 35 years ago to brave the perils of war and to endure the hardships of the march, the battle and the siege. It seems to be the mission of the rising generation to inaugurate an era of broader physical culture and to inculcate taste for out-door excercises and sports. It is an excellent mission and cannot fail to be productive of good results now and hereafter. But surely one day in the year can be spared from such pursuits for the inculcation of lessons of patriotism, the revival of sacred feeling and the keeping alive of holy memories. Let the veterans have their one day undisturbed!

Catalogue of Carleton College.

The annual catalogue of Carleton College at Northfield, Minn., for the academic year, 1894-5, shows a total enrollment of 277 students, 122 of which are in the college department and in post graduate study. The three full, four-year courses of study are all represented in the present graduating class which consists of twenty members, twelve ladies and eight gentlemen. The post graduate students are five in number, three gentlemen and two ladies, four of these students are pursuing the special course of three years in mathematics and astronomy.

It is a noteworthy fact for the friends of the Institution that this Commencement, June 8-13, 1895, is the 25th anniversary of the College. On this account large preparations are being made to celebrate the occasion in a fitting manner. Prominent educators and many Carleton students of former years are planning to be present on this anniversary occasion.

THIRTY YEARS AFTER THE WAR.

Extracts from a sermon preached on Sunday morning, May 26th, at the Congregational Church by Rev. H. P. Fisher.

"Thirty years ago today marked the final collapse of the southern confederacy. A costly war was ended. Patriots numbering 2,335,951 had voluntarily left their homes and 360,000 graves in the national cemeteries mark the number of those who ne'er returned.

The great bard of Avon wrote:

"Blow, blow, thou winter wind! thou art not so unkind as man's ingratitude."

For three hundred years this verdict was accepted by the enchanted readers of this marvelous poet, but now a new leaf is turned in history, and we duly remember our patriotic dead. From Hugo's matchless description of Waterloo and Howard's delineation of Gettysburg we easily imagine that these two great battles of modern history were somewhat alike. They were similar in field outline, in the number of the soldiers who fought and the number killed. But there the likeness ends. Three monuments on the field of Waterloo do honor to some representatives of royalty; while on Gettysburg's sacred soil are 500 monuments—all commemorating the deeds of private soldiers.

Both the North and the South fought bravely. They stood for their convictions and ideals of government. But these ideals were fundamentally opposite. The ideal of the one was "of" and "for" and "by" the masses; that of the other was "of" and "for" and "by" the classes. Both sides read the Bible, the one reading the Bible into its ideals; the other reading its ideals into the Bible. The result reminds us that progress is along the line of what God requires; decadence along the line of what man desires. How hard it is to read clearly where it costs to do so! "John Brown was justly hanged," said Wm. H. Seward. "John Brown was right," said John A. Andrew. The first was the utterance of an aspirant for the presidency; the second was the calm word of the determined executive of the Bay state, to whom unpopularity or popularity was as the fine dust upon the balance. Is it right to commemorate the victories of war? Yes for there have been times when liberty was trembling, and every means but the bullet had failed. Said Lincoln in his first inaugural: "In your hands and not in mine are the momentous issues of the civil war. You can have no conflict without being yourselves the aggressors. You have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the government, while I have a most solemn one to protect and defend it." But the wonderful appeal was unheeded, and the stronger brother had to restrain the weaker from destroying the things dear to both. The true significance of the conflict is more and more apparent as the years fly. It was not a war for the North and against the South; not a war for the slave and against the master; but it was a war for the North and the South, for the slave and the master, for the world and humanity.

"Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray."

Let "Memorial Day" never be to us a funeral march, but rather a trumpet call. Liberty is responsibility, not release. It is far easier to live under a reasonable despotism than in a republic. Within the memory of some of you the blood of two martyred presidents have been shed. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

During a visit to this country Herbert Spencer said: "You retain the forms of freedom but there is a considerable loss of the substance."

"New occasions teach new duties. Time makes ancient good uncouth. He must upward rise and onward who would keep abreast of truth. Nor attempt the future's portals with the past's blood-rusted key."

SARSAPARILLA
Admitted at the
WORLD'S FAIR
CHICAGO
1893

Why Was It

that Ayer's Sarsaparilla, out of the great number of similar preparations manufactured throughout the world, was the only medicine of the kind admitted at the World's Fair, Chicago? And why was it that, in spite of the united efforts of the manufacturers of other preparations, the decision of the World's Fair Directors was not reversed?

BECAUSE

According to RULE 15—"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition," and, therefore—

Because Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, and not a secret preparation.

Because its proprietors had nothing to conceal when questioned as to the formula from which it is compounded.

Because it is all that it is claimed to be—a Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla, and in every sense, worthy the indorsement of this most important committee, called together for passing upon the manufactured products of the entire world.

A. W. Foss came down on the first day train from Fosston Tuesday and returned at night. Says the crop prospects are booming and everybody correspondingly happy.

T. C. Shapleigh showed up in good form on Tuesday. Tom does not seem to grow old a little bit——on the other hand he seems to be renewing his youth and growing up with the country.

The "Speckled Trout" is the name of a new five-cent cigar at P. L. Renne's. As the trout in the finny tribe is said to be the best eating, so the "Trout" in the cigar family is said to be the best smoking.

The Fisher band came up on Memorial day and furnished the music for the occasion. The Fisherites may well be proud of their band as it is an organization that would be a credit to many a far larger place.

Health and happiness are relative conditions; at any rate, there can be little happiness without health. To give the body its full measure of strength and energy, the blood should be kept pure and vigorous, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Alex. McKinnon is nursing a pet foot. One of those new trotters stepped on it and decapitated various and sundry toe-nails last week. Alex. says in spite of that foot and hard times he has sold over 10,000 acres of Polk county soil this spring.

Tommy Wallace was in from his farm near Marin, on Saturday. Says the last wind storm did a good bit of damage to his crop as well as several others. Among others to suffer were John Sylvesterson, John Amundson and Peter Noesen.

Miss Cora LeGuee spent most of the week with her parents, returning to her school duties at Euclid on Monday morning.

Geo. Carpenter went over to Dakota, this week, to see about a colony who go to Bella Coola soon. He expects to accompany the colony as far as Winnipeg.

Frank LaBissloniere returned on Saturday from a winter's visit in Florida and left for his home at Red Lake Falls. He thinks Polk county is good enough for him.

Chas. McSweeney was before Hizzoner Judge McLean on Monday, on a charge of drunk and disorderly, and was committed in default of the stuff to square the deal.

Mark Rauenbuehler had a smile on his German countenance about a mile wide on Saturday——all because his better half had returned from a visit to her daughter in St. Paul.

The Sherman House has a new clerk—a very new clerk, born on June 1st—a sort of a night clerk at first. Landlord Shields feels very highly elated over the acquisition.

S. E. Chapla says that notwithstanding the rumor that he would soon depart for Arizona he does not intend to do so——not just yet awhile. He thinks old Polk county is good enough for him.

John Lester has started up a Laundry business in the building owned by Mrs. LaChapelle, corner of Fourth and Broadway. The machinery was received last week and Johnny gets down to biz this week.

Frank Murray was brought before Judge Holt on Monday, on a charge of drunk and disorderly. He was fined $2.50 and costs and immediately re-arrested on a charge of larceny, and was held for trial. He seems to be a thoroughbred.

The prospects for the Firemen's Tournament June 19th, 20th and 21st are said to be good for a big turnout and a big time. The races, which will be on at that time will help to draw out a big crowd and will add to the entertainment offered.

Chas. Peterson, the village blacksmith of Wylia, was in on Saturday and reports all crops up there in a flourishing condition. Mr. Peterson is the efficient town clerk of Black River township.

The daily train on the Fosston line commenced this week and now you can go out to Maple Lake by rail any day you choose, and you do not have to stay a week, either. We think this will prove a privilege that will be highly appreciated.

The Fair store received a coat of paint last week, which very much improves its appearance, and W. D. does not know now which he really admires the most——or his best girl. He has an idea that the store front has the most paint——a trifle.

On Saturday evening the guarantee necessary to insure the location of the new experimental school was sent to the board of regents and will be in evidence at their coming meeting early in June. It is thought that this will insure the location of the farm near this city.

The closing exercises of our city schools for the term were appropriately observed on Friday last, attended by a great number of our citizens. The large attendance showed a healthy interest in school matters that was highly appreciated by teachers and pupils.

The census man shouldered his big book on Tuesday morning and started out to count noses and ask all manner of impertinent questions, as to your age and previous condition of servitude. To a man this is all a matter of course, but it is funny how young the ladies all are at this time of their life.

Geo. O. Buhn received a telegram last week announcing the serious illness of his mother who lives in Wisconsin and left at once for her bedside. He arrived to find her just alive but unconscious and she expired a few minutes after his arrival. After the funeral he returned to his home in this city.

Most coughs may be cured in a few hours or at any rate in a few days, by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. With such a prompt and sure remedy as this at hand, there is no need of prolonging the agony for weeks and months. Keep this remedy in your house.

There has been some serious talk of having Charlie Misner court-martialed and brought before the Camp of Modern Woodmen on a charge of neglect of his duties as weather clerk since June 1st. If he don't know any better than this what kind of weather "lovely June" is entitled to, he ought to be drummed out of the Camp.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

The little carriage of the Gen. Tom Thumb aggregation attracted much attention on the streets on Monday afternoon. The ubiquitous small boy was in evidence to the extent of a million or so——more or less but the carriage was only a hollow mockery——nobody in it. The weather was so inclement that the little folks did not venture to ride out.

On Saturday last Louis Gonyea received news of the death of his mother, aged 79 years, and left for Little Falls on the evening train. He returned on Sunday morning with the remains and the funeral took place at 8 o'clock at St. Ann's church. Mrs. Gonyea was a resident of this city for several years and went to Little Falls in March last.

The annual meeting of the Northern Pacific conference of Congregational and Union churches, will be held at Wadena on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 18th and 19th. Each Congregational and Union church is entitled to representation by the pastor and two delegates. The church at Wadena extends a cordial welcome also to any who may feel interested enough to attend.

The Commercial club held an important meeting on Friday evening and discussed many projects that if matured would be of great importance to our city. Among them a packing house and the prospects are good for the establishment of a large institution in this city. If it comes within the range of possibilities the club will secure it, and there are other important enterprises on foot that time will develope.

Conductor Walter Alexander showed up in good form, bright and smiling on Monday night, and the boys nearly talked an arm off him. He went up to Warren on Tuesday morning to see Will Box's folks before his return to his home in Tacoma, from whence he was called by the company as a witness in a case in which it is interested in Grand Forks. By the way Walt has shaken hands with the bumpers since he went west and nearly lost his right hand by the squeeze.

Capt. H. W. Donaldson was in from Northcote, on Tuesday and dropped into our den for a chat. He says he has wheat 10 or 11 inches high and he predicts that Kittson county will produce a bigger crop this year than ever before. He is talking of buying 1800 acres of land, and says if he does so he is going to set out cottonwood trees on every section line for a windbreak. This would be a good thing for every farmer to do and would do much to protect the fields from high winds.

Col. Cobham Post has accepted an invitation from Rev. Lee W. Squier to attend the Assembly doings at Detroit Lakes on July 4th, which has been designated as Grand Army Day. Every member of the post who thinks he can afford it will go. It is thought that a great many G. A. R. Posts will attend, and great preparations are being made for their entertainment. Agent Sharkey expects that an excursion train will run on the Northern Pacific road, leaving Grand Forks early in the morning.

As one of the encouraging signs of the times we note the fact that there has been a great demand for millet seed this spring. Millet is the great feed for milch cows and the great demand for the seed this spring seems to indicate the presence of more milch cows in the county. Last Saturday there were not less than fifty farmers in the city to get millet seed, which was not to be had, although there has been as much as usual in the market this spring. Farmers who had millet to sell this spring made money out of it, and it will probably be as good next year.

Your Physical Condition.

Needs attention at this time. If you are tired, weak and nervous, it is clear that your blood is impure, and without doubt there has been too much over-work or strain on brain and body. The course of treatment for such a condition is plain and simple. The blood must first be purified so that the nervous system, upon pure blood. Intelligent people without number have testified that the best blood purifier, nerve tonic and strength imparting medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Nervousness, loss of sleep and general debility all vanish when Hood's Sarsaparilla is persistently taken; in a word, health and happiness follow after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The editor of the Review of Reviews, in his running comments on "The Progress of the World" in the June number, reviews the Cuban situation and England's Nicuraguan relations at some length; he also summarizes the probable results of peace in the far east. Other international matters which receive attention in the editorial pages of the Review are the relief of Chitral, German and Austrian politics, France and the Nile, the new speaker of the British House of Commons, elections in Greece and Denmark, the Pope's Encyclical to England, and the school question in Manitoba. On the side of home politics, considerable space is devoted to the silver controversy, the annulment of the income tax and the prospects of civil service reform.

Again the dark angel of death hovered o'er a happy home in this city and has taken therefrom its light, the young mother who had but a short time ago welcomed a little one to her heart and home—Mrs. Iver Krohn, who died about 11:30 on Monday evening. Anna Christina Renne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole P. Renne, was born in Nicolett county, on Dec. 17th, 1871. She came with her parents to Polk county in 1881, to the town of Garfield, where she lived until her marriage to Iver A. Krohn about three years ago, when they came to this city where her husband engaged in the restaurant business and later opened a cigar store, in which business he is now engaged. Mr. Krohn has the sincere sympathy of his many friends in this his hour of sore bereavement.

TWO DOLLAR WHEAT.

Duluth Herald.

Those who have been prophecying "dollar wheat" have been regarded by many as extreme enthusiasts, whose prediction was hardly warranted by the conditions at present surrounding the grain trade. Their prophecies, however, are thrown into the shade by the assertion of Sir W. C. Van Horne, president of the Canadian Pacific road, that he expects to see wheat advance to a very much higher price —to sell at $2 per bushel. While he does not expect to see anything like this price this year, he is confident it will come before long.

And Sir William advances some very strong reasons for arriving at this optimistic belief. He points out that from 1887 up to 1892 India was the big bear of the wheat market, but the extraordinary yield of 1891 all over the world was the chief cause of the extraordinary decline in prices which followed, and then came the Argentine Republic big bear to keep prices down, but the fact seems to have been overlooked that the loss of wheat in Kansas alone in the past three years has largely offset the increase in the Argentine Republic, and there has been a large decrease since 1891 in the export from India. Another factor which he thinks has been overlooked is that up to within two or three years the British millers and those on the continent carried heavy stocks of wheat. Now they are working from hand to mouth. Wheat which would ordinarily have been carried in stock by them has been hanging upon the markets, and until it was absorbed it helped to keep prices down, but now that it is absorbed it seems to Sir William that normal conditions have been restored and that we have seen the end of low prices for the present. With the latter conclusion nearly every person is ready to agree, but it is not likely that many will endorse the railroad president's idea that wheat will sell at $2. But what prosperous times we would have in the Northwest with wheat at $2 per bushel!

Death of Uncle Ward.

Ada Index

DIED:—At his residence in Ada, on Tuesday evening, the 28th day of May, 1895, at about 7 o'clock p. m., of heart failure Hubert Ward. Age 83 years.

Uncle Ward, as he has been familiarly known, is an old and well known resident of Norman county. He was born in Galway, Ireland, on the 17th day of April, 1812, and was married in 1837 to Mary Glenn. At the age of 33 he emigrated to America and settled in Boston where he followed railroading for a livelihood moving to Elkhorn, Wisconsin, later on. In 1859 he moved to Minnesota, and settled on a farm at Rose Mountain. He remained located at this place for nine years. In 1872 he came to the Red River Valley, taking up a claim at Glyndon, where he remained until 1876 at which time he moved to Ada. Here he resided on a farm and lived there until about three years ago when he purchased a residence in the village where he passed the remainder of his days. He had twelve children, six of whom are now living, Mrs. Spellisey, of Litchfield; Mrs. O'Brien, of St. Paul; Mrs. Cokely, of Hamilton, Minn; Mrs. McHugh, of Bismark, N. D.; Mrs. Malane and Johnny, of Ada.

The remains were taken to Crookston and interred in St. Ann's cemetery by the side of his wife, whose death occured only a few months prior to her husband. The funeral services were held at Crookston, Father Murphy officiating.

STILL A MYSTERY.

But Little Light Thrown on the Harrington Murder at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—Two days which have elapsed since the mangled body of Miss Nellie Harrington was found have deepened rather than cleared the mystery connected with her murder. Some further light has been thrown upon the business investments of the dead woman, which have furnished an incentive for the crime, but the knowledge has aided the police but little. The unfortunate accident to ex-Senator Buck, who was thrown from a carriage while on his way to the office of the chief of police has still further complicated matters. Mr. Buck was an intimate friend of Miss Harrington and the police hoped his knowledge of her affairs might supply a clew to the murderer. Since the accident Buck has been unconscious. His condition is improving.

MORTGAGE SALE.

(First Pub. May 2d, 1895.)

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a mortgage containing power of sale dated October 17th, 1889, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota, October 22d, 1889, in book 42, of mortgages, page 118, whereby Carl Johnsen and Kari Johnsen, his wife, mortgageors, mortgaged to the Middlesex Banking Company, mortgagee, the East Half of the Northwest Quarter and East Half of the Southwest Quarter of Section Thirty-one (31) in Township One hundred and forty-eight (148), of Range Forty-three (43), in said Polk County, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured thereby, or any part thereof, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date hereof, $331 to which amount should be added the taxes on said property paid by said mortgagee, amounting with interest, as provided in said mortgage, to $12.60, making the total amount claimed to be due at the date hereof on said mortgage $343.85.

Now notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises sold at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or his deputy, Saturday June 15th 1895, at ten o'clock, A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Crookston in said county, to pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Andrew O. Arneson, single, as mortgagor, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 1st day of June, A. D. 1888, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 15th day of June, A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 66 of mortgages, at pages 218 &c.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $250.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to H. R. Halloway, by written assignment dated June 28th, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 20th day of February, A. D. 1895, at 8:45 o'clock a. m., in book 68 of mortgages, on pages 389 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $250, and the interest thereon since June 1st, A. D. 1890, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $281.20 being the sum of $250, principal, and $31.20 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The south half of the northeast quarter (S½ NE¼) of section thirty (30) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty (40), containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

THE AWFUL BLIZZARD

AN UNMERCIFUL NORSE GOD THAT RULES THE PLAINS.

No Person Can Understand What Terrible Things They Are Until He Has Seen One—With All Man's Care, They Are Still His Unconquered Enemies.

The blizzard, as the plain man's vernacular designates the prairie snowstorm, is utterly incomprehensible to one who has not experienced it. Generated in the great storm breeding regions of barren British America and swept on arctic blasts along the vast level reaches that stretch eastward from the Rocky mountains, with no forest to break its force, it becomes a demon of the air, second only to the cyclone or tornado in destructiveness. The moisture is ground as between millstones, hurled with bulletlike energy over hundreds of miles of level plain, and finally, transformed into yeasty sleet by the softening effects of lower latitudes, falls in bleak showers on the ranges of Texas and No Man's Land.

Lack of cheap building material and the brevity of the winter season on the prairies contribute to make the settler's cabin a poor refuge. When the blizzard comes, every resource of fuel is husbanded, and it is faced with a grim determination to see it through.

But not all are prepared even so well as the settler. Occasionally a belated emigrant, en route either to a chosen claim on the frontier or toward the pleasantly remembered east, where he hopes to find old friends and helpers, is caught by the blast. He may have a tiny stove inside the canvas topped prairie schooner, but its heat can do little against the power of the storm. Sheltered by the low bluff of some ravine or water course he may weather the dragging hours of suffering, but the chances are that team and driver will be found a ghastly monument to the storm king's strength.

The farmer who has hurried 10 or 15 miles to the nearest village to secure supplies for the impending visitation is often overtaken before reaching his waiting family and perishes on the road, for no matter how well he knows the path when the blizzard rages his way is as that of the mariner without a compass.

At the prairie schoolhouses, where the settlers' children are gathered from a territory covering many miles in every direction, the blizzard brings terror to the pupils as well as to their parents. Rescue is impossible until the lull comes, and awful possibilities lurk in the bosom of the storm. A Dakota schoolmistress failed to dismiss her scholars in time for them to reach home and found herself and them prisoners from a blizzard's approach. A night and a day at least were before her, during which her little charges must be protected. Deliberately she apportioned the food remaining in the dinner pails, divided the larger boys into squads to keep the fire burning steadily, and when darkness came put the younger pupils to sleep on the benches. Then through the bitter night she sang, declaimed, told stories, invented games and kept the frightened children amused and cheered as best she could. The following day passed much the same, but still no abatement of the storm nor any rescue. The second night was dreary indeed. The children cried themselves to sleep, hungry and cold. With her own hands the teacher broke up desks and blackboard to feed the voracious stove. With morning came a shout at the door as the settlers shoveled away the snow, and then the plucky girl to whom the children owed their lives showed her womanliness—and fainted.

The loss among stock on the plains by each blizzard is appalling. There is less exposure of herds and flocks now than in earlier times, yet every season causes the destruction of thousands of head of cattle and sheep on the ranges and in the unsheltered corrals. Several years ago, during the height of the Texas cattle trade, a blizzard in western Kansas early in December destroyed more than half of 300,000 cattle that were being herded on the open prairie. At one railway station, after the storm, 35,000 hides were shipped, at another 20,000. One ranchman found but 225 head alive out of 7,500 that had been grazing before the catastrophe. Several hundred ponies and a score of herders also perished.

The blizzard is a permanent feature of the prairie winter. Nothing but a decided climatic revolution can secure to the great transmississippi region immunity from its death bearing presence. Better preparations are yearly being made to withstand its fury and to protect more generously the dumb animals who suffer equally with their masters. The signal service is rendering aid in warning communities reached by telegraph of the storm's approach, while the settlers, taught by bitter experience, take with each season better precautions and provide more intelligently for their time of need, which is sure to come.

But, with all man's care and defense, the blizzard remains unconquered. It is cruel, relentless and unmerciful as some Norse god, from whose kingdom it comes. It is one of the west's possessions which is wholly and irredeemably detestable. In its forefront is apprehension; at its height, terror; in its wake, desolation and suffering, sometimes death.—Detroit Free Press.

Cutting a Hailstorm In India.

During a severe hailstorm in the Himalayas our native gardener brought out a hatchet and placed it, edge upward, in the garden, to "cut the storm," as he said. Catlin, in his "North American Indians," describes a ceremony of the Mandan Indians, in which hatchets and edged tools are sacrificed to the "spirit of the waters" to avert a recurrence of the great deluge, of which the tribe has the tradition.—Notes and Queries.

DAYS.

What is the message of days, what is the thought they bring—
Days that darken to winter, days that sweeten to spring?

Is there a lore to learn? Is there a truth to be told?
Hath the new dawn a ray that never flashed from the old?

Day that deepens to night, night that broadens to day,
What is the meaning of all, what is the word they say?

Silence for aye and aye, and the heart beats never cease
Till toil and life and the day are the night and death and peace.

—John Hall Ingham in Scribner's.

POSING AT THE PIANO.

Paderewski Thinks Performers Should Look Effective While Playing.

When Paderewski was in New York, he was calling at a prominent Wall street man's home in Fifth avenue when the broker told him he would like to have his opinion of his daughter's playing. The great pianist courteously replied that nothing would give him greater pleasure.

After the young lady had dashed off several selections Paderewski said:

"To get the greatest enjoyment from the piano the music must not only be heard, but the performer should be seen. The performer should therefore be careful of his or her position at the instrument.

"I will be frank with you and say that I preferred to see rather than hear your daughter play. I might better say that I looked more than I listened. She held herself correctly. There is nothing I hate more than a listless, careless posture of the body while playing.

"Then there was life in her touch. Her fingers fairly sparkled as they ran over the board and touched the keys, rebounding from them with a snap that was exhilarating to behold. Her manner of using her hands and her elbowing, if I may so call it, showed proper training also.

"I will therefore add that my sense of hearing would have been equally delighted doubtless if my sense of sight had not been so completely monopolized. I compliment the young lady on her accomplishment."

"There is wisdom in that," said the broker in repeating the conversation. "Teachers of the piano should give far more attention to this matter than they now do."—New York Advertiser.

Electric Light Test.

The public is becoming quite knowing in many branches of electric knowledge, and in none more than in the determination, with greater or less accuracy, of the efficiency of the electric light. At one time a central station had no great difficulty in foisting upon its customers as a 16 candle power a light that the ordinary gas jet would be an improvement upon. Now, however, people are more critical, and they have a very shrewd idea as to whether they are getting as much light as they are paying for. If they have any doubt on the subject, it can be easily set at rest.

The latest method of measuring illumination is based upon the principle that the illumination, falling, say, on a printed page, must have a definite value in order to render the printed characters just legible, and that the intensity of illumination so required will, for a normal eye, depend upon the size and character of the print. A small printed tablet is placed in a darkened box and exposed to illumination from a translucent plate of glass or porcelain, which receives directly on its surface the light whose intensity is to be measured. The area of the translucent plate is then varied until the amount of light received by the test characters just renders them visible. A scale is provided by reference to which the exact degree of candle power of the illumination is determined.—New York Times.

His Pills.

There lives in a town not far from here—in fact, it is at Skaneateles—a couple who think a good deal of each other, and when one is ill the other does everything in the world for her or his welfare. Not long ago the husband was taken ill, and his wife rummaged around to find some medicine in the house. Finally she came across a box of little black pills. There was no writing on the cover of the box to tell what they were, but as they resembled a certain liver pill the wife concluded that they must be the required thing. She gave them to her hubby regularly, and he seemed to improve. About a week after, when he had got down to the last pill, he chanced to turn the box over. He gave a yell that startled the whole neighborhood. His wife ran to him, thinking that he was dying. "Look," he cried. "Read what it says on the bottom." She did as he bade her, and this was what she read: "Prime Crown Morning Glory Seeds!"—Syracuse Post.

Swore Himself In.

In his reminiscences of the Crimea, in 1854, General Sir Evelyn Wood tells a story of a fighting general who, during a conflict, was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible, his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from 'the army in Flanders,'" which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command, and her majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new general yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, your majesty,' was the apt reply; 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"

Iceland moss is native to the northern parts of all continents. It is most abundant, however, in Iceland, whence its name has been obtained. Formerly in high repute in medicine, it is now very lightly regarded.

Australia means "south," and the land now known by that name was formerly called New Holland.

The doublet was a close fitting coat introduced into France from Italy about 1100.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Anson Bancroft and Ann Eliza Bancroft, his wife, of Minneapolis, Hennepin County, Minnesota, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 14th day of December, A. D. 1887, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 20th day of December, A. D. 1887, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., in book 38 of mortgages on pages 410 &c.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7°|°) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment, dated May 12th, A. D. 1893, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 440 &c.

And whereas default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $800. and the interest thereon since December 14th, 1892, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1047.00, being the sum of $800. principal, and $147.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northwest quarter (NW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred and forty-eight (148), range forty-seven (47), containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres more or less, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby, together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00), attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

A REGIMENT OF HENS.

How One Man May Act as Commander of a Thousand Fowls.

We have had quite a number of questions about how best to make a large building for 1,000 hens, says a writer in The Rural New Yorker. The following represents the figuring of a successful poultryman who has studied the matter for a long time. It is evident that one house to hold 1,000 hens will be cheaper than 10 houses to hold 100 each. It will also require less time to care for the 1,000 in one house. As to the dangers from disease and other drawbacks in having the whole flock in one building, that is a matter of opinion. We shall discuss that later.

The house is 300 feet long by 24 feet wide, 6 feet high at the eaves and 12 feet at the top, with the roof pitching both ways. It is well lighted with one window in the front of each pen and one in the top of each pen. The house is north and south, so that fowls in the east pen get the sunshine in the morning through their window in front and those in the west side through the windows in the top of the house and the afternoon sun in like manner. The house should be made as tight as possible and perfectly dry. The windows in the top are hinged at the bottom of the sash so as to open inside for ventilation on warm days. There are 25 pens on each side of the walk, 12 feet square on the floor, which is raised two feet from the ground, with partitions underneath the house the same as the pens above. This gives a dry place for the hens to wallow, insures freedom from rats working under the floor and doubles the floor room for the fowls. The yards are 12 feet wide and 150 feet long and are well provided with fruit trees for shade. The fences are boarded two feet high, with four foot wire netting above.

The house should be built on a slight decline so as to allow the water to run from one end to the other readily, and the trough should be flushed and brushed out daily. There is a car running from the feedhouse at one end along the walk to the other end of the house, from which all feeding, cleaning platform under roosts, gathering eggs, etc., are done. All windows are also raised or lowered from the walk so that the attendant rarely has to go into the pens for anything.

COST AND EARNINGS OF SUCH A BUILDING.

130 locust posts for foundation at 30 cents	$39.00
10,000 feet of frame at $14	224.00
14,000 feet of boards for roof, sides and ends at $18	252.00
10,500 feet of matched flooring, floor, roost platforms, etc., at $22.50	236.25
5,000 feet of inside partitions, walk, nest, etc., at $18	90.00
4,500 feet of wire for inside partitions at one-half cent	22.50
7,800 feet of tin or steel roofing at 6 cents	468.00
100 windows at 70 cents	70.00
300 feet of galvanized spouting for water trough at 10 cents	48.00
6,500 feet of felt for covering sides	65.00
Hinges, cord for windows, pulleys, nails, etc	25.00
Total	$1,539.75
YARDS 150 FEET LONG.
728 locust posts at 30 cents	$218.40
20,000 feet of boards for partitions in yards and under house at $18	360.00
36,000 feet of wire partitions	180.00
Hinges, staples, nails, etc	10.00
Total	$768.40
Feedroom, 24 feet square, at the end of the building, arranged with bins for different kinds of feed, etc	$120.00
Well, pump, tanks, piping, etc	80.00
Boiler, with dumping kettle	85.00
Engine for cutting bone, pumping water, etc	250.00
Mann's large power bone cutter	70.00
Hay cutter for cutting clover, etc	10.00
Total	$577.00
Cost of poultry house	$1,539.75
Cost of yards	768.40
Cost of labor for whole building about	400.00
Cost of 1,000 fowls at 65 cents each	650.00
Grand total	$3,935.15

The food required for one year I estimate as follows:

2¾ tons wheat bran at $20	$55.00
3½ tons oat feed at $22	77.00
2¾ tons cornmeal at $24	66.00
One ton oilmeal	30.00
100 bushels potatoes, turnips, etc	15.00
One ton clover hay	14.00
365 pounds salt	2.00
Seven tons fresh bones	84.00
400 bushels wheat	240.00
100 bushels buckwheat	70.00
100 bushels oats	35.00
100 bushels corn	55.00
50 bushels barley	30.00
200 bushels beets, carrots, etc., for feeding raw in winter	30.00
40 bushels charcoal	10.00
One ton grit	14.00
Total cost of feed	$833.00

With the foregoing treatment good early pullets will lay at least 12 dozen eggs each, which will make their account stand about as follows:

DR.
Cost of feed	$833.00
Interest on investment at 6 per cent.	236.10
Cost of fuel for engine	20.00
Cost of fuel for heating water, etc	20.00
Total	$1,109.10
CR.
12,000 dozen eggs at an average of 21 cents	$2,520.00
Profit	$1,410.90

In the above account there is no charge for labor, which would require one man about as follows: One and a half hours for preparing morning feed and feeding; 1½ hours for cleaning roost platforms and cleaning up in general; one hour for cutting and feeding bones at noon; 1½ hours for gathering and preparing eggs for market; a half hour for feeding at night.

The prices for feed are those prevailing by the ton, and are a little above the average for the past few years. Eggs are rated at about the average price in the New York market, which might be raised a few cents per dozen by getting a special trade on strictly fresh eggs shipped every day or three times per week. Be very careful to ship all eggs in good shape and put no stained or soiled ones in the crates. Send no eggs that are over two days old, and in summer ship the day they are laid if possible. Guarantee all eggs to be strictly fresh, and you will not be long in getting a first class market for all you can get, and you can lengthen your house and increase your number of fowls to as many as you can properly look after and still have a demand for more first class eggs than you can supply.

My Wife is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her blood has become impoverished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Roberson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in every way."

AIDED WILKES BOOTH

THOMAS JONES, THE MAN WHO SHIELDED LINCOLN'S MURDERER.

Kept Him In Hiding Six Days and Helped Him to Reach Virginia—The Reward of $300,000 Offered by the Government Had Not the Power to Move Him.

There died in Charles county, Md., not long ago Thomas A. Jones, at the age of 74. Jones held a position in the Washington navy yard, but was dismissed through the influence of Congressman Mudd of Maryland, who had informed the secretary of the navy that Jones had played a prominent part in the escape of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln.

"It's quite true," admitted Jones at the time of his dismissal. "John Wilkes Booth, with a broken ankle, sick and suffering the tortures of the damned, was placed in my hands to be spirited across the river, and the $300,000 reward, or even $3,000,000, would not have caused me to turn traitor to the southern Confederacy, the people I loved, and surrender a man whose life was in my keeping, even if I did know he had assassinated President Lincoln."

Jones afterward told how Booth came into his hands. "It was on the morning of the 16th of April," he said, "when friends of Samuel Cox came to my house on Huckleberry farm, Maryland, and told me that Cox wanted to see me at once. I had heard the evening before that Lincoln had been killed. I had a horse saddled and rode over to Cox's, who told me that Booth and David Herold had been there and wanted assistance to get across the river. I was told where the men were—in a pine thicket about a mile and a half from the house.

"I was given instructions how to reach them without being shot—certain signs by whistling, etc. Upon reaching the dense pines I met Herold, to whom I explained that I was sent by Cox. I was then piloted to where Booth was. He lay on the ground wrapped in a pile of blankets, and his face bore traces of pain. Booth asked many questions as to what people thought of the assassination. He appeared to be proud of what he had done. I at the time thought he had done a good act, but, great God, I soon saw that it was the worst blow ever struck for the south!

"I did the best I could for the poor fellow. I carried him papers to read and something to eat and tried to keep him in good spirits until I got a chance to send him across the river. The country was full of soldiers and detectives, and I did not know how soon I could get him away.

"I think it was the following Tuesday I went up to Port Tobacco to see how the land lay, and it was there, in the barroom of Brawner's hotel, that Captain William Williams, chief of the United States secret service, said he would give $300,000 to any man who would tell where Booth was."

"That's true," admitted Captain Williams at the time of the above interview, "and he would have been General Jones instead of a discharged employee from the navy yard if he had given the information."

"I did the best I could for Booth and Herold," continued Jones. "I did not know them, but when Cox put them in my keeping nothing would have tempted me to betray them. I could have placed my hands on Booth, but honor and truth were worth more to me than the entire wealth of the government.

"At the expiration of the sixth day I heard the officers give orders for the cavalry to go down in St. Mary's county; that the assassins were there. That was my chance, and I made good time to where Booth and Herold were concealed. Booth was glad to know that his time to get into Virginia had come.

"The night was dark, and Herold and I lifted Booth on to my horse. Our progress was slow. We finally reached my house, and I went in to get them something to eat. We then proceeded to the river. Booth was lifted into the boat and was placed in the stern, while Herold took the oars. I then lighted a candle and showed Booth by his compass how to steer to get into Machodoc creek and gave him directions to Mrs. Quesenberry's, who, I thought, would take care of him. That was the last I saw of Booth.

"When notices were posted up that to furnish bread or water to Booth meant death," went on Jones, "I felt pretty shaky. I knew that Booth had hit the Virginia shore. I was arrested and taken to Washington, where I was held for seven weeks. Then I was discharged because nobody believed I knew anything."—New York World.

Chesterfield and the Vails System.

It will be remembered that in the days of the great Lord Chesterfield vails in London had reached such a pitch that it cost a man of position 5 or 10 guineas merely to dine out. As he left the house he had to run the gantlet of the butler and underbutlers and half a dozen footmen. One handed him his cane, one his hat, another his gloves, a fourth his coat, and so on, and so on, each expecting a crown in acknowledgment of his services. Lord Chesterfield saw that social intercourse was being ruined, called a meeting of the chief people in the world of fashion and got them to agree to give nothing to the servants when they dined out. It is true he was nearly lynched by a mob of irate footmen, but he carried his point.

It is said that at the present moment there is a tendency to revive the odious custom thus put down by Lord Chesterfield, and that the masher has begun to tip the men who put him into his great coat after dinner. If that is so, a clear case exists for a common agreement not to allow the infection to spread. Dining out would become a more intolerable burden than it is already if it also were complicated by the question, "What is the least I can give without looking mean?"—National Review.

RAIN INDICATIONS.

Why Cirrus Clouds Tell With Almost Absolute Certainty of Coming Storms.

In order to better understand the role placed by cirrus clouds as rain indicators, we must first discuss the causes of these occurrences. A study of the weather indications and barometrical readings, as they appear in our daily papers from the report of our "Weather Bureau," shows that areas of high or low air pressure are constantly passing over the earth's surface in irregular succession. The areas of high atmospheric pressure—or barometric maxima, meteorologically expressed—stay longer in one locality than the areas of low pressure—the depression or barometrical minima. These last are more or less defined currents of air, which circle in the form of wind around the region of the lowest atmospheric pressure, moving always from north to west or from south to east—the reverse of the hands of a clock. It must not be imagined, however, that the air simply moves around this area of depression, but rather that it is constantly being drawn into its center and is carried upward in great whirls or spirals. As the air rises, it expands and becomes colder. The vapors it contains condense into clouds and finally are transformed into rain. The center of the barometrical depression is therefore marked by cloudy, rainy weather. The wind which encircles the depression becomes more active as the difference of the atmospheric pressure becomes more marked, or, in other words, as the barometer falls.

In brief, therefore, barometrical depressions are caused by huge ascending spirals, or whirls of air, which are carried upward to extreme heights, and from there are wafted in any direction. In these heights the humidity of the atmosphere is frozen and is wafted away in closed forms which are composed of ice crystals. These are none other than cirrus clouds, and they may float several hundred miles from the seat of the depression. It will now be seen why cirrus clouds may be justly regarded as forerunners of rain, even when they make their appearance in clear weather. They tell with absolute certainty of an approaching atmospheric depression, and this is substantiated by a gradual falling of the barometer soon after they make their appearance.—Home and Country.

THE WILDEST LAND.

Oregon Has the Honor of Having the Roughest Tract Known to Man.

Assistant Chief Goode of the United States geological survey, who visited Oregon last summer, says that the wildest region of the entire United States is an area of 1,000 square miles lying in the mountains between Roseburg and Coquille in Douglas and Coos counties.

He describes it as a mysterious undiscovered country, in which roams undisturbed wild game, and whose brooks and rivers are filled with wild fowl. It is nearly all covered with a dense growth of pine, fir, hemlock and other trees. Many of the trees are of enormous size and stand so closely that it is difficult for men to make their way between them. Where the trees are not so thick the heavy growth of bushes of various kinds takes their place.

It is a country that is filled with all kinds of wild game, including, as reported to him, elk, different kinds of bear, mountain lions, deer and other animals, including lynx and others. There are also the varied kinds of fowl. The streams all have an abundance of trout and other kinds of fish. He penetrated into the wilds a dozen miles and saw things that filled him with wonder at the vastness of the forest, and that any one should attempt to live in it.—Northwest Magazine.

Held to the Habit.

"I can't let you have any money, that's flat," said the new woman.

"Why?" asked the husband, tears gathering in his limpid blue eyes.

"Because," confessed the breadwinner shamefacedly, "there is a bargain sale down at Cuttem's, and they are selling the loveliest spring trousers ever seen for $2.98. I thought I had got over the bargain counter habit, but this is something I cannot resist."—Indianapolis Journal.

FUNERAL OF GRESHAM.

Military Honors paid to the Dead Statesman at Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The remains of Walter Q. Gresham, the dead secretary of state, accompanied by President Cleveland and by members of his cabinet and the sorrowing family, left Washington at 12:15 o'clock on a special train for Chicago, where the final interment will take place. The funeral service here was devoid of ostentation, but this fact only served to deepen the profound impression which it created. In life Secretary Gresham had loved most the military career of his ardent youth, and of all his titles had been fondest of that of general, which he had won upon the battlefield. In death he was wrapped in the stars and stripes and given a soldier's funeral. The whole city

Mourned the Nation's Loss.

Every department of the government was closed; every flag in Washington at half mast. All the regular troops in and about Washington—cavalry, artillery and infantry—escorted the remains to the railroad station. Mrs. Gresham, the stricken wife, was so overcome by her grief that she was unable to attend the services at the White House. The casket was borne to the executive mansion through the files of military, and there deposited in the East room, Mr. Cleveland and his cabinet, as honorary pallbearers, accompanying the remains thither. The East room had been draped with a profusion of American flags and decorated with palms and potted flowers. The black catafalque and the black seal rug on which it rested were banked with

The Rarest and Most Beautiful Flowers.

The assemblage was of the most distinguished character, and all were profoundly moved by the simplicity of the service. It consisted merely of the reading of the funeral service of the Methodist Episcopal church by Bishop Hurst, a personal friend of the secretary. When the benediction was said the strains of Cardinal Newman's beautiful hymn, "Lead Kindly Light," trembled on the air, and it was over. With bowed heads those present took a long, last look at the well known features and departed. As the funeral cortege emerged from the White House grounds, the scarlet coated Marine band played

"Nearer My God to Thee."

The military then took their places under command of Major General Ruger, and slowly led the way down the avenue to the station, preceded by a band of 40 pieces mounted on heavy horses. There were four troops of cavalry from Fort Meyer, the marine corps from the navy yard, three companies of infantry, four gun batteries from Washington barracks and four batteries from Fort Meyer, in all about 1,500 men. As they swung down the avenue to the solemn strains of the funeral dirge, the sidewalks and every available bit of space in the windows overlooking the avenue were lined with people. While the casket was being conveyed to the train, the Marine band played "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." As the funeral train left the station, the military departed and the city became quiet and its streets almost deserted.

GOES BACK TO CHINA.

Important Decision on the Chinese Immigration Law.

NEW YORK, June 1.—In the United States circuit court Judge Lacombe entered a final order sending Lee Yuen back to China on the ground that he had entered this country as a laborer. Lee Yuen had been in this country before and returned in August, 1894, by way of Burlington, Vt. He was arrested in this city while at work as a cigarmaker. It was held on his behalf that Lee Yuen was a merchant. Judge Lacombe's precedent is a decision by Judge Coxe to the effect that Chinamen engaged in unskilled labor are laborers within the meaning of the act, no matter whether they own an interest in a store or not.

FIGHTING IN PROGRESS.

Japanese Land Troops at Kee Lung on the Island of Formosa.

LONDON, June 1.—A dispatch to The Times from Hong Kong confirms the news contained in the Associated Press dispatches from Hong Kong, announcing that hostilities between the Japanese and Chinese republicans on the island of Formosa have commenced. According to The Times dispatch, the Japanese forces landed at Kee Lung, in the extreme north of the island of Formosa and fighting between them and the rebels commenced. The dispatch to the Associated Press from Hong Kong announced that private advices received there were to the effect that the Japanese were bombarding Kee Lung.

General Mason Retired.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Acting Secretary of War Doe has issued an order retiring General Mason, after a long and meritorious service, distinguished by many deeds of bravery. Lieutenant Colonel Page, as previously telegraphed, will succeed Mason.

The Pope Receives Gibbons.

ROME, June 3.—The pope has received Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore. Cardinal Gibbons had a long conference during the day with Cardinal Ledochowski, prefect of the propaganda.

Spanish Government Defeated.

MADRID, June 4.—The Chamber by a majority of 78 votes adopted a motion censuring the government. The ministerial party refused to take part in the division. All the ministers quitted the house before the vote was taken. The cabinet declines to resign because the ministers claim they accepted office on Senor Sagasta's promises that the opposition would support them in passing the budget. The situation is critical and the Republicans appear determined to overthrow the government.

High Water at Denver.

DENVER, June 4.—Jerome Park, a suburb of Denver, is in danger of a flood more disastrous to property and life than the one which took place a year ago. The Platte river is steadily rising and at noon was about to overflow its banks just above Rio Grande avenue. The flood is raising at the rate of one inch an hour. Railway men were watchful. Work trains were all in readiness to go at a moment's notice and in some instances they were in demand. The Rio Grande was the only road having a train on time.

Thirty-six Hours of Rain.

PIERRE, S. D., June 4.—During the last 36 hours four and a half inches of water have fallen. It is still raining and the Missouri river is rising rapidly. T. E. Phillips, a ranchman from 40 miles west of Pierre reports a waterspout in his section. Much young stock was killed and other damage done.

Banker Attempts Suicide.

DES MOINES, June 4.—Ex-Senator Cassatt, president of the First National Bank of Polla, was found in the bank with his throat cut, having attempted suicide. The affairs of the bank will be immediately investigated. Cassatt is still living, but is in a dangerous condition.

Marti Lives.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 4.—Gonzales de Quesado, secretary of the Cuban revolutionists, has arrived here. He received a telegram from Benjamin Guerra, treasurer of the revolutionists at New York, announcing that Marti lives.

INSTANT DEATH.

The Lightning Makes Quick Work With a Prominent Young Farmer.

Albert Hertwick, an industrious young farmer who lives in the Baatz neighborhood, in the town of Fairfax, was struck by lightning and instantly killed during the storm that prevailed on Thursday afternoon. He had been up to Black River and was returning with a load of green poles on his wagon and had reached a point opposite a private crossing on the Bartlett farm on section 9, in Fairfax, when the bolt that took his life struck him. His hat was torn to shreds and the fluid passed down his neck and right side into the poles and he was thrown off under the wheels. The team, which was a spirited one, took fright and ran away, the wagon passing over the dead body, mangling it somewhat and breaking his neck. Ole Rude, who was planting corn on the Bartlett farm just before the sad event occurred and was going to the house to get out of the rain saw the team running away but did not go at once to see if anyone was hurt, as the rain was then pouring down in torrents. After it slacked up a bit he went out and found the dead body of Hertwick lying opposite the crossing. The N. P. section men had reached there a few moments before and the N. P. freight train had also stopped. The man's hat was found on the railroad track in the middle of the crossing, torn to shreds. Mr. Hertwick was a second cousin of Mark Rauenhuehler, of this city, was a hard working, sober, upright young man and had just married about two weeks since. His remains were brought to the morgue in this city by Coroner Wyatt and on Friday a brother came over from Grand Forks to care for them.

MURDERED FOR $90.

Burglars Kill a Saloonkeeper at Pensaukee, Wis.

MILWAUKEE, June 10.—A special to The Evening Wisconsin from Oconto, Wis., says: Michael Baumgardner, a saloonkeeper near Pensaukee, was murdered by burglars at midnight. Mrs. Baumgardner was aroused by her husband's cries and saw him grappling with two strangers, who afterwards escaped in a carriage, which was standing at the door. Baumgardner was formerly a large mill owner and had resided in the county for 35 years. The burglars secured about $90.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS

The dark clouds that have hung like a pall over the business interests of the country ever since Grover commenced his second reign of "clover" seem about to be dispelled in the almost absolute surety of a return to the good old Republican reign of prosperity in the near future, in fact now and then a bright little rift appears and the clouds seem less dense than before. One little rift appeared when wheat, notwithstanding silver had not ordered a rise, took a flyer on its own hook and soared merrily upward toward the $ spot; and now real estate, ever in sympathy with wheat is again getting up toward the high notes of the scale and a decided activity is apparent. Real estate dealers inform the JOURNAL that the deals are becoming lively and the inquiries on the increase. Every mail brings scores of inquiries for land and by fall we shall be right in it with all the old time vigor of the boom times. These are among the many hopeful signs of returning business prosperity that causes the little cherub of Hope to begin to sing merrily in the hearts of the dweller of the far-famed Red River Valley of the North in L'Etoille du Nord.

All Wool—A Yard Wide,

Is the way a load that E. M. Bivins brought in from the farm of Frank Bivins & Son, one day last week, looked. He had what farmers call a basket rack on a lumber wagon, which rack was filled full of large sacks stuffed full of wool, which he was taking to the depot for shipment. Mr. Bivins informed our reporter that he did not expect to net more than ten cents a pound for this year's clip, but even at that, with the sale of mutton the business was by no means discouraging, and was all right when wool brought 15 to 20 cents, as it usually does. Says he shall stick to the sheep business all the same, as it is all right when mixed with wheat and other grains.

Catch On?

The time to buy is when the article you desire is at the lowest ebb in the market and a strong upward tendency has set in. This axiom applies with peculiar force to our farm lands in the Red River Valley. Never before in the history of this country was the price as low as now and everything points to a rapid and permanent rise all along the line. To-day one can buy good farm lands at a price less than the improvements thereon represent. Unless all signs utterly fail, next fall you can't begin to do that. Very many sales have been made already this spring and there is a healthy and rapidly increasing demand for Red River Valley dirt that is very encouraging. Now is the time to catch on while the opportunities still exist.

SOMEBODY WILL GET IT!

At a price that does not equal the cost of the improvements. Will get what? A half section of land only two miles from the city limits near the new experimental farm, all under cultivation, rented this year for one-half the crop. Good buildings, a grove and an artesian well. Will be sold at a bargain to the party who can make a small cash payment. For full particulars call at the JOURNAL office or address with stamp for reply.

CHANGES IN CABINET

ATTORNEY GENERAL OLNEY IS SECRETARY OF STATE.

Position Made Vacant by His Promotion Filled by the Appointment of Judge Judson Harmon, a Leading Attorney of Cincinnati.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The announcement of the transfer of Attorney General Olney to the head of the state department created no surprise here, as it has been well understood for several days that Mr. Olney would succeed to the first place in the cabinet, made vacant by the death of Secretary Gresham. It is probable that Mr. Olney will take the oath as the head of the state department during the day. The president at one time contemplated other changes in his cabinet and a rearrangement of several portfolios, and in this connection consideration was given to the transfer of Secretary Smith to the department of justice, but this and other transfers were finally abandoned and the president concluded that the simplest plan would be merely to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Olney's promotion. The appointment of Judge Judson Harmon of Cincinnati as attorney general came in the nature of a surprise. His name had not even been canvassed as among the probabilities. There is the best authority for the statement that the president and the portfolio of justice might have been had by Mr. James G. Carter of New York, who was counsel for the government in the Bering sea tribunal and the income tax cases, and by Mr. Frederic R. Condert of New York, had they been disposed to accept it. Secretary Carlisle knew Judge Harmon personally and both admired and respected his ability. It was he, probably, who first presented his name to Mr. Cleveland. Ex-Governor Campbell of Ohio, a close friend of Judge Harmon, also warmly supported him, and the president secured also from ex-Governor Hoadley of Ohio, who is now living in New York and whose law partner Harmon was, most favorable reports as to his ability and standing. After canvassing the situation thoroughly the president offered the portfolio of justice to Judge Harmon by wire, and, immediately upon receiving a favorable reply, announced the appointments.

Had Several Men Under Consideration

JUDSON HARMON.

Biographical Sketch of the New Attorney General.

CINCINNATI, June 8.—When the appointment of Judge Judson Harmon became know here attorneys from the courts and offices rushed to the office of Harmon, Colston Goldsmith & Hoadley to congratulate the new attorney general and to ask for a farewell dinner from the bar. Judge Harmon said he received a letter from President Cleveland and replied to it by wire, but he had no knowledge of his appointment until advised by the Associated Press. He does not know when he will go to Washington.

Judge Harmon has long been recognized as one of the foremost lawyers and jurists of this state and as one of its most popular citizens. He was born near this city 49 years ago, has always lived here and is known by all. His father, Rev. B. F. Harmon, was a Baptist minister, well known throughout the Ohio valley. Judge Harmon graduated at Dennison university, a Baptist institution at Granville, O., in 1865, and began the practice of law in 1869. He was a Republican until 1872, when he Greeleyized. He was elected superior judge in 1878, re-elected in 1883 and when ex-Governor George Hoadley went to New York in 1887 Judge Harmon resigned from the bench to become the head of the firm of Harmon, Colston, Goldsmith & Hoadlay, which represents several railways and other large corporations, and with which firm he will continue his connection.

HOT WEATHER.

Our exchanges come laden with reports of extremely hot weather in Chicago, New York city and other places east and south since June 1st, while up here in the Red River Valley of the North we have been enjoying the most deliciously cool weather that one could desire. The moral of all this is perfectly plain—if you would enjoy the finest climate in the world come to the Red River Valley.

OUR CITY SIRES

—IN AUGUST PRIDE, MEET UP FOR BUSINESS ---ON THE SIDE.

THEY GET A VETO ---FROM THE MAYOR, THE LITTLE VETO PROVES ---A STAYER.

SOME CITY PRINT ---WILL HAVE THE CALL ON PUBLIC PAP ---ABOUT NEXT FALL.

OUR CITY PAPAS DO AGREE TO FIX UP STREETS EXTENSIVELY, and Bridges, Sidwalks ad lib.

The city council met at the usual hour on Tuesday evening all members being present except Alderman E. D. Childs.

Committee on streets submitted a report on grading 6th street which was adopted and the clerk was authorized to advertise for doing the grading required in the report, also for grading Broadway between Third and Fifth streets. Bids to be opened on the 18th inst.

Bids for the city printing were received from the city papers and referred to a committee consisting of Aldermen Morrisey, Sawyer and Motz.

The mayor, having vetoed the ordinance relating to the city engineer's salary the question of sustaining the veto carried by a vote of 7 against to 3 for sustaining. It requiring a two-thirds vote to over-ride a veto, the veto was sustained and the council then originated another resolution on the subject that will be very liable to meet the same fate—as it seems to be subject to the same objections.

Alderman Morrisey moved that the city police be required to appear in uniform when on duty which motion meeting the universal approval passed.

Fifteen applications for license to sell intoxicating liquor were received and referred to the city attorney. There will be 19 in all this year.

The engineer recommended that new side-walks be built on Houston ave. and Hunter street.

The engineer was instructed to estimate the costs of needed repairs on the Carman bridge and the bridge to Jerome's addition.

The usual grist of bills were allowed and then our city dads adjourned to "think it over."

A Public Market.

The chairman of the Board of Public Works, Mr. E. C. Davis, informs the JOURNAL that he would like to interview all parties who have for sale any property suitable for a public market place. If you have any property to offer consult Mr. Davis.

The Logs Coming.

S. C. Bagley started with a large force of river drivers for the Clearwater, last week, about as soon as the first shower was over and is now said to be coming this way as fast as a good stage of water can carry the logs.

The Circus Coming.

The avant courier of Lemen Bros. circus arrived in this city on Thursday and arranged for July 6th as the day when that aggregation will show in Crookston.

TO DETROIT JULY 4th.

At the regular meeting of Col. Cobham Post on Friday evening of last week the invitation extended by Rev. Lee W. Squier to go to the picnic on the assembly grounds at Detroit on July 4th was discussed and though the attendance was small 35 tickets were pledged—it requires less than 80 tickets pledged at $2.65 each to insure an excursion train and if more than $200 are pledged the fare will be less. Without a doubt the required number can be easily obtained right here in Crookston.

CHINESE OUTRAGES

PROPERTY OF MISSIONARIES DESTROYED BY A MOB.

Refusal of Local Authorities to Provide Protection Responsible for the Occurrence—No Official Information Received Yet by the Chinese Legation at Washington.

SHANGHAI, June 11.—The report of the total destruction of the missions of Cheng Tu, Kia Ting and Yoachohu has been confirmed. The local officials refused protection to the missionaries until the mob had completed the work of demolishing the buildings. The mission stations at other places have been threatened. About 20 adults, besides a number of children, have taken refuge at Cheng Tu and Yamen. Viceroy Lin is blamed for the affair.

LEGATIONS UNADVISED.

No Details of the Trouble Are Known at Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The Chinese legation has received no information as to the reported massacre of all missionaries in Cheng Tu and strong hopes are entertained that the affair may be less serious than the meagre reports indicate. It is stated at the legation that Cheng Tu is a large city in the interior of China. The people are far removed from the centers of foreign commerce, such as Canton and Shanghai. Recently, however, by the treaty of peace with Japan, this interior city was one of several places to be opened to foreigners and foreign commerce. This fact, it is explained, has agitated the people who lived by themselves from time immemorial. The missionaries who have heretofore settled at Cheng Tu. Their number is not known. It is said, however, that the number of missionaries including their families, in the entire province of Se Chung of which Cheng Tu is the capital, must be less than 100, including all nationalities. The missionary headquarters is at Cheng Tu, where it is believed there are not exceeding 10 missionaries, the rest being scattered through the province. But this estimate is based only on the general information of Chinese officials, as there are no exact details of the extent of missionary service through China. The Tsung Li Yamen sought to secure from each foreign government a complete and their places of service, but this was not given. It is said that the emperor of China and the Tsung Li Yamen have given every possible protection to the missionaries, although it has been found impossible to guard against mob violence, particularly at remote interior points.

Are the Only Foreigners

List of the Missionaries

The Chinese government has asked foreign governments to appreciate these difficulties and has advised that the missions should be kept within safe limits. But the zeal of the missionaries has led them to push inland without fear, where the Chinese government officials have found difficulty in affording protection.

The state department has received no dispatches from Minister Denby or other officials in China regarding the reported missionary massacre at Cheng Tu. There are no records at the state department showing the number of missionaries at Cheng Tu.

MOST OF THE TOWN GONE.

Fire at Cameron, W. Va., Destroys Property Worth $300,000.

CAMERON, W. Va., June 11.—The estimate of the loss by the wiping out by fire at Cameron is entirely inadequate. The standing property of the town was probably worth $450,000, and the latest itemized list of the loss foots over $300,000. The insurance is small—only $50,000. Fifty-two houses were burned between 10:30 p. m. and 4 a. m., when the fire finally spent itself. Of these 28 were dwelling houses and the balance business houses. The fire started in Fred Graves' livery stable and in 10 minutes had communicated to buildings on the side street, and was soon entirely beyond control. The loss to the town is almost complete. The spirit of the place is that of a minature Chicago. Already buildings are en route from Wheeling, and several business men are preparing to rebuild. Orders were sent to Wheeling jobbers during the morning for $1,000 worth of goods.

TERRIBLE DISASTER.

Nearly Four Hundred Miners Entombed in a Burning Prussian Colliery.

BRESLAU, June 11.—The Segingoltan mine, belonging to Count Von Donnersmark, is on fire. Out of the 400 miners at work when the fire broke out only 40 reached the surface in safety. The fire has been extinguished. The bodies of 10 miners have been recovered.

SEED CORN.

The average of corn in Polk county will not be as great this year as it would have been if the farmers could have procured the seed they wanted. Every day for two weeks past farmers have been in the city anxiously inquiring where they could obtain a little corn for seed and there seems to be none to be had.

LABORERS FIGHT.

Union and Non-Union Men in Chicago Crack Each Others' Skulls.

OCCURS IN ARMOUR'S PALACE.

Hammers, Wrenches and Other Tools Are Used in the Combat.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Blood has stained the beautiful marble entrance to the $1,000,000 mansion now being erected by P. D. Armour, Jr., at the corner of Thirty-seventh street and Michigan avenue. A handful of non-union painters who have been at work on the interior of the building were attacked during the afternoon by a party of union men and a desperate conflict raged for fully five minutes. Finally, when peace was restored, four non-non-union men were led away to a neighboring drug store to have their broken heads patched up.

The police were not called to the scene of the fracas and no arrests were made. The trouble arose because 10 painters not indorsed by the building trades council were working in the building. For some time the matter has been debated between the trades council and William Jallies, foreman for the New York firm of Berger Bros., who have the contract for the painting on Mr. Armour's new home and who employed the objectionable workmen. Saturday, Alex L. McDonald, president of the Painters' District Council, went to Mr. Jallies and told him that if the non-union painters were not off the job Monday a strike would be declared on the work of on the residence. The non-union painters were not discharged and when the strike came fighting ensued.

The union men outnumbered their opponents and had all the best of the encounter. A terrible war was waged for fully five minutes before the foreman and others could induce the participants to cease fighting. Hammers, wrenches and all sorts of tools were used in the combat, and one after another the men were felled by blows, only to be up again and renew the onslaught. The union men were remarkably fortunate in escaping injury, probably because they had laid perfect plans for the attack. It was only when Foreman Jallies came running up and waved the white flag that the attack of the union men ceased. He signed the agreement presented by the trade's council and immediately afterward discharged the objectionable men 10 in number. They went away—those of them who could walk, but declared they would prosecute both the contractors who discharged them and the union men who assaulted them.

NAMED RECEIVERS.

Egan and Bancroft Control the Utah Northern.

SALT LAKE, June 12.—Judge Merritt of the Third district court handed down his decision in the Oregon Short Line and Utah Northern railway case. He appoints John M. Egan of St. Paul and W. H. Bancroft of Salt Lake as receivers of the entire property within the jurisdiction of the court. This is upon the condition that the interest now due on the mortgages shall be patched up by July 1, and that all interest falling due thereafter shall be paid within 30 days from maturity, otherwise the property shall be surrendered to the receivers of the Union Pacific road. Mr. Bancroft is one of the general superintendents of the Union Pacific system.

Brewers' Unions Protest.

MILWAUKEE, June 12.—The American Federation of Labor has aroused the indignation of the local members of that national organization by resolving that the local brewery unions must leave either the Knights of Labor or the federation. The Brewers' unions have protested and the trades' council has sent in an emphatic protest and at Green Bay the state Federation of Labor will still further object to the action of its national body.

Russian Troops Gathering.

LONDON, June 12.—A dispatch to The Chronicle from Moscow says that the 20th division of the Caucasian army has been ordered to Kars and other garrison stations on the Russo-Turkish frontier. Contractors in Kars and Teiflis have received large orders for stores and ammunition. The increase on the frontier of the Russian forces was not expected and it cannot be explained.

A Fortunate Escape.

About 6:30 on Thursday afternoon, during the storm that prevailed, lightning struck the residence of B. J. Duntley on Jerome's addition peeling the shingles from both sides of the roof about two feet down from the roof board. Mrs. Duntley who was busy at the time in the woodshed was knocked senseless and was insensible for a half an hour but finally rallied and soon recovered but it was an extremely close call. She was so far recovered on Friday as to be able to get up town awhile.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

FOSSTON ITEMS

(From the Thirteen Towns.)

Attorney B. S. Bennett spent yesterday in Crookston.

During the holidays Mrs. A. Babcock will visit with friends at Crookston, Minn.

Boyd Vangorden, of Mentor, is on his way to join the Clearwater drive.

A. Halvorson has removed his restaurant to more commodious quarters on Front street.

I. O. Brandt, our census enumerator, is the busiest man in or out of town just now.

Dr. J. Warninger, veterinary surgeon, arrived yesterday and will remain in town until tomorrow afternoon.

B. F. Fairbanks, Wm. Fairbanks and W. T. Warren were up from White Earth this week and went on to Red Lake. B. F. Fairbanks will open a store at the latter agency soon.

Prof R. W. Hitchcock will spend a few weeks this month at Maple Lake, leaving for Denver, Col., about July 1st, to attend the National Teachers' association; and in August will attend the University training school at Minneapolis.

If Crookston intends to get a new court house within the coming ten years, one worthy of the greatness of Polk county, now is the time for her to be getting in her work. It will take lots of good hustling.

J. Hayden, of London, Ky., who has the contract for carrying the daily mail between here and Crookston, beginning July 1st, was in town Tuesday. We understand that O. F. Carver has secured the sub-contract for this end of the route, between Fosston and Mentor.

Regnild Jacobson, the young girl who has been ill with typhoid fever for the past two months, died on Wednesday evening about 9 o'clock. Her relatives had left her on the care of the town. The remains were buried last evening.

Frank Montague, of Crookston, made the public sale of hay from state lands in this district yesterday. The buyers were not numerous and the sales did not realize any great sum. M. R. Brown acted as auctioneer. If the time for these sales was made known more universally throughout the country they would be better attended.

Lewis Lohn returned last Saturday from West Mitchell, Iowa, where he attended the death of his mother, Syneva Lohn. Deceased had been in delicate health for several years and was finally taken away by bronchitis, at the age of sixty-seven. Six members of the family, being all but one sister, were present at the time and are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother.

E. D. Childs was up from Crookston yesterday and completed a deal with Messrs. Sorenson and Raadklev whereby the latter secure the ownership of the Childs Lumber yard south of the railroad track. Geo. Dunlevy is retained as manager and this firm will carry on the lumber business in connection with their hardware and other lines, also keeping a large assortment of sash, doors, etc., always in stock.

Remember the firemen's tournament June 19th, 20th and 21st. Three days of solid and profitable amusement.

McINTOSH ITEMS.

(From the Times.)

The long promised daily passenger service between this city and Grand Forks has at last been put into effect, the first train arriving here exactly on time at 7:31 yesterday evening in charge of Conductor O'Brien. Carrying with it, as it does, a daily mail service, it will be a great convenience to every one and will greatly facilitate business. The mixed tri-weekly train, with which we have heretofore been obliged to content ourselves, will not be discontinued but will be run as heretofore. The new passenger leaves Grand Forks at 5:00 and Crookston at 5:53 p. m. and at Fosston at 7:50 p. m. Returning, it leaves Fosston at 7:00 and McIntosh at 7:18 a. m., and arrives in Crookston at 8:55 and Grand Forks at 10:00 a. m.

In spite of the unfavorable weather, the school picnic at Lake Cameron was quite well attended Friday. The weather, however, was anything but agreeable.

Died at the home of his parents on Tuesday, May 28th, John Tennyson, the little fifteen months old son of Sam Tennyson, of the town of Lessor. The little boy had been suffering for several months, his illness having commenced with the measles. The funeral services were held Friday forenoon at 10 o'clock.

Miss. Lizzie Zarracher closed a very successful term of school here Wednesday and returned to her home at Crookston the following Saturday. From there she goes to Fisher where she commenced a short term of one month yesterday. We understand also that she has already been engaged to teach the coming season at Fisher. Though we can hardly blame her for improving her opportunities, it is to be regretted that McIntosh is thus to lose one of its best teachers.

Go to the California wine house for choice wines and liquors for medicinal purposes. (5)

Maple Bay Items.

These items were received too late for last issue.—ED. JOURNAL.

Memorial Day was appropriately observed by the pupils of our school at the cemetery, with essays, songs, recitations, etc.

Mrs. Ols Youngberg died May 30th of consumption, leaving a husband and several small children. Interment at Woodside June 3d.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Mitchell, May 30th, a son.

A party of emigrants hailing from Cass Co., N. D. camped at the Bay Friday night, en route to McIntosh, Erskine and thereabouts.

On Monday last a large crowd from Fertile, accompanied by the band from that place embarked on the steamboat Maple Lake Belle, to spend the day at Maple Lake Park, returning here at 6 p. m., thence home.

S. D. Felsing, who has just finished and launched another boat still finds the demand greater than the supply.

Rev. Wiken and A. Christianson are each building an addition to his house.

Rev. P. A, Johnson, Congregational minister, will preach in the school house Sabbath afternoon, at three o'clock. All are invited to attend.

THIEF RIVER FALLS ITEMS

(From the Press.)

Prof. Casey, of Red Lake Falls, was in the city yesterday with Dr. Watson.

Attorney Richardson returned Monday from a few days' sojourn at the county seat.

C. J. Knox has served amended complaint upon the Meehans in his $52,000 libel suit.

The east-side school closed Friday for the summer's vacation. The next term will open in the new building.

Last evening at the residence of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Bakken, occured the nuptial ceremony which united Mr. Ole E. Olson and Miss. Hilda Bakken, Rev. Braldesen officiating. The house was comfortably filled with invited guests who witnessed the happy event.

Wednesday's copious rain and the delightful weather following have made the crops and gardens look still more promising.

Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls, was called yesterday to counsel with Dr. Grundy in the case of Freddy Maxwell whose condition does not seem to improve.

Messrs. Barbuen & Dahl finished burning their first kiln of lime last Saturday and when opened it was found to be a fine article.

Complying with the requests of their constituents the city council are having a curfew ordinance drawn up which they will act upon and doubtless pass at their next meeting. Kids under 16 years will then scamper for home when the nine o'clock bell rings or will be taken care of by the marshal.

Phil. Zeh, proprietor of the City brick yards opened a new kiln of red brick last week. It has the required ring, smooth surface, hardness and color of all first class brick. The new kiln is a very large one and the quality holds out.

Mayor Kretzschmaar is setting an example worthy of imitation by every property owner in the city. He has a force of men at work, clearing the brush off all his lots along the principal streets.

Angus Items.

Mrs. Finlayson went to Crookston Monday evening to attend the commencement.

W. Lemen and Miss Cosy McAvoy went to Crookston Tuesday evening.

Several of Angus' young folks went to Euclid to attend the social.

F. Strobie and daughter went to Crookston on Thursday and returned on Friday.

M. A. Campian drove to Crookston on Thursday and had to remain over night on account of the rain.

R. King and wife were at Grand Forks on Thursday.

There will be a basket social at Campian's on next Tuesday.

The M. & N. Elevator Co. carpenters have arrived in town and are at work on the elevator. Ex.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 7, 1895.

Had Mr. Cleveland tried he could hardly have selected a Secretary of State who would have been more displeasing to the democratic leaders in Congress than Attorney General Olney. Mr. Olney does not lack ability, but the ability he has is not the kind which makes a successful Secretary of State. He is utterly devoid of that spirit of affability in dealing with men which has always been considered a prime necessity in the make-up of a diplomat. He has so conducted the business of the Department of Justice that the average Congressman prefers when he has business with that department to transact it in writing rather than to take the chance of being personally snubbed by Mr. Olney, as his present colleague, Postmaster General Wilson, was, when he was chairman of the House Ways and Means committee and the recognized leader of the democrats in that body. By the way, speaking of Wilson, if he had not been Postmaster General he might have been Secretary of State, but since he joined the cabinet he has shown himself to be too much of a narrow gauge man even for Mr. Cleveland, who is certainly far from being broad-minded himself.

There is more or less dissatisfaction among democrats over Mr. Cleveland's method of selecting Attorney General Olney for Secretary of State. Although there were a score of men prominent in democratic councils near enough to Washington to have been called into consultation without delaying the filling of the vacancy or inconveniencing them, no advice was asked of any of them, and about the only democrat outside of the cabinet who has seen Mr. Cleveland was Senator Gray, of Delaware, who is known as a cuckoo, but not as a leader.

The convention of the Republican National League, which will assemble at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 16th inst., is regarded by most republicans as the virtual opening of the Presidential campaign. All reports brought to Washington indicate that the attendance will be large and enthusiastic, including nearly every man who is recognized as one of the national leaders of the party. Ex-President Harrison, Gov. Morton and Chauncey M. Depew have not yet accepted the invitations extended to them, but it is probable that they will. Among those who have accepted invitations and who will attend the convention, barring sickness or accidents, ex-Speaker Reed, Gov. McKinley, ex-Gov. Foraker, Gen. Russell A. Alger, Senators Allison, Dubois, Thurston, Carter, Lodge Nelson, Burrows and Patton. One of the features of the convention will be a mammoth harmony dinner to be given in the evening of the second day. This dinner will be served on the ground floor of the Arcade building, and the tables will be set for 2,000 guests and provided with best eatables to be obtained. The galleries above the ground floor are half a mile in length and will accomodate more than 5,000 republican men and women who will naturally want to see the greatest harmony dinner ever proposed and eaten by the delegates to the convention and their guests. Republicans are not alarmed at democratic predictions of trouble in the convention, because they know that the basis of the predicted trouble—the silver question and the booming of some particular candidate for the Presidential nomination—is composed of matters over which the convention has no legitimate jurisdiction and with which it will not attempt to deal.

Retribution is sometimes almighty slow, but it nearly always gets there just the same. Charles B. Morton, a Maine Democrat, who was made commissioner of navigation by Mr. Cleveland in his first administration and auditor of the treasury for the navy department early in the present administration, as a reward for the scavenger work he performed in the campaign of dirty personal abuse that was waged against the late James G. Blaine in 1884, was this week summarily dismissed from the latter office by Mr. Cleveland, and, to make the delayed retribution all the more satisfactory to decent people, Morton was dismissed for exactly the same reason that he was given office—for exercising his scavenger proclivities. But he made the mistake of abusing the man who gave him office, this time, and was consequently kicked out of office, greatly to the satisfaction of officers of the navy, whose accounts it was his duty to pass upon, and with whom he has been in a constant wrangle ever since he held the office. May his unlamented fate be a warning to those who try to travel into office over the sewer route.

Secretary Carlisle is going to Kentucky to make a last attempt to stem the tide of free silver which is apparently sweeping over the Democratic party of that state.

"The man With ideas for Comfort in Travel is abroad in the land and The North-Western Line has met him before any other line in the Northwest. This line has without doubt taken the most active and aggressive part in securing the Comfort and Conveniences of its passengers and in its North-Western Limited has given the Twin Cities the Best Train to Chicago.—The Sun, Brandon, Man.

"In These Days Of Comfort and Convenience in Railway Train Services American people are apt to become a bit hardened and unappreciative. They are getting so calloused to luxury, so to speak, that it takes something unusual to evoke words of praise. No more pointed example of the perfection of train service can be found anywhere than in the fine North-Western Limited.—Progressive Age Minneapolis, Minn.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

"The People Of the Northwest portion of the United States can congratulate themselves on having the elegant traveling accommodations offered by the North-Western Line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago which the wealthiest and oldest roads in the effete East have not yet found it possible to excel.—The Times, Monticello. THE BROODER.

After All, the Well Behaved Hen Cannot Be Improved Upon.

In attempting to do nature's work evidently we must follow nature's laws with more or less faithfulness, if we expect to do as well in the result as nature does. The hen is the natural hatcher and brooder, and when well behaved and free from all cranky notions cannot be improved upon. We study the hen faithfully, but we cannot always do just as she does. In cold weather she rarely leaves her nest even long enough to eat and drink. In warm weather she takes a course exactly the opposite and remains away from her eggs hours at a time. We can imitate all this, but when we see her turn the eggs she works in such a reckless, unsystematic manner, that we wouldn't imitate her if we could. A hen does many things which we do not exactly understand, and so we guess at it. This is probably why so many incubators and brooders are no good. One thing a hen doesn't do, and that is to have two tiers of eggs, one above the other. That was the way the first hatcher I ever owned was built. We had not studied hens to as good advantage then as we have since.

With what persistence and frequency has the jeremiad gone up that it is one thing to hatch the chickens, but quite another to raise them, we may never know, but that seems to be a common complaint. It ought not to be so. There ought to be no difficulty in raising a brood of healthy chickens. Surely all they need is good dry quarters and wholesome food. I have seen chickens raised in a soapbox with a lantern inside to keep them warm. Have also seen them after a few days old put into a coop with a bed of hay, shut up tight and keep each other warm, no artificial heat whatever. I have seen an excellent brooder made of a common packing case, about three feet each way, a hole cut in top and bottom, a cone of common flower pots inverted over the hole in the bottom and reaching to the top, the thing set up on bricks and a lamp put under it. Here chickens lived comfortably and thrived wonderfully. My own brooders are flat pieces of tin or zinc, covered with sand and a lamp underneath. Sometimes the tin is a shallow pan with an inch of water, and that covered with a thin board. In cold weather there is a hover for the chickens to get under, but all brooders should have room away from the heat—the chickens do not want or need to be forever brooded—and high enough to allow the heat to go above the chickens.

Chickens really need but little heat and are satisfied to have it in almost any form. But it is fatal to have a large number in one flock seeking heat. Recently a man related to me his experience with a combination hatcher and brooder. During the first day of the hatch he got out about 200 chickens and placed them all in the brooder, on top. In the morning more than half of them were dead. It was cold during the night, and they all crowded to the one source of heat, and those which were so unfortunate as not to be on top of the pile didn't live to show forth the glories of artificial incubation.

There have been more mistakes in making brooders than in hatchers, and probably due to too much heat. Chickens require a general wholesome warmth and do not need to have their brains overheated. The entire atmosphere should be comfortably warm. If the outside air is not too cold, they enjoy going out and returning when they feel like it, precisely as they do when with the hen.

It is an old chestnut that chickens ought not to get themselves wet. It don't harm a chicken to get a complete and thorough ducking, provided the drying process follows. Allow the chickens to run in the grass until dripping wet if they will. They know when and where to get dry again.

How many of us remember the days when our mother and g[illegible] used to take chickens aw[illegible] til the hatch was c[illegible] tle things into a basket, [illegible] with soft cloth, an[illegible] kitchen stove? No [illegible] brooder about that, but the [illegible] lived and thrived all the [illegible] quite considerable vitality in a healthy chicken, and it can stand more rough treatment than we would suppose, sometimes even to the treatment of a brooder heated in all parts to over 100 degrees.

How long do chickens need to be kept in a brooder? Well, that depends. Our Leghorns, hatched early in April, never see the brooders after the 1st of May. They are then placed 15 in a coop, set down in the orchard and left to shift for themselves, having enough to eat, of course.

To be successful with chickens don't crowd them and don't overheat them. Give plenty of drinking water and grain as soon as they will eat it, with gravel from the start, and don't let them get lousy.

There is an old warning which rings in our ears at times, "Don't bite off more than you can chew." Had my grandmother put 200 chickens into her peck basket behind the kitchen stove they would no doubt have shared the fate of those the man put into the temporary brooder on the top of his hatcher. We are liable to attempt great undertakings without realizing the magnitude thereof until failure stares us in the face. We hatch out a few hundred chickens without scarcely a well defined thought as to what is to become of them. If we would put as much consideration into brooding as we do into hatching, there would be fewer failures. I must insist upon it that it is an easier matter to raise the chickens than to hatch them, and hope others will learn to look on it in like manner with myself.—Poultry Monthly.

The Most Valuable Farm Product.

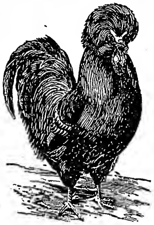
Poultry pays a better per capita rate proportionately than any other species of known farm live stock. Its value within the nation exceeds that of any other farm product. Our country imports over $150,000 worth of eggs alone every three months.

CREVECŒURS.

Beautiful and Useful Poultry For Fancier or Farmer.

Blending art and nature to produce beautiful and useful poultry has been practiced by the artistical French nation for more than half a century, taking the lead in continental Europe, says The Poultry Monthly. How far they have succeeded the illustration speaks for them, the elegant Crevecœurs (broken hearts), so named by the French on account of their singular combs.

When the name was given them, the comb was not bred so much like two horns as it is now. It more resembled a parted heart. These birds are bred larger and stronger than they were years ago, when they first left their mild French climate. No doubt more attention has been given to improve them on their native soil, as they are now less liable to variation of feather than formerly. Our illustration, reproduced from The Fanciers' Gazette, England, is a prize winner and shows the perfection of this notable fowl. It is a breed of decided characteristics. Look in the face of a Crevecœur cock and see what a remarkable physog he has. He looks as though he was prepared for a bal masque, with his big, red horns backed up with a full, black crest, broad face red gills, muffled up in his plentiful beard. Is it not a comical picture of a fowl's head? They are fair layers of large, white eggs; generally nonsitters and are excellent table birds, for which they are highly prized by the nation that stands high in the gastronomic art. Their lustrous black plumage, elegant forms and majestic carriage place these fowls in the front rank of ornamental as well as useful poultry.



CREVECŒUR PRIZE COCK.

COST TO START.

It All Depends Upon the Extent of the Business.

"Can the poultry business be started with $350?" asks a Farm Poultry subscriber.

Yes, says the editor, it can be started, but we imagine we can read between the lines that in that start and for that amount of investment our friend expects to be supported, and of course wants all the other expenses met. It cannot be done. Three hundred and fifty dollars is no amount of money at all to invest in any business unless the operator expects to "find himself." Three hundred and fifty dollars at 6 per cent interest would earn only $21 a year.

Is it not a good business that would give 12 per cent interest? Yet that would only be $42 a year. How many businesses are paying 12 per cent? Poultry will, but $42 not being enough for a living the capital must be increased.

How much of a henhouse can be built for $100? At $2 a running foot, it is easy to figure out a 50 foot hennery. Divide this into five pens, and put ten fowls in each pen, and there will be quarters for just 45 hens and five cockerels.

Fifty fowls at $1.50 each would cost $75, and this amount, added to the cost of the house, would take just exactly one-half of the capital. Double the capacity for the full amount of money in hand.

One hundred hens at $2 profit each would give but $200 a year clear money on the entire collection. Could one live on that amount?

But there are more who only make $1 head profit than double the amount. It requires experience to bring out the big results, just like any other business.

Now, if our inquirer has some other occupation for a living and will start as we suggest he can gradually build up a paying business.

Moral.—Begin small; go slow; don't expect much with little. Rather reverse it.

A Chicken Circus.

When you go out to feed the chickens, scatter a few grains in a circle around you, keeping just ahead of the fowls with the corn, and keep them traveling round and round, always the same way. Keep this up regularly for a week, and the chickens will take to it like a duck to water, and soon they will start up the circus every time they go out. This will not cause them to lay more eggs in winter. It will not protect them against hawks. It will not cure roup and bumble foot. It will not kill the lice on their heads and under their wings, but it will amuse you and your visitors, and fun is better than physic.

A New Breed.

The Dominique Leghorn is bound to be popular. It is a handsome fowl, clean, sprightly, of pure Leghorn shape, and possessing all the good qualities of the other varieties. As layers they are said to excel all other breeds. The Dominique Leghorn is not a new variety. It has long been bred in Europe as well as in America. But it has been kept in the background in this country. An effort is now being made to bring the Dominique Leghorn to the front by breeders who know its value. This fowl is certain to become just as popular in time as the other varieties of Leghorns.—Poultry Fancier.

POULTRY POINTS.

Hatching, Feeding and Packing Eggs to Send Away.

Put about four quarts of hay chaff and a little clean grit into the coop when transferring the hen and chicks from the nest, and place a clean board in front, outside, for a table. This loose board may be used also at night to close up the front during cold weather. Care must be taken not to leave any place large enough for a chicken to squeeze out, as he may get out and not be able to go back the same way, and get chilled before you see him.

I find nothing better for the first few meals than crackers or stale bread and milk—sweet or sour. As they grow stronger I give a "johnnycake," made from provender and shorts mixed with milk and baked. This soaked in milk again makes the best chicken ration I ever used.

The best provender is secured by taking equal parts of corn and oats and one-half as much clean wheat or barley, and having it all ground together at your gristmill. For very little chicks this should be sifted to remove the hulls. Yet, after four to six weeks, it is unnecessary.

My earliest chickens are fed the first thing in the morning, again about 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., then again just before dark.

By moistening the food with milk, it is not necessary to give any water to drink until after the weather begins to grow warmer, or we feed dry grain instead of moist food.

Milk in any form—sweet or sour—is one of the best foods ever thought of for little chickens. When given as a drink, they often get soiled and dirty with it, but by mixing into the feed this is avoided, and all is eaten up clean.

April was the banner month for selling eggs for hatching, and while I think of it I will give my methods of packing.

A basket is lined with paper. Then put in about an inch of cut hay or clover into the bottom, wrap each egg in paper and place them at least one-half an inch apart, small end down, and fill in around them with chaff or bran. If the basket is deep enough, you may put two layers of eggs, yet care must be taken not to get too near the sides, top or bottom. The whole business should be carefully pressed down, and a cloth or cover firmly sewed on top. If the eggs are fresh and fertile when you start them off, they will hatch nearly as well when shipped a thousand miles as at home.

A fertile egg will stand more shaking and cold weather than many are aware of and yet hatch a strong, healthy chicken.

PRESERVING EGGS.

Standard Method Used by Speculators and Dealers.

Numerous methods of preserving eggs are in use, says the American Agriculturist. The idea of all this is to keep air out of the egg, as by such absence of oxygen decay can be arrested for a considerable length of time, especially if the eggs are perfectly fresh at the start and are kept in a cool, dark place. The standard method, most used by speculators and dealers, is to put the eggs in limewater. The process is as follows, this recipe having been widely sold at $5 under pledge of secrecy:

Take 24 gallons of water, 12 pounds of unslaked lime and 4 pounds of salt, or in that proportion, according to the quantity of eggs to be preserved. Stir several times daily and then let stand until the liquor has settled and is perfectly clear. Draw or carefully dip off the clear liquid, leaving the sediment at the bottom. Take for the above amount of liquid 5 ounces each of baking soda, cream of tartar, saltpeter and borax and an ounce of alum. Pulverize and mix these and dissolve in a gallon of boiling water, and add to the mixture about 20 gallons of pure limewater. This will about fill a cider barrel. Put the eggs in carefully, so as not to crack any of the shells, letting the water always stand an inch above the eggs, which can be done by placing a barrel head a little smaller upon them and weighting it. This amount of liquid will preserve 150 dozen eggs. It is not necessary to wait to get a full barrel or smaller package of eggs, but they can be put in at any time that they can be obtained fresh. The same liquid should be used only once.

The Sitting Hen.

The sitting hen is a curious beast of burden, and many a good lesson has been pointed out from her patient and shining example. She has a certain amount of unalterable determination, which is unequaled perhaps by any other species of "winged animals." Her efforts and purpose, however, are put forth in a good cause and merit the right hand furtherance and support of her master in all ways possible. Her apartment should be separate from the balance of the flock. Her food should be of the best kind and be given at regular intervals—morning and night. Keep fresh, clean water constantly before her; also the dust box. Keep an eye continually on the eggs and nesting material and sprinkle a little sulphur (powder) through the material occasionally; also through the plumage of the fowl. At the end of ten days test the eggs with a lamp and throw out all infertile ones. If there is more than one fowl sitting, fresh eggs may be given to make out the number, and the chickens be united. A hen will sit overtime ten days without serious harm if her management be proper. Darken the nests partially.

A Protection From Hawks.

Get a few guineas and hawks will not bother you. Teach the guineas to roost in the henhouse with the fowls. If you keep fowls in runs, clip the guineas' wings and put them in the yards, allowing some to run with the chicks. Another good plan for hawks, which we have tried successfully, is to string a small wire completely around the yards where the chicks are. On the wire tie bits of bright tin and red and white rags, and the hawks will not come inside the line thus drawn.

LANGUAGE OF THE HEN.

Different Calls She Has For Different Occasions.

The ordinary domestic fowl affords the most positive evidence of the possession of a language that is understood, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. There are many decidedly different calls, which, if taken down in a phonograph and repeated in a henhouse or yard would produce interesting results. I need but mention a few calls to illustrate the range of sounds in the domestic fowls. On a warm day, when hens are released from their coop, when their minds are undisturbed and all nature looks bright and inviting, they sing as they feed—a continuous repetition of kerr-kerr-kerr, with various modulations. The rooster never utters it, nor the mother hen. It is the song of the happy-go-lucky of hen creation.

Now let a hawk appear in the sky or any disturbing element. An entirely different sound is heard. The hen stops, stretches her head upward, and with the cock utters a decided note of warning in a high falsetto, k-a-r-r-r-r-e-l And if the enemy still comes on it is repeated, and every bird in the vicinity lowers its head and runs to cover. The sound says in the gallus language: "An enemy is coming. Run!" And run they do, the kerr-kerr-kerr being resumed only when all danger is past. Note the joyous call of the hen that has laid an egg. Cut-cut, ca-da-cut comes oft repeated from the henhouse, and other envious hens are informed beyond any question or mistake that Mrs. Gallus has laid an egg.

Now, when the eggs are hatched, we have other and maternal notes. There is a deep, monotonous cluck, cluck that is a warning to others and a gentle admonition of the chicks to remain near, but it is not a call. Note the difference when the mother or proud cock finds a worm. The cock appears to be greatly excited, and he pretends to peck at it, makes the guileless hens believe that he is about to devour the bonne bouche himself; all the time he is saying cut, cut, cut—come, come, come—rapidly, which causes the hens to run pellmell in his direction, to find in many instances nothing, being merely a device to call the flock away from some rival. But in the case of the mother the little ones always find some tidbit which she has discovered.

I will not attempt to reproduce the baby talk of the old hen to her chicks, but it exists in great variety and is suggestive of tenderness, affection and maternal love.

VALUE OF TAR.

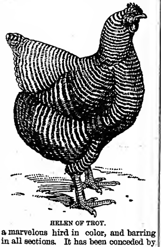
Poultry Raisers Should Use It Instead of Whitewash.

Poultry raisers seem to have failed to learn the value of tar. It is valuable in many ways, says C. W. Norris in The Epitomist. I am led to believe that to tar the fence around the poultry house, instead of whitewashing, will be much better. It will contribute largely to the durability of the wood, protecting it from storm and time. It is in the poultry house that the value of tar is the greatest, for it conduces greatly toward healthfulness.

When cholera makes its appearance, we would advise, first, a thorough cleaning of the house. Next, an application of tar on all the joints, cracks and crevices of the inside of the building, and then plenty of whitewash properly applied. The tar absorbs or drives away the taint of disease and makes the premises wholesome. The smell is not offensive—in fact, many people like it, and it is directly opposite to unhealthy. To vermin, lice, etc., the smell of tar is very repulsive, and but few will remain after you have tarred the house. A neighbor of ours was once troubled with chicken cholera, and by adopting the above, in connection with removing affected fowls, he soon put a stop to its ravages. A small lump of tar in the drinking water supplied to the fowls will be found beneficial.

Helen of Troy.

An extremely fine bird is the first prize Barred Plymouth Rock hen owned and bred by Mr. E. B. Thompson. She won the first prize of the New York show and was also winner as a pullet at the Philadelphia show of 1893. She is a marvelous bird in color, and barring in all sections. It has been conceded by many prominent Plymouth Rock judges that the equal of the hen does not exist. Mr. Thompson is breeding from her this spring, also from her sisters and daughters, and three of his breeding pens are headed by sons of this famous hen. The results from such matings must prove most pleasing.



HELEN OF TROY.

To Fatten Geese.

Geese put into a darkened room, with just enough light so they can see to eat, will fatten in two weeks if given all the oats and cornmeal they can eat. We are acquainted with a German farmer who follows this method successfully. Sometimes he puts oats in a trough with water over them. Gravel was also put in the trough, but it will not do to confine geese separately, but put several together, or they will not fatten.

THE St. Paul Morning Call has been bought up by the Globe. It would seem that there was, after all, no Call for two Democratic dailies in St. Paul.

THE East Grand Forks Review man has taken a partner and intimates a change in name. Perfectly natural that one of the partners at least should change the name.

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of a neat little catalogue of Hope Academy, Moorhead. The catalogue was printed by Bro. Matson, in the Sheaf office, at Warren, and is a very creditable piece of work.

THE president has decided upon a successor to Walter Q. Gresham as secretary of state. He has selected Richard J. Olney, of Massachusetts. Don't know but that is as good as he could do, even though Grover does owe a lasting debt of gratitude to our own Alexander—McKinnon.

THE board of pardons has granted a parole to Annie Doolittle alias Annie Murphy, the noted female forger. She is known to our people as Annie McCrea, daughter of the late Senator McCrea, of Perham. Judge Searle severely criticises the action of the board in this matter.

THE Northfield News says that "Capt. S. R. VanSant is out for candidate for governor," next trip, "and don't care who knows it." Sam made a rattling good speaker of the House and would supplement that record as governor should the political lightning strike Sam's rod.

THE delegates to the Cleveland republican convention met at the Windsor house in St. Paul to partake of a banquet set forth by landlord Somers, on Wednesday evening of this week. From the character of the speeches made on that occasion we should judge that the leaders of the republican party are sound to the core on the money question.

IT is said that president J. J. Hill contemplates putting on a line of steamers between Tacoma and China to carry wheat to the Chinese. This would provide a sure market for the cheap wheat of the west side but could hardly affect our markets here. Our wheat is rather too rich for the blood of the average native Chinese who would still prefer his "rice" and chopsticks.

SO FAR the principles enunciated by the Republicans in their state platforms have no uncertain sound on the money question, it is unequivocally for honest money, and plenty of it to do the business of the country with. During its entire history the Republican party has always advocated those things that tend to the upbuilding of a mighty republic—and hence its phenomenal success.

THE average Democrat loves to tell you that "Grover Cleveland is the logical candidate of his party for next president." Come to think of it that may be so, for look the party over carefully and where can you discover any other man fit or capable? One can hardly accuse Grover himself of fitness or capability, and the only thing that he has to recommend him is the fact that he has already waded through two terms nearly.

CHAIRMAN Henrichsen, of the Illinois democratic state committee takes the bovine by the antlers when he insists upon stealing the party for the free silverites—and a jolly row will be the inevitable result. Mike Doran, of the democratic state central committee of Minnesota, dont like it a little bit no more than the Cleveland followers generally do—and there you have it. Music by the full band.

THE tendency to make light of and ridicule the Salvation Army, among people who esteem themselves good church people, is, we are pleased to say, becoming less, as that brave army proves by its works its right to exist. The effects of their work is more apparent in the large cities, where an element exists that cannot be reached by regular church influences, but by their peculiar method "they gather them in." It is there that they have proven their right to be regarded as true reformers.

W. C. WHITNEY says he don't want to be president next term. As Whitney is a Democrat he can easily be accommodated.

THE Democrats insist that Harrison is the logical candidate for republicans to nominate. The Dems would like to name our man—if they could.

C. C. KNAPPEN, of the Detroit Free Press, has re-purchased the Fisher Bulletin and took charge recently. It will be remembered that he owned and conducted the Bulletin a few years ago. Welcome back to Polk county, Knap.

THE sign "To Let", hangs on the outer walls of the old Libby prison in Chicago. If all reports are true the removal of that structure from Richmond, Va., has proved a losing speculation. During the World's Fair the old building was crowded to its utmost capacity, and it would seem that there were people enough who would have curiosity enough to see this old historical relic to make the venture a paying one.

THE State Labor Commissioner, L. G. Powers, has written a book which exposes the fallacies of Coin in so clear and yet so simple a manner that anyone who can read the English language can understand it. The book gives the views of "Farmer Hayseed" upon the silver question, mortgage indebtedness and all the questions Coin asserts affect the interest of the farmers disastrously. Every farmer, especially in this new country, should read this little book. You can get it by sending 25 cents to L. G. Powers, St. Paul, Minn.

IT is with a feeling akin to regret that we note the departure of the leading spirit of the American Press Association in St. Paul—J. S. Pinney, who has for so long been the manager of that branch, and who goes to accept a better position in Columbus, Ohio. While we regret to see him go we congratulate him upon his promotion and wish him as full measure of success as he met with in the St. Paul office.

THE State of Indiana furnished a most excellent president in the person of her noted statesman, Benjamin Harrison, but that is no reason why we should concede everything to her. While we confess a very great regard for the Hoosier state, we are of the opinion that the Republican party needs something more magnetic than an icicle as a presidential candidate in order to win the race. We were in that Minneapolis National convention!

BRO. BRONSON, of the Osakis Review, has taken unto himself a life partner in the person of a young lady of that place. In these piping times of "hard times" it would seem to require a good deal of nerve for so important a step, but your average newspaper man generally has a sufficient amount of that essential greatly needed in our business, to accomplish most any undertaking—and he always insists upon getting the best of everything. The JOURNAL sends congratulations.

OUR old-time friend, Chauncy M. Depew, of New York, seems to be taking a hand in the presidental candidate making. Now we used to be pretty well acquainted with Chauncy in the days when we claimed a residence in York state and we can just fancy the complacent smile he had on him when he left out the name of big, burly Tom Reed from his list of invitations to that banquet. Ah, Chauncy, old boy, you better take a reef in that sail and don't leave Tom Reed out of your calculations. He might fool you.

"BUT HE COULDN'T SPLIT THE WOOD."

A thrifty granger of Kittson county one day last week saw a young moose contentedly grazing upon the prairie, and the desire to catch the beast grew upon him, so he mounted a horse and took after the interloper. After tiring out three good horses he finally bagged his moose-ship in a piece of swampy land and lassoed him in true cow-boy style—but he had forgotten to take into account the law of the land which saith: "Thou shalt not never take after nary moose, thee, nor thy wife, nor thy son, nor thy son's wife, nor shalt thou at any time have ary moose in thy possession." So it came to pass that when the chief mogul, yclept the game warden, heard these things, he girded up his loins and proceeding to Kittson county he did rake in the moose aforesaid, likewise the granger, shipping the former to the St. Anthony Park experimental farm and the latter to the nearest justice shop, and verily that granger shall molest nor make afraid nary another moose, no, not so long as time (with him) shall last.

MINNESOTA TO THE FRONT.

[St. Paul Dispatch.]

The conference yesterday and last night of the earnest business men of St. Paul and other cities of Minnesota, together with a goodly number of the editors of the state, to formulate some definite and effective policy regarding domestic manufactures and their development and distribution, is a very important step in the right direction. Nature has been very bountiful to Minnesota in the gift of immense natural resources for the making of a great manufacturing state, and all that is wanted is effective organization to make the most of her untold wealth. What has made New England great is directly within the reach of Minnesota within her own borders, with this advantage over the Northeastern Atlantic states; that we have inexhaustible deposits of iron and other valuable ores that New England does not possess. The water power of Minnesota is unexcelled by that of any state in the Union, and her great wheat fields are capable of feeding millions of her own factory, mill and furnace operatives. Water and rail transportation she has without limit. It is impossible to conceive more favorable conditions for the creation of a great manufacturing state. The credit of her people and her business men is unexcelled, and when once the great plans for the development for the widely diversified manufacturing industries of the immediate future are matured capital will gladly seek us from wherever it is turning toward profitable investment. The foundation for great future enterprises has been laid and the spirit and intelligence manifested yesterday are an omen of a magnificent future. It was a fortunate moment when the tide of industrial prosperity had turned for the business men of the state to inaugurate a general movement to increase and diversify its possible enormous future industries.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative power that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

EAST GRAND FORKS ITEMS.

(From the Courier.)

James Driscol has been sowing barley this week, and figures there is plenty of time for it to mature.

Ex-County Auditor Webster received a chair on the 62nd anniversary of his existence, the gift of his fourteen sons and daughters.

James Jarvis of the Point had the misfortune to break his arm in a collision with a tree while driving after dark on the Point.

The East Grand Forks nine will soon challenge any base ball team in the northwest, and is particularly anxious to have some fun with the Crookston boys.

Owing to the muddy condition of the streets Mrs. Tom Thumb and her midgety company did not drive through the streets of this city in their baby carriages.

For some days past a one-armed man has been in the city peddling lead pencils. When he approaches a customer he pleadingly holds up the stump of the lost arm. On Wednesday the fellow and a companion who looked about as seedy were seen upon the streets in a beastly state of intoxication. Such characters should be made to walk the plank.

P. D. Sweeney who some time ago stole a hack and a span of horses in this city, was adjuged guilty of petty larceny, and sent over the road for thirty days. Last week Sweeney's time expired, and as he has returned to town it might be well for the police to keep an eye on him; two eyes in fact.

Yesterday morning Marenas Leeson of the Point, was badly kicked by a fractious colt. Mr. Leeson had just finished feeding the animal when the accident occured.

Mr. John Buckley and bride, nee Miss Annie Lobsinger, returned from their wedding trip on Wednesday. The honeymoon was spent in Wadena, this state. The young couple have taken up their residence in the Waldroff cottage, on Second street.

Considerable feeling is being manifested in this city over the fact that Census Enumerator O. A Thoreson did not get the names of Mr. and Mrs. Montague K. Bradford on his list as residents of this city before removing to t'other side of the river. It is to the city's intrest to get everybody in sight.

Tramps are already making their appearance in large numbers. Those now here bear evidence of having passed a severe winter, and some of them need watching. Their favorite resort during the day time is down on the river bank in the timber. At night they ply their occupation of gaugers—that is they visit the rear of the different saloons and drain what beer may have remained in the keg at the time the careless bar tender took it off tap.

A marriage license was issued by Judge Carothers of Grand Forks on Monday to Iver W. Alme, of Bottineau and Miss Emily Carleton, of Belleville, Ontario. Mr. Alme will be remembered as being a resident of the Point for some years. About four years ago he left his wife and child saying he was going to visit relatives in Bottineau. As he did not return his wife applied for a divorce on the grounds of desertion, which was granted, and the divorced wife some time afterward married and is now occupying the old home stead. The former husband has also remarried. We hear so much about the sacredness of marriage, but when we meet with so many instances like the above we are inclined to the belief that to the average man and woman marriage is a simple compact and the party getting the worst of it is only too willing to go back on his part of the agreement.

Euclid Items.

Mr. Marin, of Crookston, was up last week looking after the interests of Messrs. Miller & Foote.

Mrs. Angie Stockwell and daughter Mrs. Blanche Hyley, of Lyon's, Iowa, arrived last Wednesday to spend the summer with the families of H. C. Misner and A. H. Pitkin.

Paul Useldinger returned from Barnesville one day last week not at all disheartened by his ill luck in matrimonial affairs. Paul says he intends to follow the old maxim: "If at first you don't succeed try, try again."

John Pollis and Matt Biever were among the other Euclidites in Crookston Wednesday.

John Keeley, of St. Paul, was here last week on a short visit to his parents.

About ten members of the Warren camp M. W. A. came down last Wednesday evening to exemplify the work for the boys of Euclid's new camp. A banquet was held at the East side hotel after the lodge ceremonies were completed.

Mr. and Mrs. John Goosen took a short rest from their farm duties by a visit to Crookston last Thursday.

Capt. L. S. Hancock and G. H. Fargo were down to the county seat last Thursday.

Miss Charlotte Fairweather has been quite seriously ill during the past week but has now nearly recovered.

Hugh Douglas and wife were in Crookston Thursday.

Mr. M. A. Campian was down from Angus Friday.

G. Vonderbeck gave a social dance Friday evening, at his residence west of town.

Emil Vonderbeck and Mike Keeley came up Friday to attend the dance.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Teal, Wednesday last. Mother and child are both doing well.

Louis Cottet, of Warren, was down on business Monday.

Judge Montague, of Crookston, spent a short time in town on Monday.

Dr. J. S. Chapin and wife drove to Crookston Monday afternoon. Mrs. Chapin returned in the evening but the doctor continued on to St. Paul. He goes on a combined business and pleasure trip to attend the meeting of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

Mrs. Mary Currie departed for Glenwood, Minn., Monday evening, to enjoy a much needed rest. She will return by the way of Faribault, where she will be joined by her daughter, Olive, who has been attending school there during the past year.

Several Euclid people attended the social held at the residence of Mrs. Campian, at Angus, Tuesday evening.

The dedication of the new church building will take place next Tuesday; the ceremonies to begin at 2 o'clock P. M.

Mr. George Easby departed for Grand Forks, Tuesday afternoon, to visit a few days in that city.

Mrs. Dr. Chapin departed for Hallock Wednesday morning, where she goes to attend a missionary gathering.

The St. Anthony and Dakota elevator at this place will receive a thorough overhauling soon. The timber for a new foundation and lumber for other repairs is now on the road and soon after it arrives work on the building will be begun.

H. C. Misner began shipping out of the M. & N. elevator the first of the week and about five car loads are being shipped out daily.

STRONG MEN.

We nineteenth century people are fond of telling the splendid story of civilization's progress in the last hundred years, counting the great inventions that have made the ends of the earth near neighbors and enhanced so greatly our comfort; and we look back with a sort of pity on the ancient people of Greece and Rome. But, except in science and invention, are we superior to those people? In sculpture and in philosophy we are still imitating them, and have not yet equaled the models. In physical culture and hygiene, we can show no better results than the Greeks of two thousand five hundred years ago, and our strong men are no stronger than theirs. Winship and Sandow can be matched a dozen times over among the ancients. Milo the Greek carried a four-year-old ox four times around the Olympian race course without resting. Sampson made himself immortally famous by his acts, though he is suspected to have been an advertiser, as on one occasion he took two solid columns to show his strength, and at the performance brought down the house. Our real strong men of to-day are men of strong minds, who build up and control the railroad systems of our country. No columns of reading are needed to demonstrate this—merely buy your ticket via the Burlington Route when you go to Chicago or St Louis, and you will be satisfied that those who built it and keep it in the front are among the "strong men." Ask your home agent for tickets over the Burlington, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul Minn.

Fisher Items.

(From the Bulletin.)

Hugh Thompson, of Crookston, was in the village Saturday.

Capt. Dunlavn, of Crookston, was visiting in town Sunday.

A rain storm, accompanied by a heavy fall of hail, struck on Thursday afternoon.

The Great Northern railway company are putting in a new side track at this place. Nearly all the spare teams in this vicinity were employed on the grading.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Sanaker went to Crookston Tuesday evening to attend the graduating exercises of the pupils of the High School at that place.

Mrs. G. H. Fargo, of Euclid, was in the village over Sunday, the guest of her daughter, Miss Daisy, who accompined her on her return home and remained a few days for a short visit.

The following teachers were elected at the recent meeting of the Board of Education, for the ensuing year: Principal, J. F. Hetler; Intermediate Dept., Miss Lillian Rathburn; Primary Dept., Miss Lizzie Zarracher.

A very interesting game of ball was played here Wednesday between the home nine and the Crookston welters. Some fine playing was exhibited on both sides and although the Fisher boys were beaten in a score of 11 to 9, still they did exceedingly well for an unorganized nine—but, hurrah for Crookston!

Hon. H. G. Stordock died at his residence at Rothsay, on Monday, of strangulated hernia. Mr. Stordock was one of the most prominent politicians in the north part of the state—always a sound Republican, and was at one time warden of the state's prison at Stillwater. A number of years ago he was engaged at a station on the cut-off between Barnesville and Breckenridge as wheat buyer and one cold, stormy night in winter, while going to his home about one-half mile from the elevator he missed his way and wandered away out into the night and the storm upon the bleak prairie. The blizzard was the worst of the season lasting, if we remember correctly, some three days, during all of which time Mr. Stordock wandered about and was finally found in a demented condition near Fergus Falls, we believe. He was sent to hospital in St. Paul where he suffered amputation of his hands and feet, yet lived to enjoy tolerably good health in the years that have since passed.

The new county jail at Grand Rapids is in danger of sliding down into the Mississippi river. The structure is not safe as it now stands, and Contractor Kelley says that it would require an expenditure of considerable money to make the building secure. It seems that a mistake was made in placing the building where it now stands.

The board of regents of the state university has received and accepted the offer of Frederick Weyerhauser, who will pay for five years the salary of a professor in Semitic languages and history. This chair will bear Weyerhauser's name, and Professor J. R. Jewett of Brown university has already been recommended for the place.

A Sauk Rapids butcher named Hartoon was administering corporal punishment of a quite severe nature to his wife when the latter's son came in and took a hand in the fray. Between the man's stepson and his own wife, Hartoon received a terrible beating. A doctor was called and found five scalp wounds, resulting from the treatment and which it was necessary to sew up.

Frank Court, a farmer living four miles from Pine City, struck a curiosity which may prove of great value. In digging a well on his farm he had reached a depth of 80 feet, when suddenly there started a rush of gas and water, nearly smothering the laborer at the bottom of the well, who barely escaped with his life. This boiling has continued for 24 hours without abatement, but rather increasing. The water is of a clay color, oily in appearance and odorous. Some of the material thrown out of the well will be sent to the state university for analysis.

Still on the Watch.

FARIBAULT, Minn., June 10.—The mad dog scare still prevails here and dogs are being killed every day. Rumors of mad dogs are constantly floating around and owners of valuable dogs are warned to keep them on their own premises. Every dog fight that takes place in the city is immediately reported to the police and, if found, the combatants are at once killed.

Monday morning dawned bright and beautiful——all the same as though the weather of the past week had not been one continuous downpour of rain, but the weather clerk, Chas. Misner assures us that we shall have "more rain" pretty quick.

Our Government weather observer A. G. Anderson, says that nearly 4 inches of rain fell during the rainstorm of Thursday. At least as much more has fallen since so it would seem as though we had received pretty near rain enough.

R. C. Burkhardt, of the Germania house had a lively time trying to prevent an inundation of the basement of that hostelry during the rain on Thursday. By means of a sort of a Dutch canal that he built he managed to get along swimmingly—as it were.

J. P. Marcum says his crops never looked better since he has farmed in Polk county. Says there is no water standing about in pools such as is usual after such heavy rains as we had last week, and all his neighbors in Lowell are rejoicing in the prospects of big crops.

A healthy appetite, with perfect digestion and assimilation, may be secured by the use of Ayer's Pills. They cleanse and strengthen the whole alimentary canal and remove all obstructions to the natural functions of either sex, without any unpleasant effects.

Conductor Casper Sands arrived from Hot Springs on Friday morning. Casper hasn't entirely recovered from the severe attack of rheumatism but hopes to be able to take his train again about the first of next month. He had an attack of chills and fever while in that delightful (?) southland country. That will be liable to stay by him awhile.

The new county of Roseau, recently created out of a portion of the territory of Kittson county, seems to be settling up rapidly this summer. Almost every week from three or four to half a dozen prairie schooners in a company pass through this city bound for Roseau county. Many land entries have been made at the U. S. land office here.

Next Sunday Rev. Herman P. Fisher will speak at the Congregational church in the morning and at the Presbyterian church in the evening, there being union services of the two congregations on that day. The morning sermon will be the second of the series to young men and will be entitled,—The 20th Century's Call to Young Men of the Northwest.

T. M. Nelson was up from Fertile on Monday visiting with his oldtime friends. Mr. Nelson has recently met with a great affliction in the loss of an eye by disease and the remaining one is not the very best that ever was. This case reminds us of the truth that if one thinks he has great trials in this life, he can always find by looking about him that there are those in the human family who have greater ones to bear.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

Good Health

And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a blood purifier, its power to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now?

Resolutions of Condolence.

Crookston Lodge No. 79, I. O. O. F., met in special session last week upon the occasion of the death of Mrs. Iver A. Krohn and passed the following

RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, the Supreme Ruler of the universe, to remove from the home of our beloved brother, Iver A. Krohn, his loving and devoted wife; and from our midst one whose every relation of life as a friend and sister was that of a true and faithful woman, therefore be it

RESOLVED; That in behalf of Crookston Lodge No. 79, Independent Order of Odd-Fellows, we tender to our afflicted brother our sincere sympathy, and admonish him to trust in Him "Who doeth all things well,"

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions of condolence be entered upon the records of this lodge and printed in the city papers.

Mine host Funk is indulging in a bit of spring millinery in these days, at the old Box hotel. Or in other words he is putting a new shingle roof on the kitchen. By the way this ancient structure is one of the oldest buildings in the city——built first in 1870 as a tent hotel, it soon acquired board sides and was then considered too tony for anything but when, later on it added a second story and a genuine shingle roof it was just "out of sight" entirely. Mr. Stuart soon made so much money that he could afford to open a saloon and then he sold to Mr. Box who came up from Wabasha in '78. Mr. Box built on a large addition, running out to Main street, clapboarded the old frame and toned the business up generally and Crookston was right in for a first-class hotel for a time. The new Commercial after a bit took the lead and now the imposing structure looming up alongside the 1st Nat'l Bank seems liable to rank first among our city hotels.

How the lights and shadows of life do blend in this busy life of ours! Last Wednesday evening a merry party of lighthearted lads and lassies had congregated at the N. P. depot to bid goodbye to the young lady teachers who were to take that train for their distant homes to spend the vacation. Amidst the chatter and buzz of happy voices a funeral cortege drove up alongside the platform and all that was mortal of one of Crookston's bright young matrons was deposited almost in the very midst of the gay and happy company, to also await the arrival of the same train that was to bear her to her long, narrow home, shut out from all the happy scenes of this bright earth——and a solemn hush fell on that gay party as with bated breath and reverent mien they watched the sad proceedings. How true it is that "in the midst of life we are in death."

S. L. Collins is re-shingling his residence.

Hans Larsen has a fine new delivery wagon.

H. O. Hansen was in from Thief River Falls this week.

Mrs. E. C. Carruth was over from Grand Forks on Tuesday,

Pa and Ma Losey came down to visit M. Losey Jr. and bride this week.

G. L. Young rejoices in the arrival of a Young man at his home since Tuesday.

Harry Ives, the heavy weight of the St. Hilaire "Dictator," was in the city this week.

Charlie Rohbecke, mine host of the Ogahmah, at Thief River Falls was a caller at the county seat this week.

W. E. Walker is recovering from a severe attack of rheumatism, so far as to be out a little.

The street sprinkler started its monotonous round on Wednesday morning for the first time this month.

Mrs. S. Currie, of Euclid started Monday evening via Great Northern Ry for a visit with friends and relatives at Glenwood.

Rev. Lee W. Squier is in St. Paul this week to arrange for the railroad rates for the assembly meeting at Detroit in July.

Miss E. Lanctot, who has been clerking in Gonyea's fruit and confectionery store will open a dressmaking establishment soon.

Attorney Wm. Watts' little boy has been quite ill with typhoid fever this week. He was reported much improved Tuesday evening.

Frank Montague went up on the Fosston line last week to dispose of the grass on state lands.

Gus Felsing was in from Maple Lake last week. He anticipates a good business at the lake this season as the new daily train gives people a chance to get there.

Agent Sharkey informs us that all arrangements have been completed for the train to Detroit on July 4th. Leave Crookston at 6 a. m.

Reports from Dr. Denniston this week are extremely encouraging. He is able to sit up and the hope is entertained that he will be able to be brought home next week.

Julius Berg, of Euclid had Michiel Ault arrested and brought before Justice McLean on Tuesday on a charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm. Continued until today.

M. M. Davis and wife of Euclid drove down on Sunday to see their daughter, Mrs. Addie Duntley who was injured by lightning in the storm of Thursday. Found her about again all right.

Charlie Heidrich left for Butte, Montana this week where he has secured a situation with the N. P. folks at $60 per month. Charlie has been handling N. P. express at this office for some time and his many friends here will rejoice in his promotion.

The University B. B. C. of North Dakota, came over on Monday to do up our boys on the diamond. They were not "in it" a little bit, being scooped way "out of sight." They can now sit down and "think it over."

Judge Ives and Ben Strawbridge ran up from Ada to spend the Sabbath in the city. As soon as the Norman county term of court is finished the judge will open court in this county. Judge Searle, of St. Cloud will try the cases brought by the special grand jury.

Robert Leick started from Fargo on Saturday night to come home and spend the Sabbath with his family. He intended to reach Winnipeg Junction in time to take the afternoon freight but his train being late he missed it and had to wait over till Sunday morning.

The Fourth of July will be duly celebrated at Maple Lake this year. Among the speakers who are booked for the occasion is S. M. Owen, of the Farm Stock and Home, of Minneapolis, who will be on deck if he is fully recovered from his recent severe illness. A good big large-sized time is assured to all who can go.

Jack Banell has purchased a residence and will hereafter live at home. He has bought the H. F. Brown residence on Ash street. Jack says as soon as those "Sherman's Bummers" located so near him he began to fear for his hen-roost, and now he thinks he has "fixed 'em plenty." Much to the surprise and joy of the average granger, wheat promises to be gilt-edged property this fall and many who sowed more land to wheat than they had planned to do, are now rejoicing because they did so. They found it impossible to procure other kinds of seed that they wanted; they had the wheat and so they sowed it, and the prospects are now that they are all right.

J. V. E. Wyatt went up to Thief River Falls, this week, in the interest of the racing meeting next week. By the way, there is going to be the biggest string of horses on the track of any event in the history of the association, and the event promises to be of great interest to the lover of fast horses. A big turnout is expected.

Jos. Luframboise was in from Gentilly last week. Mr. Lafrumboise is one of the leading farmers of that section, and who has always practiced business methods in his farming operations and you never hear that sort of people complaining much of hard times. When wheat is low in price you will find that they always have something else to depend on and when wheat brings a good price they always have the wheat to sell somehow.

An important event of the past week was the meeting of the Order of Railway Conductors at Atlanta. On Thursday they were tendered a reception and lunch on the ground of the Cotton States and International Exposition by the Directory, and Major Livingston Mims, the accomplished chairman of the entertainment committee, did the honors of the occasion. The grand ball and reception of the order, occurs this week in the Electricity building which has just been completed.

Dave Haggard: "Did you observe the fact that there is a great inquiry for farm land just now. I have been doing a little real estate business this spring and am thus in a position to appreciate that fact better perhaps than I otherwise should. You are aware, of course, that we have a certain kind of soil in some localities that is considered rather too light and sandy for wheat. I have had my eye on this kind of soil for sometime and I have concluded that it is the choicest kind of corn land. I have seen some of the finest corn raised on that kind of soil that I ever saw in my life and I believe that the time is now at hand when it will be ranked among the choicest farming lands. You know it has always produced big barley and oat crops and for potatoes can not beat.

"Children's Day" will be observed at the First Methodist Episcopal church next Sunday, June 16. Baptism of children will occur at 11 A. M. Parents desirous of having their children dedicated to God in Christian baptism are cordially invited to present them at this service. At 8 P. M. the Sunday school's annual festival of song will be held. A beautiful program has been prepared and the church will be tastefully decorated.

Children's Day was observed at the Congregational church last Sunday, the pastor preaching to the young people in the morning, and a concert entitled "The Children's Carol" being given in the evening. The flowers were appropriate both in quantity and arrangement, and the young people acquitted themselves very well, much to the satisfaction of the large audience.

H. F. Brown has been making great efforts to reorganize the Queen City cornet band and has succeeded so well that the band now meets for regular practice. The object is said to be specially for the purpose of providing music on the occasion of the Firemen's tournament, but we trust that the band, when once fully reorganized, will remain so. This city ought to be and is fully able to support one band at least.

MORTGAGE SALE.

(First Pub. May 2d, 1895.)

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a mortgage containing power of sale dated October 17th, 1889, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota, October 22d, 1889, in book 42, of mortgages, page 118, whereby Carl Johnsen and Kari Johnsen, his wife, mortgageors, mortgaged to the Middlesex Banking Company, mortgagee, the East Half of the Northwest Quarter and East Half of the Southwest Quarter of Section Thirty-one (31) in Township One hundred and forty-eight (148), of Range Forty-three (43), in said Polk County, by which default the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding at law has been instituted to recover the debt remaining secured thereby, or any part thereof, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date hereof, $331 to which amount should be added the taxes on said property paid by said mortgagee, amounting with interest, as provided in said mortgage, to $12.60, making the total amount claimed to be due at the date hereof on said mortgage $343.85.

Now notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises sold at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or his deputy, Saturday June 15th 1895, at ten o'clock, A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Crookston in said county, to pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and disbursements allowed by law.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Andrew O. Arneson, single, as mortgagor, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 1st day of June, A. D. 1886, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 15th day of June, A. D. 1888, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 36 of mortgages, at pages 218 &c.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $250.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to H. R. Halloway, by written assignment dated June 28th, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 20th day of February, A. D. 1895, at 8:45 o'clock a. m., in book 68 of mortgages, on pages 889 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $250, and the interest thereon since June 1st, A. D. 1883, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $281.20 being the sum of $250, principal, and $81.20 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The south half of the northeast quarter (S½ NE¼) of section thirty (30) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty (40), containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1885, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

Dated April 6th, A. D. 1895.

HOW CHRISTY PAID A DEBT.

The Minstrel's Generosity to a Man Who Had Befriended Him.

The head of the famous Christy minstrel troop was not George, but E. P. Christy, who originated the company some time back in the forties, and the following story of the latter is interesting:

Christy, then a young man, was a passenger on a Lake Erie steamboat commanded by Captain Folger and bound to Buffalo, where the first show was to come off. But the minstrel had not even a dollar to invest in the hire of a cellar for the performance. Captain Folger, to whom he made known his wants, generously handed him a $20 bill, telling him that he was welcome to it, and that he need not trouble himself about paying it back. On the strength of this $20 Christy began business and in a few years became successful and rich.

In the meantime misfortunes overtook Captain Folger. Losing his employment on the lakes, he resolved to try again the salt water, on which he was brought up. So he came to New York to see if he could obtain a situation as master or, failing that, as mate of a seafaring vessel.

He bethought himself of Christy, whom he supposed might possibly know some shipowner to whom he could recommend him. The minstrel received him most cordially, but told him that he had no acquaintances in that line of business.

"Why don't you buy a ship?" he asked.

"Buy a ship!" answered Folger. "Why, I haven't a dollar in the world. All I want is employment."

"See here," returned Christy, "how much would a vessel cost?"

"Any price," replied the Captain. "A pretty good one could be bought for, say, $20,000 or less."

"Well, now," exclaimed the big hearted showman, "you loaned me $20 once, and I am ashamed to say I have forgotten to pay it, but I will pay my debt now. Go and buy a $20,000 ship and send the seller to me for the money. I will own her, and you shall sail her. If she makes anything, you shall have it. If she don't, I shall stand the loss."

This is the conversation, word for word, as Captain Folger told it to me. I had just returned from an East Indian voyage in the Vandalia, a ship of about 400 tons. One day Captain Folger came on board at the dock and introduced himself. He said he would like to buy the ship and asked the price. It so happened that $20,000 was the sum I had decided upon. After a little dickering he offered me $18,000, and I accepted it.

To my astonishment, he referred me to E. P. Christy as the purchaser, and then he told me the story as I tell it. We went together to see Christy, and the result of the interview was that I gave him a bill of sale of the Vandalia, taking his note in payment, the note to be paid in installments, and every morning after one of his entertainments I called upon him and received a hatful of bills, quarters, shillings and sixpences until the indebtedness was canceled.

Captain Folger made a successful voyage to California in the Vandalia. The ship was then sold, and Christy bought a larger and more expensive ship, on board of which Captain Folger eventually died at Calcutta.—John Codman in the New York Herald.

Watch Competitions.

Very few people know that there are, in connection with the Geneva watch trade, competitions involving very large sums of money, a goodly proportion of which finds its way into England.

A certain number of watchmakers at Geneva nominate certain dealers in England who shall hold competition watches made by the former, and the names of such dealers are agreed to by the whole of the said makers. Prizes ranging from £300 downward are given to the makers whose particular watches shall keep the best time and remain in the finest condition during 12 months.

The English dealers who hold the watches during the 12 months have to keep a daily record in regard to the loss or gain of time evidenced by their charges, and they are of course in absolute honor bound to keep a correct one and not to tamper with the watches beyond winding them. No given maker's watch in the competition bears any name or distinctive mark other than peculiarities of construction by which the name of the maker can be identified by the holder. The watches are of the usual kind manufactured for trading purposes and not mere "exhibition" watches, and the holder of each prize winner receives one-half of the award.—London Standard.

Napoleon's Manners.

Napoleon was rude. His manners were coarse, and when at table he ate as fast as he could chew and swallow, shoveling the food into his mouth with his knife and using his fingers whenever they came into more convenient employment. When talking to his officers, he often, as a friendly favor, pulled their whiskers or pinched their ears. To women he was almost invariably offensive, sometimes uttering language so coarse as to bring a flush of shame to their cheeks and the tears to their eyes.

The Eyes.

The eyes are placed in cavities in the head and are protected by ridges of bone above and beneath so that a very strong blow in the face rarely does more than contuse or blacken the surrounding muscles. If the eyes were placed on the outside of the round skull, many persons would have these valuable members crushed by falls or blows.

Linsey woolsey was first made at the town of Linsey, in Suffolk, England, about 1630.

MARBLING BOOKS.

The Slow Old Process by Which the Fancy Edges Are Made.

Almost ever since the first books were made the fashion of marbleizing the edges of many of them has been in vogue. It used to be, however, that only the most expensive volumes — those bound in full calf and elaborately lettered—had their edges thus garnished, but now such finishing is left, for the most part, for ledgers, daybooks and other blank books intended for business use.

Though long before gilt edges were thought of the ornamenting of the plain white edges of books to imitate marble was popular, there has been little or no change in the process since its first introduction.

It is generally supposed that all such details have come under the stamp of the bookmaker's art until there is nothing left in them to remind one of their first and earliest days, but not with marbling. As time has gone on the popularity of this method of embellishing paper has grown less. Consequently there has been no need to devise means by which it could be more speedily done. There have been some improvements in the original methods, but most bookbinders still stick to the old way as good enough.

Instead of books whizzing through machinery one after another and taking on their marbled edges in some mysterious manner, as might be supposed, each book is taken by hand separately and the leaves dipped, tightly held together, into the liquid that marks their edges with the many colored little veins, before the covers are put on.

A trough about two inches deep is filled with gum water, on the surface of which various colored pigments have been thrown and disposed in various forms with a comb and coarse wire teeth.

The cans of liquid paint are ranged along the sides of the trough, and from them the paint is taken by dipping into them long, soft hairbrushes that are held over the water and allowed to drip. One color is put down right over the other, and the wide, coarse comb dragged through them. The books are extremely dexterously dipped into the water, and the colors adhering to their edges are set by dashing cold water over them. But one of the three edges at a time can be marbleized and set up on end to dry before the book can be handled again for another dipping. Thus the variegated edges of books and marbled papers for the sides and covers of them are produced.

The process may seem a little slow, but it answers all the needs that the bookbinder finds for it.—St. Louis Republic.

SPEED OF WILD DUCKS AND GEESE.

The Ducks Make Over Sixty-six Miles an Hour and Outfly the Geese.

Of all the migratory birds the American wild pigeon and black duck are well up toward the front as regard long and rapid flight. The speed of the pigeons can only be estimated, while that of the ducks can be established by observation. Some years ago the writer and a scientific friend measured off on the shore of a large western river a line exactly three miles long, and each took a station at opposite ends of the line. The object was to note, by means of preconcerted signals, the time a flock of wild ducks took in passing up or down the river, near the stations.

During three hours on the morning of a bright October day, observations were noted of the times of passing the stations of nine different flocks. Upon comparing watches it was found that the average time was 2 minutes and 42 seconds, thus showing the speed per hour to be 66⅔ miles, or one mile in 54 seconds. As showing how uniform was their flight, a difference was found of only five seconds between the greatest and the least intervals of time.

As numerous flocks of wild geese were daily flying in the same neighborhood observations were also taken to test their hourly speed. Two points twenty-nine and one-third miles apart were selected, both of which were connected by telegraph. We succeeded in identifying four out of seven flocks which passed over both places during the four days we were on the watch. The mean hourly speed was found to be a fraction over 54 miles. The wild goose has been long supposed to be the swiftest of all water fowl, but this experiment shows that he is far behind the wild duck.—New York World.

A Benefactor of His Species.

Frau von S——, well known for her kindness and generosity, was waited upon the other day by a well dressed gentleman, who spoke to her as follows:

"I wish to draw your attention, madam, to the sad case of a poor family. The father is weak and advanced in years, the mother is bedridden, and their five children are clamoring for bread. The poor creatures are about to be turned into the street with their wretched belongings unless somebody will undertake to pay their arrears of rent, amounting to 30 marks."

Frau von S—— at once went to fetch the money. Handing it to her visitor, she said:

"Now, sir, I should like to know who you are, as you seem to take so warm an interest in these poor people."

"I am their landlord, madam!"—Wochenblatt.

His Sensible Patient.

Dr. Abernethy was habitually rude to his patients and particularly disliked the loquacity of women in describing their ailments. One lady, knowing his peculiarities and having a wound that needed attention, went to him, pulled off her shoe and stocking without saying a word and held out her foot in silence. Abernethy looked.

"Scratch?"

"Bite."

"Cat?"

"Dog."

"Madam," he said, "you are the most sensible woman I ever met."

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Christian O. Espe and Jessie Espe, his wife, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3rd day of July, A. D. 1889, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 47 of mortgages, at page 9.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $1000.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of six per centum (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and eleven (11) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment dated April 14th, A. D. 1802, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1896, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 448 &c.

And default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $1000, and the interest thereon since May 1st, A. D. 1806, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1115.00 being the sum of $1000, principal, and $115.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described, lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southwest quarter (SW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred forty-eight (148), range forty-six (40), containing one hundred sixty (100) acres, more or less, according to government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Anson Bancroft and Ana Eliza Bancroft, his wife, of Minneapolis, Hennepin County, Minnesota, as mortgagors, to the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, as mortgagee, which said mortgage bears date the 14th day of December, A. D. 1887, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 20th day of December, A. D. 1887, at 9:00 o'clock a. m., in book 33 of mortgages on pages 410 &c.

Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of $900.00 payable five (5) years from the date of said mortgage, and interest at the rate of seven per centum (7%) per annum, payable semi-annually, according to the conditions of one (1) certain promissory note and ten (10) coupon interest notes thereto attached, all bearing even date with said mortgage.

And whereas the said the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, a corporation, duly assigned said mortgage and note to the Manhattan Trust Company, a corporation, trustee, by written assignment, dated May 12th, A. D. 1893, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of June, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 65 of mortgages, on pages 440 &c.

And whereas default has been made in the payment of said principal sum of $900, and the interest thereon since December 14th, 1802, and there is now due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of $1047.00, being the sum of $900, principal, and $147.00 interest due upon said mortgage indebtedness, and no proceedings at law or otherwise have been had or instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the following property therein described lying and being situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northwest quarter (NW¼) of section twenty-four (24) in township one hundred and forty-eight (140), range forty-seven (47), containing one hundred and sixty (100) acres more or less, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold by the sheriff of said Polk County, Minnesota, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county court house in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on Friday, the 14th day of June, A. D. 1895, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, to pay and satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby, together with the taxes (if any) the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, and the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00), attorney's fees, as in said mortgage stipulated and agreed to be paid on foreclosure thereof.

SUFFERED FROM HIS THREAT.

When He Wanted Candy and Peanuts, They Were Not to Be Had.

Just as Mr. Stuffer was starting for the railroad station with his wife and children to take a very long journey, Mrs. Stuffer exclaimed:

"See here, John. We can never go away without some fresh broken candies. No one ever went on a railroad journey who didn't have a lot along."

"And I," put in Miss Delia Stuffer, aged 7, "insist on some peanuts and cough drops."

"That's all right," said Stuffer. "We can buy all those things on the train. There are about ten men who spend their time marching through the cars selling fresh broken candies and cough drops. Whatever else happens to the traveler, he's never allowed to run short of those commodities."

But when they boarded the train the army of peanut venders, cough drop dealers and fresh broken candy merchants was nowhere to be seen. Ordinarily the traveler was pelted with these goods until he had to buy and eat some in self defense. On this occasion, however, not a single peddler was in sight.

"Outrageous," said Stuffer to the conductor. "Do you mean to say that the company has ceased to provide its patrons with fresh broken candies and recently roasted peanuts? What has become of the fellows who chucked apples and oranges on your lap and funny magazines and things? Is this concern run by railroad men or what?"

"Mr. Stuffer," replied the conductor, "the last time you traveled on this road you kicked because the trainboy biffed you in the eye with an apple which he wished to dispose of and made your nose bleed with a packet of cough drops which he shied at you with a little too much force. You said you'd sue the company for damages for assault and battery. The company got scared at your threats and had the boys taken off."

The traveler burst out into a torrent of invective. "Blame the bloated corporations!" he yelled. "That's the sort of a ballad and waltz that we shall get from them until the day comes when the government will be in complete control of all the transportation interests."

Then he went back to Mrs. Stuffer in the rear of the car and began some heated remarks about a millennium or something which it was understood he had sighted on the starboard offing.—New York Herald.

Why General Butler Was Relieved.

Colonel Woodworth told some good stories about General Butler. He said that Butler himself told him as late as 1884 that he never knew the real reason why he was deprived of his military command by General Grant. It was only a few years ago that Woodworth got the facts from Grant's brother-in-law, Major Dent, who was the staff officer sent with the order for Butler's relief. He said that while no reason was openly given at the time, Butler was actually displaced because he was not a graduate of West Point. This would not appear on the face of it to be a sufficient cause, but Grant explained it to Dent one day in the course of a confidential interview.

"If," said he, "I were to send Butler a specific order to do something with his army, he might obey and he might not. He was too able and original not to reason himself into the belief that I might have given different instructions if I knew all that he knew of the local situation. He therefore almost always had a plan of his own that he thought was better than mine or anybody else's, so that I could never tell just what he would do or where he would be at a given time. Of course that was fatal to any systematic campaign, and I had to replace him with a West Pointer, whose first lesson in war is the necessity of prompt obedience to the commanding general. Butler was too brilliant to be reliable."—Boston Advertiser.

Bowie's Great Knife.

The bowie knife obtains its name from Rezin P. Bowie, who lived in Maryland in the early part of this century. He had a brother who had many enemies, and he, being turbulent and fond of hand to hand fights, stood in need of good weapons. Rezin undertook to furnish him with a weapon somewhat superior to any that could be found in those parts at that period. A knife was made out of a blacksmith's file, and a blade was had nine inches long, to which was fastened a handle of six inches. The knife was simple, strong in build and had an admirable temper. Bowie used it in 19 sanguinary contests, and then, happening in Philadelphia, he met with a cutler who fashioned it over for him. Bowie afterward settled on the Mississippi, and entertained the celebrated actor Edwin Forrest, to whom he gave the original knife. Forrest placed the knife in his collection, where he retained it until his death.—Hardware.

Haphazard Preaching.

A clergyman in Cushing, Me., is reported to have a unique way of securing texts. He passed around slips of paper, upon which the people wrote various texts that they would like to hear preached from. He then passed around a hat and gathered up the slips and asked a young lady present to choose one without looking. She drew forth the text, "What think ye?" upon which he preached, according to report, a very excellent sermon. This method is certainly unique, but we admit an old fashioned preference for a text selected early in the week and several days of careful thought and study devoted to the discourse preached upon it.—Augusta (Ga.) My Wife is Nervous

Says many a man and too often he is inclined to blame the poor, tired woman who cannot eat or sleep, whose whole life is filled with misery because her blood has become impoverished and her nervous system exhausted. She needs a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles will enrich and vitalize her blood, tone and strengthen her digestive organs, give her a good appetite, enable her to sleep soundly, banish her nervousness and bring back her smiles. Mr. J. W. Roberson, of Greenfield, Tenn., says: "My wife began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla about three months ago and she is now taking her third bottle. She has been in poor health for fifteen years. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her more good than any other medicine she has ever taken. Her appetite is better, she looks better and there has been improvement in every way."

A MARITIME FREAK.

NARROW ESCAPES FROM WATERSPOUTS IN MEXICO.

A Traveler Relates Two Experiences He Had With These Twisting Terrors—A Congregation of Them, Each of Which Was Nearly 1,000 Feet In Height.

The narrowest escape I ever had was from a congregation of waterspouts. I was making a trip to some of the small islands in the gulf of Mexico, about 50 miles from Cuba, a spot famous for its waterspouts, and in the summer months there were few days that one or more were not seen. Generally a long, attenuated black cloud would appear, from which would drop a pendulous cloud. Lower it would descend, resembling the lower portion of a balloon, and when about half way to the water a corresponding figure would be seen rising to meet it. Finally the two would join, and the column, from 400 to 1,000 feet high, more or less, would move away before the wind, bending before it like a gigantic bow—a thing of terror, a frightful object of the sea.

I had been visiting an island about ten miles from our camp and was in a heavy sailboat—too heavy to manipulate by oars readily. When half way home, on the edge of the channel, the wind died completely away, and I noticed all about us a number of strange black clouds.

Watching them closely and commenting upon them to my man, I suddenly saw the ominous dropping of a pointed index finger not a sixteenth of a mile away. As I mentioned it my companion pointed behind me to another, and in less than five minutes five of these dread objects dropped from the clouds about us.

There was not a breath of air, and there was an ominous silence. Even the ever present gulls seemed to have deserted the place. We got out the oars and endeavored to pull, but the boat was too heavy, and we were compelled to await developments.

The cloud tips slowly dropped, and all about us mysterious columns rose up to meet them, until in a few minutes we were surrounded by these huge pillars, so that in one direction the heavens appeared to be supported upon these watery columns. A more remarkable sight cannot be imagined, and when they began to move we gave ourselves up for lost, as two appeared to be bearing down upon us.

As good luck would have it, they seemed to bring a breeze, and we were able to get under way, and, fortunately, escaped. The two giants came careering down upon us—a spectacle to demoralize the stoutest hearted. One passed not 200 feet away, rushing on with a noise like that of a steam engine. I could distinctly see the terrific twisting and whirling motion of the water, and for a large area about it there was what appeared to be a heavy rain.

The spouts began to move as soon as they were complete, and very soon assumed the bend or bow shape that characterizes them, and went sailing away. These giants were so tall that I could not venture to estimate their height. My companion said a mile high, and they certainly looked it; but they were under 1,000 feet.

My nearest approach to a waterspout occurred later, and dissipated some of the theories I had concerning them. One was that a spout was broken when touched or interfered with in any way, yet I saw this water giant cross an island.

I was lying in the sands near our camp one day when a lofty spout came into view from the south. It was heading directly for us, but we felt perfectly safe, as there was a large reef and long canal key between us. On came the column, passing the reef in safety, a grand spectacle, and every one in the island was seen watching it as it moved rapidly up the lagoon, its upper portions apparently lost in the clouds. If it had continued it would have passed between the two islands, and so reached the open sea, but for some reason its course was changed, and in a few moments it struck the island at an angle. We fully expected to see the whole mass drop, but it kept plowing up the sand, and soon struck a good sized schooner that had been hauled on the beach, whirling it about end for end like a feather. Then, to our consternation, the spout headed for our island, and with a great bow or curve rushed on.

The distance from island to island was a good rifleshot, and there was not much time to debate, as the spout was now half way across. Seeing that it was veering off and would probably not reach us, I ran out on to a sea wall and watched it. It gradually drifted to the south, and in a few moments struck our shoal with a roar like that of a locomotive.

As I looked up the top seemed a great canopy of water lost in the black clouds, down from which poured great drops which soon drenched me through. The center of the great curve I could not see at all for some singular reason, while the lower and or portion, now but 100 yards away, was rushing by me, a magnificent column of water, boiling and hissing like some living thing. I literally raced with it for the length of the wall, 600 or 800 feet, and had all I could do to keep pace with it.

The water of the shoal was but a few feet deep, and I found later that it cut a deep trench in it as it went along, the coral sand and mud looking as though a dredger had been at work. How long a spout can travel over the land I do not know, but not long. The bay over which this one passed was not over 300 feet at that place. The spout passed us, beating us in the race, and soon disappeared among the dark clouds on the horizon. As common as were these phenomena in this region, I never heard of a casualty, though from the above it will be seen that narrow escapes were not rare.—Cor. San Francisco Call.

INDIANS AND THE RAINBOW.

The Zunis Think the Heavenly Phenomenon Embodies the Form of a Demon.

Captain Trevitt W. Okey of Los Angeles, Cal., for many years stationed in Arizona and New Mexico with the regular army, told about the myths and superstitions of the Zuni Indians to a group of friends at a Broadway hotel one evening.

"In the Zuni mind," said he, "the rainbow has ever been a deified animal, having the attributes of a human being and also the body and some of the functions of a measuring worm. Obviously the striped back and arched attitude of the measuring worm, its sudden appearance and disappearance among the leaves of the plants which it inhabits, are the analogies upon which this personification is based. As the measuring worm consumes the herbage of the plants and causes them to dry up, so the rainbow, which appears only after the rain, is supposed by the simple minded Indian to cause a cessation of rain, and consequently to be the originator of droughts, under the influence of which plants wither away, as they do under the ravages of the measuring worms.

"It will be seen that the visible phenomenon called the rainbow gets by analogy the personality of the measuring worm, while from the worm in turn the rainbow gets its function as a god. Of this the cessation of the rain on the appearance of the rainbow is adduced as proof. The fading of the flowers is attributed to the rainbow, which, consuming their imperceptible existences, thus derives his brilliant coloring, just as it is believed that the measuring worm gets his green, yellow and red stripes from the leaves and flowers which it devours.

"The influence of this union upon the Zuni mind is to place the rainbow among the malignant gods. It is frequently painted on war shields and made a demon to be propitiated, yet shunned. When a rainbow appears in the sky, the Zuni Indians and those of many other tribes turn their backs upon the beautiful sight and covertly imprecate the unfriendly spirit."—New York World.

Indignant.

There used to be an old porter at a certain Irish railway station who was more remarkable for independence of character than attention to his duties.

On one occasion two of the directors were traveling over the line and noticed that the name of this station was not called, the neglect being the more serious as it was a junction. This was made the subject of complaint, and old Charley, who was the delinquent, was promptly brought to book and reprimanded.

He was very wroth that any one should find fault with him and thirsted for revenge. So, keeping a lookout until he saw the directors on their return journey, he stood opposite their carriage and shouted in a stentorian voice:

"Cookstown Junction! Change here for Randalstown, Castledawson, Magherafelt, Moneymore and all stations on the Cookstown line, and don't say, ye blaggards, ye weren't towld!"—London Answers.

The Best Signal Light System.

The best night signal lights are those invented by Lieutenant Very of our navy, and named after him Very's signals. The consist of a white, a red and a green star, each fired into the air from a pistol, so that by firing one, two or three of them in quick succession and in different orders, with a pause between the groups, different letters or signal numbers can be made until a sentence is complete. They can be easily read from vessels 12 miles away.—St. Nicholas.

"Old Kentucky Home."

"Old Kentucky Home" is the twentieth song in Foster's book of plantation melodies, though when and under what circumstances it was composed cannot be exactly stated. One writer on musical curios says that it was suggested by an allusion that Foster heard a slave make to his former home in the Blue Grass State.

The "Celestial Empire," referring to the domain of China, has a significance in the Chinese legend that the early rulers of that country were all deities.

ANOTHER GOLD FIND.

Richest Discovery Yet Made in the Rainy Lake Region.

DULUTH, June 8.—The Herald's Rat Portage correspondent says: One of the richest gold discoveries that has been made in this district is situated close to Ash Rapids, on the Lake of the Woods, and is within 24 miles of Rat Portage. The vein is exposed by nature 5 feet wide and 100 feet long and the vein cuts at right angles through the granite rocks. It has every appearance of being a true fissure vein. One assay was made of a piece of surface rock and the result of the assay turned out $1,235 gold and $125 silver to the ton.

Want the Constitution Changed.

DENVER, June 11.—The synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church of North America has adopted resolutions in favor of changing the constitution of the United States by inserting a clear and explicit acknowledgment of Almighty God as the source of all power, of Jesus Christ as the prince of kings of the earth, and the Bible as the supreme ruler in all affairs.

EDITORS ORGANIZE.

Northwestern Publishers' Association to Be Incorporated.

ST. PAUL, June 8.—An adjourned meeting of the Minnesota Editors' and Publishers' association was held at the Commercial club, with about 45 members in attendance, and the matter of business organization was further canvassed and brought to a head. The matter was broached at the winter meeting on the basis of a detailed report, but, owing to the press of other business, nothing definite was accomplished, and the question went over. It has now been finally disposed of and the Northwestern Publishers' association, with a capital approximating $20,000, a full list of strong stockholders, and a well defined plan to secure state and foreign advertising at rates profitable to the publishers of Minnesota papers will soon be a corporate fact.

HILL'S THREAT GOES.

Minneapolis Must Look Out for Her Milling Trade.

DULUTH, June 10.—Samuel Hill, who came in with the steamer Northwest, was seen soon after his arrival and pronounced correct the story sent out from here some time ago to the effect that he had appeared before the Minneapolis millers recently and told them that unless the Eastern Minnesota road, of which he is president, was given its share of the flour carrying business the Great Northern company would see to it that Duluth was made the great flour center of the Northwest. "Neither James Hill nor myself have denied the story," said Mr. Hill. "The conference was held, and the Minneapolis millers will find that we meant precisely what we said."

NOT A CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

Debs Will Do What He Can in His Own Way to Help the American People.

CLEVELAND, June 10.—An officer of the local A. R. U. organization has received a letter from Eugene V. Debs, who among other things says:

"I cannot be considered a candidate for the presidency. I would not permit myself to harbor such an aspiration an instant. I have little enough liberty as it is, and what little there is I do not wish to sacrifice on the political altar. Not that I would fear to face the whirlwind of denunciation which such an ambition would arouse, but I wish to remain untrammelled and do what little I can in my own way to free the American people.

Swindling Western Women.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Formal notice has been received from Postmaster Dayton of New York that a swindler calling himself P. Turner is defrauding dressmakers and milliners in Wisconsin, Minnesota and elsewhere in the West, by obtaining payment in advance, after showing samples, for goods to be shipped by H. Adams & Co., Union Square, New York city, whose agent he professes to be. There is no such firm in New York.

The Relay Race Finished.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The great relay bicycle race of the red and the blue between Chicago and this city was finished at 1:56 o'clock Saturday morning. The actual time of the race was 65 hrs., 53 min. The last relay should have reached the finishing point at Sixtieth street and the Western boulevard at 8 o'clock. Arriving when they did they broke all American records for a relay race.

CAPTAIN TO BLAME.

Loss of the Steamer Colima Due to Her Commander's Obstinacy.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The Call, in its story of the wreck of the Colima as told by the survivors of the wrecked vessel, says: The ship was overloaded, badly loaded, top heavy loaded—all agree to it. When the gale struck her, she weathered it badly. Then she careened. There was a list to starboard and she did not right again. Men called out to the captain to cut away the deck loading of heavy spars. The captain was obdurate. He knew his business, or fancied he did, and would brook no suggestions from what he called the terrified and panic stricken passengers. The ship listed more and more. Then she lost her steering power. The captain rang for more steam and would not cut loose the deck load. The panic on board grew worse, the fear of death more intense. Then the captain gave orders for the crew to keep the passengers within bounds. Whether those orders went so far as to

from the passengers and to permit those who sought to do so to come on deck where they might have had a chance of battling with the waves is not known at this time. Steerage and cabin passengers say they sought to obtain life preservers and were forcibly restrained from doing so. Down in the steerage, a guard was posted at the companionway door and those who escaped to the deck in time to cast themselves into the sea before the vessel went down, did so only by main force, by kicking and fighting their way past the guard.

Those who were saved are some of those who were wiser than the captain, who could see their peril more clearly and had wit enough to throw themselves into the sea before the Colima gave her last list to starboard. As she did this, the captain's whistle sounded to cut loose the deckload of spars.

Mistake of a Word.

FARGO, N. D., June 10.—Congressman Johnson telegraphs: "I am not for the free coinage of silver and so telegraphed the New York World. I have been misquoted by the omission of 'not.'"

WHITNEY SAYS NO.

The Ex-Secretary of the Navy Not a Candidate for President.

BOSTON, June 11.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy Whitney was interviewed at the home of his mother in Brookline Sunday. He said:

"I am not, and will not be a presidential candidate. If the silver men should carry the next Democratic convention it would split the party right in two. The Democrats must stand for sound money. There are a good many sound money men in the West and South, and the Memphis convention, I think, has helped the cause along. Carlisle's speech at the convention was an excellent one and deserves to be widely read. It has undoubtedly had an influence in the South.

"I think the people will eventually treat this question the same as they did the greenback question. They want sound money now, just as much as they did then."

ROBERT T. LINCOLN.

His Chances of Receiving the Republican Nomination Discussed.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Hon. Thomas L. James, ex-postmaster general, said, discussing the political situation:

"I look upon Robert Lincoln as the likeliest dark horse in the race for the Republican nomination. He is especially strong in the South, but that statement does not by any means sum up all his possibilities before a convention. Illinois Republicans would unite on him; Georgia, Arizona, Kentucky and Tennessee will be with him, but in all the Southern states there live warm and influential friends of the Illinois man—in the Carolinas, in Virginia, in Arkansas and Mississippi. I believe he will get half of the entire Southern delegation, and when the break comes on the favorites, Lincoln and Allison will get the benefit of it."

Des Moines Saloons Closed.

DES MOINES, June 11.—Every saloon in the city was closed during the day by order of Judge Spurrier of the district court, holding that the so-called consent statement lacked sufficient signatures to entitle the saloons to the bar feature of the mulct law. An appeal will be taken immediately.

TAYLOR IS BACK.

THE DEFAULTING TREASURER RETURNS TO SOUTH DAKOTA.

Has Little to Say and Seems Anxious to Avoid Publicity—Officials Deny Rumors of a Compromise and Declare That the State Will Not Lose a Cent.

MITCHELL, S. D., June 18.—The rumor that Taylor would be on the afternoon train from the East caused quite a crowd of curious spectators to gather at the depot upon the arrival of the train. Taylor, looking rather tired and nervous, accompanied by Berry Sullivan, alighted and shook hands with several Dakota acquaintances. He stated he had not been in Brazil, but in a Northern city, probably Monterey, and that the detectives had not been on his trail to his knowledge. When asked how it seemed to be back in Dakota, he replied: "Rather dry, from what I've seen, but I'm glad I'm back." He appears very anxious to avoid publicity.

WILL LOSE NOTHING.

South Dakota Officials Deny Rumors of a Compromise With Taylor.

DEADWOOD, S. D., June 18.—State Treasurer Phillips has received advices that W. W. Taylor, ex-treasurer of South Dakota, would be surrendered to the authorities at Pierre inside of 24 hours. In an interview with Governor Sheldon, who is now in Deadwood, and Treasurer Phillips, the Associated Press reporter was informed by both gentlemen that the stories so freely printed in Eastern papers the past few days that a compromise had been effected with the defaulter and his bondsmen, which practically allows Taylor to go free and to retain the greater part of his stealings, is absolutely without foundation. Taylor will be compelled to make restitution in full and no action on his part or the part of his bondsmen to this end will mitigate the degree of his crime or lessen his punishment. The governor and Treasurer Phillips are both authority for the statement that the state will not lose a cent; that property of sufficient value to more than cover Taylor's defalcation has been turned over to the state by Taylor and his bondsmen, and that notwithstanding this, the case will be pushed with as much severity as though it had been undertaken against a less prominent criminal.

LEFT FOR GRAY GABLES.

President Cleveland and Secretary Thurber Off for the Summer.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—President Cleveland, accompanied by Private Secretary Henry G. Thurber, left Washington during the morning for Gray Gables, on Buzzard's bay. The president and Mr. Thurber occupied a private car which was attached to the regular Pennsylvania train leaving Washington at 7:05 a. m. They arrived at Jersey City about 11.30, and going on board Mr. Benedict's steam yacht Oneida, which had been in waiting there for several days, proceeded at once to Gray Gables. Mrs. Cleveland has preceded the president about a week, and they are not expected to return to Washington before next fall. While executive business will be transacted by the president at his summer home, it has been arranged that the announcement of all action shall be made at the White House, where Assistant Private Secretary Pruden will remain in charge. Mr. Thurber will reside with his family at Marion, across the bay from Gray Gables.

Sioux City Indian Scare.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 17.—Sioux City is enjoying a genuine Indian outbreak. A few days ago a band of 100 Winnebagoes came over from the Nebraska reservation to sell gooseberries. They pitched their tents in the eastern part of the city and promptly proceeded to load up on whisky and hard cider. The result was a tremendous drunk, and ever since it has been unsafe for anyone to approach their headquarters. The police have ordered the redskins to leave, but are unwilling, owing to their numbers, to use force.

No One Was Hurt.

CHICAGO, June 18.—The anticipated attack on the Shufeldt distillery, one of the plants of the whisky trust, occurred at 1 a. m., when an armed party of a dozen men attempted to take possession of the distillery. The attacking party was met by the deputy marshals who had been placed on guard by Receiver McNulta of the trust, and, after a harmless exchange of 25 or 30 shots, the men retreated.

Verdict for the Bishop.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., June 18.—In the libel suit of the ex-priest, J. G. Perault, against Bishop Shanley, an action for damages to the amount of $25,000, alleged to have resulted from the letter which the bishop sent to Perault while he was priest at Larimore, Judge Templeton instructed the jury to find for the defendant, the bishop.

St. Louis Heiress Missing.

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—May Belle Chrichfield, the 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary J. Chrichfield of this city, and heiress to considerable property, has been missing from her home since Wednesday afternoon. Fears are entertained that she is being held for ransom, or to secure some of her property.

THE ALLISON BOOM.

It Will Be Let Loose This Week at the Cleveland Convention.

MASON CITY, Ia., June 18.—The candidacy of William B. Allison for president of the United States will be formally launched at the national convention of the Republican league which will assemble at Cleveland next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. In previous years Allison's candidacy has been regarded, even at home, as more of an expression of respect from an admiring constituency rather than a real desire to see him elevated to this exalted position. This year the Republicans of the state are up and at it, and will not be satisfied with anything short of seeing him placed at the head of the ticket. Some of the prominent Republican leaders have even gone so far as to name for his running mate Robert T. Lincoln.

The best political workers the state affords will be present at the Cleveland convention devoted to the political fortunes of Allison. Heading the delegation is J. S. Clarkson, who is acknowledged as one of the shrewdest and most sagacious politicians in the country.

Will Do Good Work.

Clarkson is understood to have Allison's canvass in hand and he will direct the movements of the Iowa delegation at Cleveland, and give it the benefit of his extensive experience in national politics. Without doubt Iowa will be as well represented at the league as any other state and her distinguished citizen A. B. Cummins of Des Moines, will deliver the principal address at the great mass meeting to be held on Wednesday evening. The famous Iowa State band of 40 pieces, under the direction of Professor Phinney, will accompany the delegation. Headquarters have been engaged at the Hollenden hotel which is also national headquarters.

TO USE THE BOYCOTT.

Seattle Business Men Attempting to Bring Railroads to Time.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 15.—The Seattle Shippers' association, comprising 75 per cent of the business men who have dealings with railroads, decided unanimously to route no more freight by the Northern Pacific but to route it all over the Great Northern until the Northern Pacific stops its transpacific steamers here to land and receive freight. If the Great Northern does not within a reasonable time provide a depot and terminal facilities in accordance with President Hill's promise, the boycott is to be applied to the Great Northern and all business is to be given to the Canadian [illegible]. At present the Northern [illegible] 60 per cent, the Great Northern [illegible] per cent [illegible] Canadian [illegible] per cent.

HARD LINES FOR MERRITT.

American Steel Barge [illegible] Hand in the Litigation.

CLEVELAND, June [illegible].—The American Steel Barge company [illegible] in the litigation between [illegible] Merritt and John D. Rockefeller. The company obtained in this city a writ of garnishment preventing Mr. Rockefeller from paying to Merritt $940,000, the amount of the judgment obtained against Mr. Rockefeller in Minnesota Thursday. The barge company claims to hold notes of Merritt's for more than the amount of the judgment. Mr. Rockefeller is heavily interested in the barge company. He is stopping at Forest Hill, his summer home near the city.

LAMONT COMING WEST.

The Secretary and Party Start on an Extended Trip.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Secretary Lamont left Washington during the afternoon on an extended tour of the Northwest. With him was Mrs. Lamont, her three children and two servants, Mrs. Bryant and Miss Bryant of New York, Quartermaster General Batchelder and Major George B. Davis, military secretary to Secretary Lamont. The party was accommodated in two special Pullman cars, furnished with every appliance to make the trip comfortable for several weeks.

Powers Grant Further Time.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 17.—Upon the appointment of Said Pasha as grand vizier, the powers have granted the porte's request for further time to consider the Armenian scheme of reform. It is stated that Turkey has given a reply, acceding to the principle of European control, but asking that the period of control be limited and suggesting a three years' limit.

WILL CHANGE THE LINES.

"A long felt want" seems about to be realized by a change in the Crookston and St. Cloud land district whereby all of the new territory comprised in the Reservation will be transferred from the latter to the former. Even from the source from which we might reasonably expect opposition, St. Cloud has nothing but words of encouragement for the plan, and there is no doubt that the department will take favorable action in the matter at an early day. This will prove a matter of great convenience to the settler upon the Red Lake Reservation and will also be a good thing city

GREENWAY TALKS

Manitoba's Premier Opens the Debate on the Separate Schools Order.

NO DESIRE TO RUSH MATTERS

Opposition Claims the Government Has to Pursue Its Policy.

WINNIPEG, June 19.—In the legislature during the afternoon the motion dealing with the separate schools remedial order, as given out in the house on Thursday, was the first matter taken up. Premier Greenway, in moving the adoption of the resolution which was to be Manitoba's answer to the Dominion government regarding separate schools, spoke for three-quarters of an hour, and was listened to with close attention by members and also by a large audience in the galleries. Premier Greenway said he merely proposed to introduce the matter to the legislature, leaving the full discussion of the subject to members who might follow him. There had been no desire on the part of the Manitoba government so far as he knew, or on the part of their followers, to run hurriedly into the discussion of the important subject. Some of the separate school advocates of the government pursuing a course that governments sometimes pursued in such cases, that was to take advantage of the very strong feeling that existed in the province when that remedial order from Ottawa was made public and ask the views of the people on the subject. But the government did not adopt such a course, as he was of the opinion that such a question as this could be discussed outside of a political campaign. Premier Greenway's speech was heartily applauded at the conclusion.

Had Been Very Much Afraid

Mr. Armstrong, who represents a French Catholic constituency in the legislature, was the first member of the opposition to reply. His attack on the government was a very mild one, chiefly confined to the point that it was with the Greenway government; not that they were in favor of national schools, but that it was their only salvation at present to pursue that policy.

Attorney General Sifton arose at 4:30 to second the premier's motion. His address was continued until late in the evening. The constitutional side of the question was dealt with in all its phases, the attorney general taking the position that the latest judgment of the imperial privy council was not mandatory on the Dominion government; it did not command them to act or not to act. Manitoba, he asserted, should not comply with the terms of the remedial order and maintain an efficient school system such as a young, growing province demanded.

A SECOND DECREE.

The Pope Still Insists That Catholics Must Remain Out of the K. of P.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—A second decree has been received from Rome concerning the obligation of Catholics to remain out of the Knights of Pythias organization. It states that there appears to be no further reason why the decree of last December should not be made public in all dioceses and all archbishops and bishops are accordingly directed to promulgate the decree without further delay. When the decree was first issued the head of each diocese was given two months within which to publish it or else to make known to Rome in writing what special circumstances existed why publication should be deferred. Most of the heads of dioceses have since published the decree, but as unofficial information reached Rome that some bishops had not yet acted this second decree was issued.

THE NEW SOO CANAL.

Public Accounts Committee Unearths Peculiar Methods in Its Construction.

NEW YORK, June 19.—A dispatch to The Evening Post from Montreal says: In the investigation before the public accounts committee at Ottawa concerning the Sault Ste. Marie contracts the following facts have been elicited: Four tenders were received for power pipes. Ryan got the contract at $55,000, notwithstanding that the Central Bridge company tendered for $42,000. The lowest tender for lock gates was the Hamilton Bridge company at $64,000, but the government insisted on their unwatering the lock, and as the company could not do this the contract went to Ryan at $87,000, and he received $70,000 additional for the unwatering, which the government wanted the bridge company to do for nothing.

A PACKING HOUSE.

A very important meeting was held in this city last week between a large number of the live, progressive farmers of the county and the business men of our city, and the subject under consideration was the establishment of a packing house in Crookston. After a few hours spent in discussing plans a committee was appointed to formulate plans and the meeting was adjourned until Friday, June 21st, when, it is hoped, some plan will be evolved to bring about this much to be desired plan. A packing house located here would furnish a market for all the pork that could be raised in this vicinity, and hence would be of most importance to the farmers who, as matters are now, have to depend upon a very precarious market for pork. The prospects are good for the establishment of such an institution here.

NEW SILVER LEAGUE

DEMOCRATIC FREE COINAGE MEN FORM AN ORGANIZATION.

Its Object Is to Control the Utterances of the Next National Convention on the Currency Question—Senators Harris, Jones and Turpie at Its Head.

MEMPHIS, June 15.—The movement inaugurated by prominent Democrats for the formation of a silver organization within the lines of the Democratic party mentioned in these dispatches, is believed to be a step of the greatest importance in the campaign on the currency question. There were present at the meeting the Democratic senators and others who were here attending the silver convention. Senators Harris, Jones and Turpie were named as a committee to select members of a national executive committee consisting of one man from each state. Senator Harris said:

"The league will be a Democratic organization of the silver Democrats in the country for the purpose of controlling the utterance of the next national Democratic convention upon the financial question. I have no doubt that the are in favor of free coinage, but unless they organize it will be impossible for them to make the next platform. The committee will at once put itself in communication with the leading bimetallists in every state of the Union and will ask and doubtless receive their assistance in perfecting an active and vigilant organization of the silver people in every magisterial district, county and state."

"You clearly understand," put in Senator Jones, "that this movement is strictly in the lines of the Democratic party and we want the country to understand that. The organization of silver advocates in an independent body without partisan character cannot have the effect of giving organized strength to silver Democrats in a sense that will enable them to control the sending of delegates to the various conventions.

SILVER MEN ADJOURN.

The Usual Free Coinage Resolutions Adopted.

MEMPHIS, June 14.—The silver convention adjourned after adopting the usual free coinage resolutions. The most interesting thing about the convention was the attempt of the silver party men, under the leadership of Sibley of Pennsylvania, Tillman of South Carolina, Butler of North Carolina, Stewart of Nevada and Adams of Colorado, to have the convention declare for a free silver party. The conservative element prevailed in the committee on resolutions, and the declarations of that body which were adopted by the convention did not go beyond a strong presentation of the free silver views of the gathering. But the convention adjourns with a schism in it. One faction advocates the Sibley "idea," and the capture of the Democratic convention and, failing in that, the independent political action, while others were sighting the issue strictly within party lines.

FILIBUSTERERS LAND.

The American Party Arrive Safely in Cuba.

NEW YORK, June 15.—A special to The Herald from Havana, Cuba, says: Information has just reached here to the effect that the Cuban filibustering expedition on the tug George W. Childs, under the command of General Carlos Roloff and General Sarafin Sanchez, which slipped away from the Florida coast last Thursday, has landed the party with all their arms at a point near Aguadores, in the province of Santiago de Cuba.

FIGHTING IN FORMOSA.

Japanese Attack the Fortresses of the Black Flags.

LONDON, June 18.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says that fighting is in progress at Taiwan, Island of Formosa, where 10,000 black flags under General Lue Yung are assembled. The Japanese are now attacking the forts at that place, and the British warship Spartan is removing the foreigners from the town.

Rockefeller's Garnishee.

DULUTH, June 18.—The Merritts' attorneys claim that the attempt of the American Steel Barge company to garnishee at Cleveland Alfred Merritt's verdict for $940,000 against John D. Rockefeller, as announced there, will not hold. The Merritts owe the barge company nothing. On the other hand, the barge company owe Leonidas and Alfred Merritt over $160,000.

Must Stand Trial.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 18.—O. W. Winthrop, who was held to answer for the murder of Mrs. Jennie Matthews, must stand trial. Judge Murphy has dismissed the writ of habeas corpus to secure his release on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to hold the defendant. Winthrop was remanded to the custody of the sheriff.

Good News for Employes.

CLEVELAND, June 18.—The National Malleable Casting company has notified their 900 employes that a general increase of 10 per cent would take effect immediately. At the big works of the Eberhard Manufacturing company notice was also posted notifying their 1,000 employes of 10 per cent increase

THE DUNKARDS.

On Wednesday evening, of last week a coach containing a number of representative men of the sect known as Dunkards, came in on the evening train from Grand Forks and were cut out and left in the yard here until Thursday morning, when it went up on the St. Vincent branch. These people are here to select a location in northern Minnesota for a colony of Dunkards from Pennsylvania and if the representatives are suited, the colony will soon come out and locate. There is a colony or so already located in North Dakota and they make a very desirable class of settlers, thrifty, honest, sober and industrious, they soon become independent citizens.

A Good Selection.

The Lightning Claims Another Victim.

On Saturday last Sigvert Basgard was working in his father's garden in the town of Esther, at the time the storm came up and as he did not come in when the rain began to fall his father went out to see why and found the dead body of his son lying upon the ground. He was the son of O. S. Basgard, about 25 years old and a single man. The funeral took place on Monday.

ECONOMY

"Economy" is a word often in people's mouths, especially in so-called hard times. Commonly it is used as meaning an abrupt cutting down of expenses, which is not in accordance with the correct meaning of the word. The original definition is "the management of household or domestic affairs," and so we may speak of an action being good or bad "economy." The fifth definition in importance is, "saying and sparing in expense," and in applying this to practice, people give it the meaning which ought rather to belong to "stingy," "penurious," or "parsimonious." Though used in common talk as interchangeable, there is a difference. Parsimonious is very sparing in expenditure; penurious is to spend as though it were the last dollar; stingy is to be meanly avaricious, and applies rather to means spent for others than ourselves. True economy is such management of our means, such spending of our moneys, as shall procure for us the greatest value in exchange therefor. True economy is often shown in purchasing a good article at a fair price, rather than an inferior one at a cheap rate. It is economy to buy your railroad ticket via the "Burlington," because you get the best in service, safety, speed and comfort at the same price you would pay for far inferior accomodations. Your home ticket agent will assist you to thus act economically when you travel, or you can address for full particulars (stating where you are going) W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Drainage.

A few feeble kicks were made last winter by a tenderfoot against the drainage system when our bill was before the legislature, and the idea that the Red River Valley needed a system of drainage was ridiculed and and laughed to scorn. Of course, in the dead of winter, or in a season of excessive drouth, a drainage system would be superfluous, but the experience of the past ten days has amply demonstrated the practical utility of such a system. Hundreds of acres of grain could have been saved that were drowned out or greatly damaged, and this means hundreds of dollars to the county. A few such object lessons should prove effective, but the less of them we are obliged to have before we learn a little horse sense, the better.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE MODERN SAFE.

AN UP TO DATE FIREPROOF AND BURGLAR PROOF DEPOSITORY.

Skillful Workmanship Displayed In Its Manufacture—Locks With Simple Mechanism That Are Extremely Hard to Open If You Don't Know How.

The latest burglar proof safes and vaults are magnificent specimens of skillful workmanship. Although the doors often weigh tons, they swing as easily on their hinges as a window shutter. After the first great door is thrown back and displays its glittering array of bright locks, its glass incased clocks and its smooth steel bolts there is another door almost as strong, with bolts and locks of its own. When this is open it reveals three other doors. The upper two are of thin steel and have no locks. Only papers and books are to be kept in the little pockets or pigeonholes which they inclose.

Under them and shutting in the cash drawer there is the third door with its own lock and bolts. In this safe the size of the cash repository bears about the same relation to the size of the whole safe as a pumpkin seed does to the pumpkin. And it is not only burglar proof but fireproof—warranted, in fact, to stand for at least 75 hours the greatest amount of heat that any burning building could give it.

The making of a safe of this kind is a complicated and expensive operation. All the steel used comes in the form of plates from the works. After having the necessary screw holes bored in them they are heated to a high temperature and then tempered by suddenly immersing them in water. When they come out they are often a little twisted and warped, and have to be rolled cold and sometimes polished clean by a swiftly moving emery wheel. The noise of this operation is ear splitting and so rasping that a man with ordinary nerves can hardly endure it. When the plate is perfectly level it is transferred to another machine, where it is clamped tight, and an emery wheel shaves off the edges.

The plates are now put together, first one of hard steel, then one of wrought iron or soft steel, and so on until the necessary thickness is obtained. From the iron the safe receives its tenacious qualities—it cannot be cracked or broken as easily as steel, and the steel imparts a hardness that defies the burglar's drill. The screws are also made of combined steel and iron. Each of them is only long enough to reach through two plates, and the screws which join the third, fourth and fifth plates to the first are never directly under any other screws, so that there is no chance for a burglar to bore down through a row of screws. The plates are also drawn very close together, for if any space was left between them a safe blower might succeed in getting his dynamite into it.

Between the interior and exterior walls of the safe a large amount of hydraulic cement, combined with other ingredients, usually according to a secret recipe, is packed solidly. In case of fire the theory is that the water in the cement—about 43 per cent—will, owing to the heat of the outside covering, become steam, partially, at least, and be driven close to the inner wall. Here it will remain and furnish a blanket impervious to heat. All the bolts are cylindrical and from an inch up to two inches in diameter.

Combination locks are now used exclusively. The mechanism of most of them is extremely simple. In one lock there are a number of round brass disks or "tumblers," each pivoted at the center on a small shaft which runs through the safe door and connects with the lock knob. Each tumbler has a slit in it just the size of the steel arm which controls the bolts and reaching nearly back to the center. When all these slits are together and pointing in exactly the same direction the arm slips into them and the bolts can be thrown. But if the slit in a single one of the tumblers is even a thousandth of an inch out of line the arm will not slip back. The disks are set a short distance apart and small screws with big heads are fastened at random over them. As these strike together in turning the tumblers whirl, and a man might turn the lock knob a thousand years without once getting the slits in all the tumblers together. But the man who knows just how far to turn one way and then how far back again according to the combination numbers has no trouble at all.

The combination and numbers are easily changed by changing the screws in the disk. Many of the best safes and vaults are now being provided with time locks. Two and sometimes three clocks are inclosed in glass cases just inside of the safe door. When the door is locked, no one can open it again until the clock bands have traveled the set distance around the dial and touched a little trigger which releases the bolts. More than one clock is used, so that if one runs down the others will go on and perform their duty. In the big banks the vaults are closed about 5 o'clock in the evening and set to open a little before 9 o'clock in the morning. It is a general impression that an expert burglar can open a combination lock by listening to the clicking sounds, but dealers say it is not possible for any one to do it. If a safe owner forgets his combination, the safe has to be bored into. There is no other way of opening it.—Chicago Record.

The Next Best Thing.

The robber presented his glittering pistol.

"Have you a vacancy in your bookkeeping staff?" he demanded.

The president of the bank shook his head.

"Well," the outlaw sighed—he was palpably chagrined—"I'll have to be contented, then, with what cash you have on hand."

Stealing $17,418.18, he left the place.—Detroit Tribune.

PAUSE AND THINK.

Our trials we could soften
 If we'd only pause and think.
Tears would not flow so often
 If'd we'd only pause and think.
Our skies would all be brighter,
Our burdens all be lighter,
Our deeds would all be whiter
 If we'd only pause aand think.

We would not proceed so blindly
 If we'd only pause and think.
We would never speak unkindly
 If we'd only pause and think.
We would cease unrest to borrow,
Darkly clouding each tomorrow,
We could banish worlds of sorrow
 If we'd only pause and think.

TIMBER PRESERVATION.

Free Access of Air to Woodwork Necessary to Prevent Decay.

Probably no better illustration can be had, even at the present time, of the great importance of free access of air to woodwork as a means of protection against premature decay than the results of an investigation, conducted a few years ago, into the causes of an accident in an expensive apartment house in one of the principal cities of the United States, in which a portion of one of the upper floors gave way, and, in falling, carried along corresponding sections of the several floors below, landing the whole mass of wreckage in the cellar. It was found that a fortunately unusual system of floor construction had been adopted in the building in question, the spaces between the wooden beams having been filled with ashes, presumably with the view of making a comparatively fireproof structure.

Whatever its merits in this respect may have been, there was no question whatever that the mixture of ashes formed a most efficient barrier against the access of air to the timbers, and any moisture that was inherently in them or afterward found its way to them through the tiling above had little opportunity of being carried away by any ventilating air currents. The beams simply had to rot, and that comparatively quickly. In the subsequent work of reconstruction of the floors, however, good care was taken that they should not again suffer in the same way.

Mill architects generally appreciate the preserving influence of free air circulation so thoroughly that they carefully guard against even the painting of any floor beams which are open to the suspicion of imperfect seasoning. Where any moisture is still present in the wood a coat of paint or tar or anything else impervious to air, ordinarily looked upon as a protective agent, simply prevents this moisture from escaping, and thus, instead of guarding against rapid decay, really promotes it to a very material degree. Happily this circumstance is becoming properly recognized and is beginning to receive a due share of attention.—Cassier's Magazine.

Wyoming's Senatorial Twins.

The new senatorial pair from Wyoming have already been christened "The Heavenly Twins," not that Messrs. Warren and Clarke are expected to furnish explosive denouements on the Angelica-Diavolo order, but because of their good looks and other personal attributes.

Warren, who is a returning senator after a brief rest, was one of the tallest and largest men in the upper house when here before, and always was pointed out by strangers as a handsome man whom they wanted to know about at once.

Clarke, who has already put in an appearance, bids fair to prove a good investment for the photographers. Already there is the usual demand for his picture that determines the handsomest men in congress.

He is so good looking that in his own state he is often called the Apollo of Wyoming. This will be the handsomest senatorial pair.—Kate Field's Washington.

Dueling Pistols.

The pistol used in the duel is not the military arm, nor the revolver, but a very carefully made and wonderfully accurate weapon known as the dueling pistol. For many years the length of this arm was a matter of grave discussion at all the clubs in England and on the continent. At first the dueling pistol had a 12 inch barrel and carried 20 round bullets to the pound. But in 1810 the elder Devisure, with his confrere, Lepage, at Paris, and Manton and Egg of London, the most eminent pistol makers of their respective countries, fixed the actual length of the dueling pistol barrel at nine inches, and there it has remained for 85 years. A case of the best pistols costs from 500 to 750 francs, or $100 to $150.

Tea For the Chinese Emperor.

The tea used in the immediate household of the emperor of China is treated with the utmost care. It is raised in a garden surrounded by a wall so that neither man nor beast can get anywhere near the plants. At the time of the harvest, those collecting these leaves must abstain from eating fish so that their breath may not spoil the aroma of the tea. They must bathe three times a day, and in addition to all these precautions, they must wear gloves while picking the tea for the Chinese court.—Philadelphia Record.

MONEY NO OBJECT.

When It Allowed Telling Henry Clay the Sort of Partner He Was.

"One of my boyhood recollections," said General Wade Hampton, "refers to Henry Clay. He was a frequent visitor at my father's house in South Carolina. Both Clay and my father were ardent whist players, and nothing was more to their minds than the collection of a brace of gentlemen equally addicted to whist, and then the quartet would play for hours. While the name of whist might serve to imply a game where silence reigned, my father and Clay didn't play whist that way. They exulted audibly over a success, and did not hesitate when they were playing as partners to violently point out mistakes the other had made and attributed defeat to the other's ignorance and utter lack of natural intelligence. Indeed, on occasions particularly trying, they were even known to apply hard names to one another. This they did in no slanderous spirit, but to brighten up and sharpen the wits of the other to the improvements of his play. As they were sitting down to a game as partners one evening Clay remarked:

" 'It's a great outrage, the way we talk to each other, and my idea now, at the outset, is for each of us to put up $20, to belong to the one who is first called hard names by the other. If you assail me, the money is mine; if I forget myself, you take it.'

"My father readily agreed. He felt in a mild, agreeable mood. He was confident he would never again be a prey to the slightest impulse to speak harshly to his dear friend Clay. And, besides, it was his recollection that Clay was the man who raged and did the loud talking. So my father cheerfully placed the $20 on top of Clay's. He thought it would be a good lesson to the blue grass orator to lose it. As they proceeded with the game Clay made some excessively thick headed and ill advised plays. He led the wrong cards; he trumped the wrong tricks; he did everything idiotic in whist that he well could. My father's blood began to boil. As he and Clay lost game after game his wrath ran higher and higher. Still he bit his lip and suffered in silence. It went on for hours, until Clay made some play of crowning imbecility which lost him and my father the eleventh game. Flesh and blood could stand no more. My father sternly pushed the $40 over to Clay.

" 'Why,' said Clay, opening his gray eyes with a look of innocence and amazement, 'why do you do that? You haven't said a word.'

" 'No,' retorted my father, 'but I'm going to tell you, sir, that you are the most abject idiot, the most boundless imbecile that ever dealt a hand at whist. Yes, sir; I repeat it, you are the —— fool I ever met in my life.' "—Chicago Times-Herald.

A NEW AILMENT.

Women Who Imagine They See Objects That No One Else Sees.

Says a writer in The Popular Science Monthly: "Among the curiosities of thought which the physician meets with, unexpected perceptions suddenly appearing before the mind, with the same vividness as ordinary perceptions, but without any accompanying external excitant, are not uncommon. A person may look at an empty chair and yet see a familiar form seated in that chair, and may even hear remarks made by this imaginary figure, and not doubt for a moment that the figure is an actual entity. I have seen persons talking with such imaginary individuals, and have had them assure me that they were as sure of their presence and of their voices as they were of my own. I have seen persons manifest the greatest alarm at the presence of animals about them, and refuse to believe from assurance that those animals were not there.

"A young woman having once been frightened by the sudden presentation to her of a white mouse has been troubled for years by seeing this mouse running about her, upon her clothing, upon anything she is handling, and even upon her food; and, as a result, she is in a state of constant agitation and perplexity, though at times convinced that this is the product of her mind. She washes her hands and her clothing frequently because she is convinced that this animal has made them dirty; and she cannot divest herself of the belief that it is real. I have been sometimes able to convince persons that such fancied figures were not real by asking them to push one eyeball up a little with the finger. This makes all objects about them seem double, as any one can prove to himself, but it does not double the false image—the product of the mind. The young woman just mentioned was much comforted by this device."

Abridged History of a Courtship.

Met him—met him again—in love with him. Met him again—no longer in love with him, but he is in love with me because I am so beautiful. Met him again—he is still in love with me, not only because I am so beautiful, but because I am also good. Sorry for him. Again I met him—he is colder than he was. Think he has forgotten my beauty and my goodness. I, however, am inclined to think that I am in love with him after all. How lucky he is, and how angry mamma will be. Mamma proved to be strangely pleased. Makes me angry, for I know she is not a good judge of a young girl's heart. Flirted with him outrageously to make mamma angry—didn't succeed. Engaged to him—glad. Married to him—sorry.—Philadelphia Times.

CLOSING SCENES OF THE WAR.

A Confederate Band Which Deserted In a Body to Washington.

In the latter part of the month of March, 1865, Washington saw many signs of collapse of the rebellion. The Confederate army appeared to be badly demoralized, and deserters, who arrived constantly in large numbers, reported that men from Alabama, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas could not be expected to have any heart in a fight which then seemed only for the defense of Virginia, while their own states were overrun by the armies of the Union. During the month of March more than 3,000 deserters were received at Washington, and great numbers were quartered at Fort Monroe, Annapolis and other points nearer the lines, where they were put to work in the quartermaster's department or in the naval service.

One curiosity of the times was a Confederate regimental band which had deserted in a body with its instruments and was allowed to march through the streets of the national capital playing Union airs. This was one of the oddest signs of the final break up. People recalled a story, told by Hooker, that when the Union army scaled and occupied Lookout Mountain a rebel sentry on duty on the crest of one of the most difficult precipices saw our men pile up in solid masses over steeps which had been thought inaccessible and was so surprised that he forgot to run, but stood with feet rooted to the spot, watching the Union force climbing up, and streaming past him, and driving the enemy far to the rear, until he was left alone, a statue of amazement. Recovering himself at last, he threw down his musket, stripped off his rebel gray jacket, stood on them both, and looking far off to the sunny south stretched out as a map below him, said, "How are you, Southern Confederacy?"

But notwithstanding such indications of a collapse of the rebellion at this very time many northern Union newspapers, led by Horace Greeley and others of his stamp, were demanding that appeals should be made to the southern people "to stop the flow of blood and the waste of treasure," and that some message should be sent to the southerners "so terse that it will surely be circulated and so lucid that it cannot be misconstrued or perverted," by way of an invitation to cease fighting. Curiously enough, the nearer the time came for a final surrender the more fervid was the demand for negotiation and appeal from the unreasonable radicals in the ranks of northern Unionists. But all this was soon to end, and while a small party was asking, "Why not negotiate?" the downfall came.—Noah Brooks in Century.

Food Tin Cans.

In a recent government report by Dr. H. W. Wiley it is stated that in Germany the law requires that the tins employed for holding canned goods shall not contain more than 1 per cent of lead, while in this country there is no restriction whatever in regard to the character of the tin used, the result of this latter fact being the employment of cans in some cases containing as high as 12 per cent of lead. This practice prevails, notwithstanding the unanimity among physiologists as to the effect of lead salts upon the human system, the continual ingestion of even minute quantities of lead into the system being followed eventually by the most serious consequences—painter's colic, lead palsy and other trying diseases well known to physicians being the direct effects of continual exposure of the system to any such minute portions of lead salts. It is said to be possible to exclude the latter by requiring that the tin shall not contain more than, say, 1½ per cent of lead; also that the solder be as free from lead as possible.

In Germany the solder made use of in sealing the cans is not allowed to contain over 10 per cent of lead, while in this country the analysis of numerous samples of the solder applied shows that it contains fully 50 per cent of lead, in addition to this being the lack of care to prevent such solder from coming into contact with the contents of the can, and large surfaces of solder on the seams are often found exposed to the action of the acid contents of the can.

Tourists' Gold In Italy.

At the British embassy to the king of Italy a calculation was made some time ago of the amount of gold brought by travelers into Italy every year. By far the largest number of these travelers come from England and the United States. The calculations made it evident that no less than £20,000,000, or $100,000,000, are brought into this country and left here by these travelers. In the scantiest years that sum has not been less than £14,000,000, while on other occasions it has risen to £22,000,000. Mr. Stamer, a writer on Italy, relates that an old woman in Sorrento once told him that the people in England had no sun, because the English had told her time and again that it was not for society they had come to Italy, but to see the sun. Besides all the English were fair and ruddy. If they had had a sun, why were they not all sunburnt? If they do get sunshine in Italy, as they do, they pay very sweetly for it.—Rome Letter in Baltimore Sun.

Advice From the Gallery.

Of the Dublin gallery boys a famous baritone, in his reminiscences, tells some facetious tales, one of "Faust," in which he played Valentine: "After the duel, Martha, who rushed in at the head of the crowd, raised my head and held me in her arms during the first part of the scene. There was a deathlike stillness in the house, which was interrupted by a voice 'from the gallery calling out, 'Unbutton his weskit!' "—Dublin Herald.

Suggested by His Helpmate.

Mr. Billus—I've had a roaring in my head all day. I think I'll consult a doctor about it.

Mrs. Billus—Hadn't you better consult a wheelwright?—Chicago Tribune.

"The man With ideas for Comfort in Travel is abroad in the land and The North-Western Line has met him before any other line in the Northwest. This line has without doubt taken the most active and aggressive part in securing the Comfort and Conveniences of its passengers and in its North-Western Limited has given the Twin Cities the Best Train to Chicago.—The Sun, Brandon, Man.

"In These Days Of Comfort and Convenience in Railway Train Services American people are apt to become a bit hardened and unappreciative. They are getting so callonsed to luxury, so to speak, so that it takes something unusual to evoke words of praise. No more pointed example of the perfection of train service can be found anywhere than in the fine North-Western Limited.—Progressive Age Minneapolis, Minn.

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.

Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

'The People Of the Northwest portion of the United States can congratulate themselves on having the elegant traveling accommodations offered by the North-Western line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago which the wealthiest and oldest roads in the effete East have not yet found it possible to excel.—The Times, Monticello, Minn.

Herb Marshal is up from Minneapolis, this week, visiting the friends of his boyhood's days. Herb is one of the steady-going young men.

Chas. Vine has a very unique rig for grinding sausage meat, whereby he can chop 400 pounds of sausage meat a day. He secured a tread power which is attached to his grinder by a belt and a horse does the rest. It is a very cheap and good power, easily doing the work of six or eight men.

Capt. Dunlava drove to Fisher on Sunday, with his son, to pay a visit to the old home.

The city authorities have been cleaning up the streets and are putting gravel and coal cinders in the gutters. A sprinkling of that gravel in the streets in this ward would be a good thing.

Have you seen the silver trumpet and the silver nozzle that willl be competed for this week? On exhibition at Tom Morris' jewelry store.

The agent of Lemen Brothers' says the secret of their success all over the world is in always giving the best show on earth. It will positively be here July 6th.

Thursday last was the first really warm day we have had in June. Friday was a companion-piece, and we have nothing to complain of now, not in that line, at least.

In a few days the merry click of the mower will be heard, and closely following upon haying will commence the harvest of one of the biggest crops ever raised in the valley.

The location of the new state experimental farm here will be of great practical benefit to every farmer in this county, as well as Norman, Marshall and Kittson counties.

Ed Barrette traded horses again last week, and now has a fine looking young animal that he got of a Lambert farmer. Ed very evidently is a good judge of horses.

New bill boards for the circus arose as if by magic all over the city last week and the flaming posters announce the great attractions that will be here on July 6th.

Lemen Brothers are an old firm and keep in advance of the times. The great shows will be here July 6.

See the open dens of wild animals in the street pageant with Lemen Brothers that will be here July 6th.

P. J. La Chapelle has been driving a fine looking trotter about the streets for a week past. P. J. is right in it when he can draw the lines over the back of an elegant trotting nag.

The sheriff and his deputy was busy all last week getting ready for the term of court to convene next week, summoning jurors, witnesses and all that sort of thing.

T. A. Harris finished his job of moving buildings on the Fairweather farm last week and is home for the week of sports here, after which he will return to move some buildings for other parties.

The excursion train for Detroit Lake will leave the N. P. depot about 7 o'clock on the morning of the Fourth and get back about midnight thus giving a long day for fun and amusement.

Summer seemed to drop down all of a sudden on Thursday last which was by all odds the hottest day in June up to that time. There have been several companion-pieces since, however, and now the summer seems to have set in in earnest.

Wm. Anglim went to St. Paul on Saturday. He returned this week accompanied by Mrs. A. and Miss Lottie who has been attending the convent school of which institution she is now a graduate.

Dr. Lankester was honored by being elected grand representative at the Odd Fellows convention in St. Paul last week. The doctor is an enthusiastic Odd Fellow and takes great pride in the institution.

That merry-go-round that was reported to us last week proved to be a patent medicine fake by a barnstorming combination. We have no idea that they did not coin much free silver in this city.

Judge Ives completed his work in Norman county last Thursday and spent the balance of the week at home. This week he is in Kittson county and next week the Polk county term of court will begin.

The St. Vincent New Era-che says that settlers by dozens, with hundreds of sheep, horses, hogs, cattle and poultry have been passing through that village on their way to Roseau county to occupy the land. They are from Dakota and Manitoba, mostly.

C. H. Saake: "You will see a city of 10,000 inhabitants here inside of five years and it will be owing to the efforts of the Commercial club to bring in such industries are needed to make her so. The club is a large one and much interest is taken, but every business man in the city ought to join and help the good work long.

Henry Jones has purchased of Deacon Bain an 80 on section 12, town of Lowell, near the new experimental farm and will build upon and improve the same at an early day.

The Plaindealer says that over 100 Grand Forks people are at Maple lake for an outing. The new train makes that pleasant summer resort the most convenient and the cheapest.

With all kinds of farm produce soaring skyward and real estate rising proportionately, the granger should be one of the most contented and happy individuals——and by the way, he appears to be.

Quite a number went out to the lake to spend the Sabbath returning on Monday morning. A lot of fish came along on the same train but the boys all insist that they (the fish) were not taken on Sunday.

In the absence of their pastor the Presbyterians united with the Congregationalists for Sabbath services. Rev. H. P. Fisher preached at the Congregational house in the morning and at the Presbyterian in the evening.

When the bell on the engine house sounds forth the hour of nine every evening a hurry and scurry of little feet takes place, and then—silence reigns; the kids ain't in it. They have all gone to roost, or thereabouts.

A. K. Anstin purchased a flyer while in St. Paul last week and is now prepared to take a hand in the coming events on the turf this week in good shape. Everybody who has seen the animal says that he has a good horse.

Land in the vicinity of the new experimental farm seems to be getting quite a boom. We note three sales this week and we know of as many more contemplated. Much property in that vicinity will change hands this summer.

Henry Kellar, the irrepressible Dutchman from Sauk Centre, passed through the city on Saturday of last week, on his way north along the St. Vincent extension. He is out drumming up "becsness" for his manufactory.

Our butchers complain that beef cattle are becoming very scarce and hard to get. This fact ought to be a pointer for our farmer friends who happen to have a "critter" or so hat could be fitted up soon.

Nels Mons indulged in a sort of a pre-occupied far-away sort of a smile when he reached the store on Friday and remarked: "Its twins, boy and girl, don't know what it weighs." The parties in interest are all reported doing well.

Samuel Yates, of Andover was examined in probate court on Saturday on information of insanity, was found to be mentally unsound and committed to the asylum at Fergus Falls, Sheriff Steenerson taking him down on Saturday evening.

Brakesman McNiel is recovering nicely from his bad sprain. Says when he does get well again he will know how to avoid a repetition of a like occurrence. Charlie Misner says he didn't like to see Mac laid up but he did enjoy that wheel.

The game of ball played at Fisher on Saturday between the Fisher club and the Jolly Rovers of Crookston was closely contested, the Rovers winning on a score of 8 to 7. The boys are loud in their praises of the way in which the Fisher boys used them.

Some people are troubled with pimples and boils, especially upon the face and neck. The best remedy is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which expels all humors through the proper channels, and so makes the skin become soft, healthy, and fair.

The only menace to the growing wheat crop in the Red River Valley this year seems to be hail and for this evil there is only one remedy——insurance. While that remedy lacks a good deal of being as good as a full crop it is better than a total loss.

It is as customary for a circus to have lemonade always on tap as it is to have side-shows, but it sometime occurs that they cannot obtain the lemons. The circus that is to be here July 6th is not subject to such a possible calamity. They always have Lemens right along with them.

Byron used a great deal of hair-dressing, but was very particular to have only the best to be found in the market. If Ayer's Hair Vigor had been obtainable then, doubtless he would have tested its merits, as so many distinguished and fashionable people are doing now-a-days.

O. McCrillis: "The teachers' training school that commences on July 8th bids fair to be the largest of its kind ever held in Polk county. I expect that over 200 teachers will be in regular attendance for the entire month that the school will be in session. Our citizens should co-operate in this matter and furnish board for all who require it at as reasonable rates as can be afforded."

C-H. Saake may be a little sanguine in his prophecy of 10,000 inhabitants in Crookston in the time that he predicts but it is true that by concerted action the city may be greatly benefitted and everybody should take hold with a will and help the club in its laudable endeavors.

The Shaker medicine business seems to grow on one like a bad habit. At first we think we will have none of it and we avoid it; then hearing someone speak of it the curiosity is piqued and we go to see it "just for once," you know, to see what it is like, and the first we know we are a regular habitue. The outfit had quite large crowds the last of the week.

D. McMillan came up from Beltrami, last week, with a load of pork to sell. Mr. McMillan is one of the live, progressive farmers of Polk county, who always has something to sell, butter or eggs, or poultry, or pork, or vegetables, and while some farmers depend on wheat solely and only have one market-time every year, Mac figures to have a little something to bring in money several times during the year and that makes his wheat crop pretty near being clear gain.

Tom Niel has become a landed proprietor and very soon Tom will be enabled to live 'neath his own vine and fig tree, as it were. Last week he purchased an 80 on section 12, town of Lowell, at $9 per acre, and moreover, Tom put up the hard, cold cash for it. The land is all unimproved but is good soil, lies near the new experimental farm and Tom has the stuff necessary to make all needful improvements this summer. You watch Tom's smoke and pretty quick you will see a bloated landlord—a blarsted h'English h'aristocrat!

Comrade Louis S. Patten, with his wife and children, passed through the city on Sunday last on his return to Faribault, which city he left early in the spring in quest of work in his avocation, that of a cooper. Failing to find as great a demand as he anticipated, he decided to return and is making the trip overland. The comrade was mustered into the 151st Ind. Vol. Inf. Reg't. Co. E., at LaPorte, Ind., and served with that regiment until the close of the war, after which he came to Minnesota to make his home. He was entertained by Col. Cobham Post while here and left on Monday morning to resume his weary march.

A representative of a number of Nebraska farmers was looking the country over with the view of selecting land for a dozen or more farmers who have been vainly trying to make a living in that state. He said that himself and many of his neighbors intend to leave that country this fall, and from what he had seen when we met him he thought very likely they would decide to come up here. He likes what he has seen so well that he negotiated for a farm near the city, putting up a forfeit He has an idea that many of his neighbors will prefer taking government land on the reservation while others will prefer land near such a city as Crookston.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

(First Pub. June 13, 1895)
(Last Pub. July 25, 1895.)

DEFAULT having been made in the conditions of a mortgage given by Joseph Sylvesterson, Mortgager, to John H. Van Dyke, Mortgagee, dated December 1st, 1882, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the first day of December, 1882, at 4:15 o'clock P. M., in Book "I" of Mortgages, on pages 556 to 558

The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date hereof is the sum of Seven Hundred Sixteen Dollars and Sixty-seven cents, principal and interest, besides the sum of Fifty-three and 53-100 Dollars for taxes and interest thereon necessarily paid by said mortgagee and Twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, stipulated for in said mortgage.

Notice is hereby given, that the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, viz: The Southeast Quarter (Se¼) of Section Six (6), in Township One Hundred and Forty-eight (148) North, of Range Forty-five (45) West, containing One Hundred and Sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, in Polk county and State of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk county or his deputy, at the front door of the Polk County Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county and state, on the 30th day of July, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., of that day

Dated June first, A. D. 1895.

Conductor McCormick's little daughter accompanied him on his Saturday trip and spent Sunday at Fosston.

Judge Hayford traded his farm for Judge Benson's hansome Clyde Stallion last Wednesday. The horse is a beauty, weighs 1750, and is propably one of the best horses of his class ever brought into this section.

Frank Montague and M. R. Brown were in the city Saturday flourishing a map of Polk country entire. They were selling the hay stumpage on state lands. The bidding was quite brisk and the grass sold high. Frank held the fort while M. R. did the crying.

Euclid Items.

Walter C. Kelso was down the fore part of last week.

Mrs. Rob't. Teal was confined to the house a few days last week of illness, but is now about again.

L. L. C. Brooks, of St. Paul, was here last week on his regular monthly visit to Keystone farm.

Euclid was represented in Crookston Wednesday by Theodore Myers, R. Casuey and W. A. Teal.

H. C. Misner drove to Crookston Thursday afternoon, with son Harvey and Trixy Pitkin, and after seeing them safely aboard the Fosston flyer, returned home. The children are visiting at McIntosh with Leslie Shaddock and family.

Miss Anna Hancock returned Friday after spending a week with friends in Crookston.

M. P. Losey Jr. and wife, of Crookston, visited with their parents here the first of the week.

On Tuesday afternoon occurred the dedication services of the Euclid Presbyterian church. The ceremonies were conducted in a simple but impressive manner. A large audience was in attendance, many people being present from the surrounding county and towns. After prayer and songs the welcome address was delivered by Rev. J. B. Astwood and responded to by Rev. Matheson, of Fergus Falls, Rev. S. Currie and Rev. Father Murphy, of Crookston, delivered interesting remarks. The dedication sermon was delivered by Rev. J. C. Schell, of Drayton. The sermon delivered by Mr. Schill was very interesting as it contained a history of the church from the time it was organized, when less than a dozen people met in the uncompleted Keystone hotel barn, Sunday, Oct. 10, 1880, up until the present time. The Euclid church was the first Presbyterian church organized in Polk county, and the first one of any denomination north of Crookston. The present structure is one of the prettiest little church buildings along the line, and one of which the citizens of Euclid may feel justly proud, as it indicates that, although depression may prevail, the spirit of progression is not wanting. Rev. Astwood is to be congratulated upon earnest and untiring efforts in erecting this edifice, as are also those citizens who contributed as freely of both labor and money.

A reception was tendered Rev. J. B. Astwood, Tuesday evening, at the Keystone House Parlors. Nearly one hundred fifty guests were present. Mr. Astwood departed for his old home in the Bermuda Islands, Wednesday evening. He will return again, in about three months and continue his pastorate among us.

FARMER GIBBS put a pretty good spoke into his little gubernatorial wheel at the dairymen's convention at Mankato, last week. His speech was well received.

"DID GROVER go a fishin' on Sunday?" is a problem that just now the average Democrat is trying hard to solve. Whether he did or not cuts little figure. It makes him neither worse nor better.

EX CONGRESSMAN H. E. Boen was knocked down during the hail-storm east week. Boen believes in free coinage on a basis of 16 to 1 but he draws the line on hail.

THE delegates for the Republican League convention at Cleveland left St. Paul on Monday evening for Chicago, where all of the western delegates were to meet and proceed to Cleveland via the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railway.

THE St. Paul Globe describes the marriage of Coxe's daughter to Browne by a three-quarter column editorial going to prove that the union was no mesalliance. The Globe makes out a good ease if it does take lots of valuable space to accomplish.

THE Republican League convention at Cleveland is not for the purpose of formulating a platform of principles for the Republican party—the national convention can see to that. The League will keep strictly in line with the principles of its party.

QUITE unfortunately for the advocates of free coinage the prices of farm products do not seem to be so wonderfully in sympathy with silver as they would have us believe. The boom in the prices of farm products is tough on the free silverites—knocks their arguments silly and destroys their chief stock in trade.

THE Thirteen Towns keeps pegging away in the endeavor to make Gov. Morton, of New York, president. If lightning should happen to strike Morton, the Towns would justly claim to be the pioneer Morton paper of Minnesota—but Oliver P., Morton, he, our president will ever be. See?

THAT was a pretty sharp dodge that John B. Rockefeller attempted on the Merrits, but it will hardly hold water. He attempts to secure papers in garnishement on himself to forbid himself paying the $940,000 judgment that Alfred Merrit was awarded, claiming that the Merritts are indebted to his, (Rockefeller's) steel barge works, when the facts are that concern really owes the Merritts and a suit has been for some time pending in that case. John B. appears to be tuff.

GROVER has had a lot of free advertising on account of his "noble stand" in the Cuban matter, but it may be a costly thing for Uncle Sam after all, for if the Childs expedition was fitted out with the knowledge of the authorities it will prove a costly job for Uncle Sam. It is another Alabama case and the Spaniards can claim heavy damages.

IN THE celebrated case of Alfred Merritt vs. John D. Rockefeller, on trial at Duluth last week, the jury grants the plaintiff a verdict of $940,000. Two other brothers will at once bring suit against Rockefeller. These actions are for alleged swindling in the Mesaba iron land deal, and it looks as though the boys had good grounds for action.

THE defaulting treasurer of South Dakota, tired with being a fugitive from justice, has surrendered and will get a year in the pen. Taylor stole thousands of dollars, has rich and influential relations, and gets off thus easy; while had he been some poor cus-tomer and stole only a few hundreds he would have got ten years or so.

THE Democrats are figuring on running an educational campaign next year and to that end will send out all the speakers they can secure. It is said that about a score of them will be sent to Minnesota soon to instruct the faithful. It will be of no avail. That party has had a good chance to show what it could do for the country—and has missed the opportunity. The people want a change

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1895.

"Old Glory" is very much in evidence today, the observance of "flag day" being more general in Washington than it was ever before known to be. This is especially true in the residence section of the city, nearly every house showing the stars and stripes. If the sons of the American revolution and kindred organizations had never done anything else, their work in encouraging the people to love and revere our flag would entitle them to the everlasting thanks of every patriot. The man who truly loves his country's flag will never be lacking in patriotism at a time of need, and it would be worse than folly to imagine that a time of need will never come again

The two meetings of the cabinet held this week, which were probably the last that will be held for several months, were largely devoted to a discussion of politics. Mr. Cleveland is thoroughly alarmed at the silver revolt in the Democratic party, although his friends pretend to make light of it and to think that it is already losing ground. A considerable part of these discussions were devoted to the situation in Ohio. It is now clear that Mr. Cleveland selected Judge Harmon to be attorney-general with a special view to its effect upon the Ohio Democrats, and that he actually indulges the hope that the state will go Democratic this year. Attorney-General Harmon is a friend of ex-Gov. Campbell, whom Mr. Cleveland wishes to accept the Democratic nomination for governor this year, and when he returns to Ohio to straighten out his private business he will carry certain confidential messages to Mr. Campbell, calculated to start the presidential bee to buzzing around his head.

Frankness is a virtue which sometimes tells more than is intended. For instance, Representative Wilson, of South Carolina, who is now in Washington, in discussing the reversal of Judge Goff's decision concerning the S. C. registration law, said: "There is a great need of a new constitution in place of the one fastened on us by the carpet-baggers in reconstruction days. It is desirable to restrict the right of voting in some way, so as to prevent its exercise by the ignorant and poverty stricken classes."

Verily, it is difficult to account for some of the acts of Democratic officials. While patriotic Marylanders are asking contributions for the erection of a monument to the memory of Francis Scott Key, the author of the "Star Spangled Banner," Commissioner of Pensions Lochren dismisses Miss Elizabeth N. Key, a grand-daudhter of Francis Scott Key, and the sole support of a blind mother, from a petty clerkship in the pension bureau, and this too, notwithstanding Miss Key's good record as an efficient clerk during the fourteen years she has been in the bureau. Unless the effort to get Miss Key re-instated, which is now being made, shall succeed, her case will prove the truth of the adage, "Republics are ungrateful," and should stand as an everlasting disgrace to the Democratic administration which allowed Miss Key to be dismissed by Commissioner Lochren.

More or less amusement was felt among the knowing ones in Washington when that interview with ex-Secretary Whitney, in which he said he was not a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, was published. No one expected Mr. Whitney to avow himself a candidate for that nomination more than a year before the nominating convention meets. He is too smart for that. He is known to be a very rich man, and if he announced himself to be a candidate now, he would either have to allow himself to be victimized by the army of impecuneous Democratic strikers in every state in the Union, or make enemies by refusing to put up money for them, that would make his nomination impossible. Whitney will bear watching. He can control a larger corruption fund than any man who has any chance of the Democratic nomination, and if he wants that nomination he will get it. But, unless he concludes that his election can be bought, he will not want the nomination.

Secretary Olney will have an opportunity very soon to show what sort of a secretary of state he will make. It is certain that Chinese mobs have destroyed much property belonging to American missionaries in China, and feared that they have also taken the lives of American citizens. Mr. Olney's handling of this case will be very carefully watched. The people will demand prompt and vigorous action, and if they don't get it so much the worse for Mr. Olney.

Mr. Cleveland's proclamation warning Americans against assisting Cuban revolutionists, is merely a precaution against demands for indemnity that may be made by Spain.

JUST about these days the papers are giving our own genial Bob Evans great wads of advertising because Bob would like to see C. K. Davis president of these United States. We do not imagine that Bob has any idea that Davis can win, but it is the unexpected that sometimes happens and if—but we will not enthuse until that time comes.

"You'll never miss the water till the well runs dry," must have been written by somebody in the habit of getting water at the well on neighbor Buhn's corner. That is one of the best wells in the city, always affording an abundance of pure, cold water, and hundreds throng daily to the well for a supply; but once in a while the pump gets worn out and refuses to respond to the request to give down and on such occasions it is comical to watch the effects upon the different persons who approach, shake hands with the pump and find it oska spiel. Some will approach the subject vigorously, give a few energetic shakes, look up and down the street in a sort of a dazed, shamefaced manner, smile meekly and depart, while others, after vainly trying to coax a pail of water from the hard-hearted thing, will look up and down the street to see if anybody is looking, and then put on a look which expresses unutterable things, or at least things that should not be spoken, and go off growling something about "always out of repair," etc. What an illustration of human life this is. As long as the supply lasts it is used quite as a matter of course and we think nothing of it; but once it fails its true value becomes painfully apparent—and then we miss it.

The new Grand Army Post room will probably be ready for occupancy in time for the first meeting in July. The boys have taken hold of this matter and worked with wonderful zeal, a few of them working upon it almost every day since the project was first started and they will be prepared to enjoy their new home to the fullest extent. They will have one of the finest little halls above that can be found in the city that can be rented for balls and parties at a very low figure and when they get their little club room fixed up they will have a nice cosy little place where they can meet and enjoy a social hour profitably and pleasantly. They will have the finest Post hall in the northern part of the state when their plans are fully carried out—and they will have earned it.

J. M. Jones last week purchased of Deacon R. Bain, 160 acres of unimproved land in the town of Lowell at $9 per acre. This land lies near the site of the new experimental farm, convenient to the city, and at one time would have been considered cheap at $20 per acre. There is no doubt but Jim has a good bargain, as land is bound to rise in value in a very short period of time. He will build upon it and break up a portion this summer.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative power that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

FOSSTON ITEMS

(From the Thirteen Towns.)

Thos. Newby left this afternoon for Crookston. He accompanied his string of trotters which he has been training on the Fosston track. They will be entered in races at Crookston, Grand Forks and Grafton.

S. C. Bagley returned from the Clearwater Wednesday. He found everything moving along finely; and it was expected that all the logs would be below the dam yesterday. The drive has never been started before under more favorable circumstances, the late heavy rains having replenished the feeders to the river in excellent shape.

The Fireman's tournament at Crookston Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday promises to be a grand success. Eight or more companies will take part, and this display, with their different races and sports together with horse races, etc., will give interesting amusement. A large delegation of visitors expect to go from here.

I. O. Brandt, who is taking the census for the towns of Rosebud, Brandsvold and Hill River and the Village of Fosston. reports the prospect an encouraging one for a very fine increase over the census of 1890 in each town and the village. THE THIRTEEN TOWNS guesses at 3,000 people on Mr. Brandt's list.

Fisher Items.

(From the Bulletin.)

C. U. Webster, Sr., is building a very pretty fence around his residence.

Mrs. Howard Lankester accompanied the Dr. to St. Paul Monday to attend a meeting of the Rebekah.

Mrs. Wm Peterson and Mrs Henry Peterson were visiting their parents here Wednesday.

The curfew ordinance works like a charm. When the bell taps at 9 o'clock there isn't a kid to be seen on the streets.

It looks at this writing as though the great Northwest is to be the most polific of crops of any portion of the country.

We know a farmer who told us the other day that the bicycle he bought for his boy had more than paid for itself. That boy thinks farming is not such a bad kind of life, after all. The bicycle has something to do with this opinion.

G. Dunlava, formerly of this burg, but now of Crookston, was industriously engaged in shaking hands with old acquaintances here Wednesday. He is preparing himself for the West Point examination at Moorhead next fall.

Warren Register:—About half past ten Monday evening fire was discovered in the Beunewitz building on Johnson avenue. The alarm was at once sounded and the firemen hurried to their posts. For some time the fire was confined to the interior of the building. Attempts were made to enter the building for the purpose of removing some of the more valuable of its contents, but the smoke within was so dense that they were abandoned. The flames burst through the front of the building only a moment or two before the firemen got the hose into action. Then water from the hose began to get in its work, and in a little while the fire which threatened dire results was over. The portion of the building occupied by W. J. Brown as a law office was badly burned; otherwise the building is not greatly damaged. Mr. Brown's law library was nearly ruined and his office furniture partially destroyed. The origin of the fire is a mystery. We understand that both the building and its contents were insured.

Economy.

Justice English sets an example in economy that may or may not be worthy of emulation, just as you happen to feel about it. He had occasion to come up from Fertile on business on Friday and says that he arrived at the depot in that village too late for the train by a few minutes, and so, rather than break a business engagement, he took a tie pass and arrived here, a la Weary Wraggles, sometime during the day. He was very much exercised in his mind for fear the newspapers would "catch on" and haunt him.

Everywhere We Go.

We find some one who has been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and people on all hands are praising this great medicine for what it has done for them and their friends. Taken in time Hood's Sarsaparilla prevents serious illness by keeping the blood pure and all the organs in a healthy condition. It is the great blood purifier.

HOOD'S PILLS become the favorite cathartic with every one who tries them. 25c. per box.

Ex-Sheriff Jenks of Grand Forks is reported quite low at St. Paul, where he was taken sometime ago for treatment. Besides a stroke of paralysis he is subject to convulsions.

Frank Montagne came over from Crookston yesterday and disposed of the few hay privleges belonging to the state on school lands situated in Sandsville, Esther, and Rinchart townships.

The telephone line between this city and Crookston will soon be in working order. The poles are already placed as far as Fisher and this city will soon be covered.

Saturday last Clara Peterson, a daughter of the late Eric Peterson, of Northland township, died of quick consumption aged 16 years. The funeral occured Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the remains were interred in the Marais cemetery. Some few years ago the young lady's parents died of consumption within a few days of each other's death

McINTOSH ITEMS.

By the mail coming on the evening train, we receive our mail two days later, as we have it tri-weekly.

FERTILE ITEMS.

[From the Journal]

The railroad bridge about three miles north of here on the Red Lake Falls branch will be entirely filled in with dirt. Work on same will commence soon.

Frank Montague of Crookston, was in Fertile the first of the week making sales of green goods to the farmers—that is the right to cut grass on railroad lands.

Fosston is stirred up over school matters. Miss Bullock, one of the teachers who has been engaged there for the past two years, failed of a re-election at the hands of the board, and the result is widespread dissatisfaction. They have taken active steps to secure her retention and a committee is circulating a petition to have her retained. The board did not reject the application and it is likely she may be engaged. The matter has caused considerable excitement and it is anticipated that some members of the school board may resign.

Frank Haight, of Edna, was in Fertile Tuesday with a load of porkers which he readily turned into hard cash. He carelessly placed the money in his side coat pocket and left for home and when he came to the river he watered his team and while in the act of stooping over for a pail of water in the mill pond the money rolled out of his pocket into the river. He succeeded in saving the bills but a $20 gold piece and some small change went to the bottom of the pond—a depth of about 18 feet, he dove after the money several times but finally gave up the task and started for home a sadder but a wiser man.

W. A. Case, of Warren, is here this week endeavoring to organize a local Camp of Modern Woodmen.

Judge R. J. Montague, who made such a stirring oration here last year, has been engaged as orator of the day for the 4th.

A representative of the Standard Oil Company was in Fertile last week making arrangements to build a storage tank at this place. The site for the tank will be just below the Hoskins elevator.

The 4th of July committee offers a purse of $52 for a match game of base ball for that day. Any two clubs wishing to compete for the prize should address L. E. George.

Blood Poison

THE BANE OF HUMAN LIFE,

Driven Out of the System by the Use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For five years, I was a great sufferer from a most persistent blood disease, none of the various medicines I took being of any help whatever. Hoping that change of climate would benefit me, I went to Cuba, to Florida, and then to Saratoga Springs, where I remained some time drinking the waters. But all was no use. At last, being advised by several friends to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I began taking it, and very soon favorable results were manifest. To-day I consider myself a perfectly healthy man, with a good appetite and not the least trace of my former complaint. To all my friends, and especially young men like myself, I recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla, if in need of a perfectly reliable blood-purifier."—JOSE A. Adolph Kilinger who lives near Fisher was in the city on Saturday chatting with the boys over the prospects for big crops this fall, than which he says he has never seen better.

A. C. Schmidt went north along the St. Vincent line to awaken enthusiasm in the tournament this week. He reports having found an encouraging degree of interest in the affair.

Bright and early on Monday morning the G. A. R. boys went to work to lay a floor in the new Grand Army hall. They will have the new home all ready for business by the first week in July.

Saturday was a busy day in town. The streets and stores crowded with people from the country looked very much like the good old times that are known as boom days.

Frank Hawkins: "I expect to see the logs in about the 15th of July. This stage of water makes driving easy and rapid and they certainly ought to be in by that time."

Rev. J. P. Scheil, of Drayton, N. D., came over on Monday night on his way to Euclid, where he goes to attend the dedication services of the new church at that place.

Dan Stewart, an employee of the Great Northern Railway at Grand Forks, disappeared suddenly on Saturday last. The Plaindealer hints at defalcation.

Rev. H. P. Fisher went down to Wadena, this week, to attend the conference between the Congregational and the Union churches at that place.

One of Fontaine & Anglim's clerks got pretty well waked up on Saturday morning while talking through the telephone while the storm was raging outside. It might be well to let up on telephoning during a storm.

A Winnipeg base ball club is looking for trouble. They have asked our club to arrange a game for them Saturday, of this week, and no doubt the boys will accommodate them plenty.

Tuesday opened up bright and clear, in a way to make the heart of the average Crookston fire laddie leap with gladness in anticipation of a spell of weather for the tournament.

The JOURNAL is credibly informed that Miss Inez McGrew, who was once a resident of this city is to be married at her home in Duluth on or about July 23d, to a prominent young men engaged on the State Grain force.

W. C. Andrew, Wright, Barrett & Stilwell's handsome commercial traveller, showed up in good form on Wednesday. Andrew is one of the oldest, (in experience) one of the handsomest and one of the very best salesmen on the road.

T. G. Thompson, Geo. Vine, J. E. Morrisey and A. R. Fuller returned on Saturday morning from the tournament at Fargo, where they had been to contest the honors with several gun clubs. They are not bragging so very loud.

Harry Walker came over from Grand Forks Saturday to see McNiel and console with him in his crippled condition. Mac LOOKS for all the world like one of those banged up base-ball players but of course (?) that can't be whats the matter with Mac!

Pete Wermager brought in a sample of lettuce from the old Barb farm on Tuesday, to show us what this country could do. It was sowed on April 7th and when pulled weighed one pound and one ounce, was about 12 inches high and 18 inches across the top of the plant.

The committee having in charge the arrangements for the Fourth of July celebration at Maple Lake are hustling things along at a lively pace. The program already partly arranged, gives promise of furnishing plenty of amusement. A great many people will go from Crookston.

The Boston One Price Clothing house report big sales so far this spring and summer. Cause: why they sell good goods at very low prices—and everybody who deals with them once likes to go again. Drop in and see the boys before you go home this week.

W. R. Martin, in from the town Fanny, on Thursday, says they did not get much rain there Sunday. Says his crop prospects never looked better than this year and barring hot winds or hail he thinks he will get the biggest yield of the best wheat he ever raised in Polk county, and the prospects for price is also very encouraging.

The press agent for Lemen Bros. great circus showed up Monday morning and arranged with the newspaper boys for advertising the great aggregation——the best show on earth. It will be here without fail on July 6th. The prices will be in accordance with the financial condition of the country.

A dash of rain on Tuesday afternoon sufficient to lay the dust, was enough to save Charlie Misner's bacon as a weather prophet. He had been predicting rain, but as the day had been bright and clear the boys were disposed to guy him, but he still insisted we would have rain about 4 o'clock. Sure enough, we did get a slight flurry.

It is said that the case of typhoid fever at Wm. Watts' was caused by the boy's drinking water from an unused well at the cemetery and the suggestion has been made that the well be filled up. The well has its use to furnish water for plants set out in the cemetery but it should be protected in such a way that children could get no water from it.

Moorhead has laid a cedar block pavement on Front street and they like it so well that they propose to extend the work to every business street at least. Situated as Moorhead is it is a positive necessity there. While it is not absolutely necessary to pave Crookston streets with cedar blocks, a few loads of gravel put on the streets, say such a day as Saturday was would improve our streets wonderfully.

While excavating for a cellar for P. H. Wermager, on the old Barb place, last week, the men exhumed a lot of human bones, evidently of Indians, also what appeared to be bones of animals. From the number of them there must have been an extensive burial ground there some day. Mr. W. is building a barn 50x56 with 18 foot posts and the cellar is to be used for storing vegetables. He says that two trees, about two feet in diameter, were growing on the site just over the spot in which the bones were found, which would indicate that the bones had lain there for many years.

The Hallock News announces the arrival of C. J. McCollum and family from West Superior to make their future home there. Mr. McCollum is one of the early settlers of Kittson has probably done more to build up the material interests of Kittson county and his village than any other citizen of Hallock. Among the industries he started was a cheese factory that was of great value to the farmers of that vicinity, and could have been of more had they taken hold of the matter with half the energy that McCollum did. In everything calculated to help his county and village McCollum was always first and foremost, and when a few years ago he went to Superior, Wis., the people of Hallock felt as though about half the village had moved out, and it is needless to say that they now welcome him back with genuine enthusiasm.

Will Lanctot went to St. Paul last week.

Lewis Ellington went to Fertile on Saturday.

Geo. Schnagel has gone to Rush City to live.

Charlie Lowe is taking in the sights this week.

August Wentzel was up from the farm last week.

Supt. O. McCrillis went over to Grand Forks, last Friday.

Quite a large number went out to the lake Saturday evening.

Casper Sands will go on the run between Breckinridge and Larimore to sort o' break in.

A. C. Schmidt went up to Thief River Falls on Monday, rounding up for the tournament.

Mrs. Chas. Misner was able to be up town on Friday for the first time in several weeks.

Capt. Couverette was observed putting on lots of style with a bran new buggy last Thursday.

Mrs. Norman Haason of Fertile, spent a few days visiting her brothers C. O. and O. O. Christianson.

A Watrous fire engine, from St. Paul, is among the attractions offered this week.

Chief Boiler Inspector Larson, of Duluth, came up this week on business in his line.

Charlie Oehler came in from Dugdale last week to do some trading and chat with the boys.

Ed. Martin has been re-papering his barber shop, which adds to its appearance very materially.

The copious rains so far in June ought to bring the logs down in a hurry——and will no doubt.

The daily train on the Fosston branch proves very popular and exceedingly well patronized.

Sunday afternoon occurred one of the biggest thunderstorms of the season, and the rain continued to fall all night.

An old-time friend writes us from Steuben Co. N. Y., that a plan is on foot to send out a representative farmer to look at our crops in Northern Minnesota when they mature with a view to locating a colony of Yankee farmers and wants to have our opinion. Well, it should be pretty well known by this time what we think of the Red River Valley country——we would not swap our landed interests here for every hill and knob in old Steuben——and we are perfectly well aware that some of those hills and knobs are adorned by bearing vine-yards——but the grapes that grow therein do not bring much to the producers. "What can a good farm be bought for?" Well, that depends on so many things that no fixed price can be laid down as an inflexible rule. Wild lands can be had at prices ranging all the way from $5 to $10 per acre while in some cases improved farms can be had for about the cost of the improvements thereon, and you can buy others at from $5 to $30 per acre and some you can't buy at all at what might be called a reasonable figure at least. One thing we do know that our farms can be made to pay more acre for acre than any land in Steuben county and none of it is held at so high a figure as Steuben county farmers value their land. Living is fully as inexpensive here as there and as near as we can cipher it out we have less idle men here than you have in old Steuben. We firmly believe that any one buying land here now can soon double the investment money. Yes, it is true that the times have been very close up here——and so they have with you but our farmers can stand it better than you can because they haven't as much money in the original investment than you have. If a farmer there could sell his farm for its original cost to him, come here and invest the proceeds now there is no earthly reason why in a short time he could not be quite wealthy. All our farmers who have kept out of debt are satisfied with the results attained. While they are not independently rich they have money in the bank and are well-to-do. As to whether we would advise you to come out here? No, we would not take that responsibility for you might not be impressed as favorably with this country as we are and in that case you might feel inclined always to find fault with us. The only advice we would give at all would be to "come and see for yourself then act on your own judgment." We believe it would pay any man who desires to better his condition to look this country over.

Everything points to the greatest immigration to this country--next spring that was ever seen——and we have seen them come in droves in days gone by. The coming fall will see the advance guard in great strength. Now is the time to catch on to Polk county real estate.

County Atty. Gossman returned on Friday from a visit below.

D. Farrel, the Warren jeweller, came down on Monday.

R. Bula was in from Fisher last week, to sell some real estate.

P. J. McGuire went out on the Fosston line on Friday last.

C. A. Tullar came down from Angus last Friday.

H. Wiedeman was in from Euclid on Friday.

Anton Erickson went up to Thief River Falls on Friday of last week.

A. M. Sivertson went to St. Paul last week.

Real estate deals are becoming lively and at this rate will soon be booming more lively than ever before.

Attorney Gossman is entertaining his mother and sister who arrived from Canton, Minn., for a visit, last week.

There are many rare animals with Lemen Brothers, never before exhibited in America, and will be here July 6th.

Victor Cederland, formerly foreman on the Corser farm who now resides near Warren, is, with his family visiting friends in this city.

Frank Hertz went out to the lake on Saturday, returning on the flyer Monday morning. Reports heavy rain Sunday afternoon and at night.

The smallest child equestrienne in the world, little Edna, will perform both afternoon and night with Lemen Brothers on July 6th.

Fighting Tom, the boxing Kangaroo, will spar four rounds, afternoon and night, with Lemen Brothers' big show, here on July 6th.

Lemen Brothers have a complete Japanese circus you can see without extra charge. Will exhibit at Crookston July 5th.

As compared with last year more farmers seem to have plenty of feed this summer than was the case last. There doesn't begin to be the demand for it that there was last year—which is a hopeful sign of the times. The nearer a farmer can come to raising his own supplies the better for him it is.

Fergus Falls was visited last week by a disastrous hail storm that did much damage to window panes. Some damage was done to the crops.

Mrs. B. J. Duntley and her visitors went up to Euclid to spend the Sabbath with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Davis.

Looks like everybody was in town this week. Tomorrow will see the wind up of a very successful week o entertainment.

Judge C. O. Christianson is busy these days taking testimony in cases for final proof of land in the St. Cloud district.

C. C. Knappen announces that he has found a purchaser for his Detroit Free Press and will hereafter live at home at Fisher.

Ed. Niel purchased an unimproved quarter of land in Louisville last week, at $9 per acre. Pretty good price for land that far out.

C. C. Knappen has sold the Detroit Free Press to Geo. Hamilton, of the Record, and will give all his attention to the Fisher Bulletin.

A heavy shower accompanied by thunder and lightning visited these parts on Saturday morning. Said to be the wind-up of one of Hicks' periods.

The rain on Saturday forenoon softened the streets up a good bit making them quite muddy and sticky. That state of things, however only lasts a few hours at a time in Crookston. The face of the country being rolling gives the water no chance to stand in the streets.

The finest lot of flyers ever seen together in one group in this upper country may be seen this week on the fair grounds. To the true lover of a good horse the sight is an interesting one.

Spring Medicine

Is a necessity because the tonic of winter air is gone, and milder weather, increased moisture, accumulated impurities in the blood and debilitated condition of the body, open the way for that tired feeling, nervous troubles, and other ills. The skin, mucous membrane and the various organs strive in vain to relieve the impure current of life. They all welcome to assist Nature at this time when she most needs help, to purify the blood, tone and strengthen the laboring organs and build up the nerves.

Hood's Sarsa-parilla

"Last winter my husband and myself had the grip. I advised him to try a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and he did so. It not only cured him of the grip, but it gave him a good appetite, which he had not had for years. He can now eat anything he wants and is fleshier." MRS. CARRIE SLAWSON, Evansville, Wis.

Hood's Pills the after-dinner pill and family cathartic. 25c.

A. Thompson, one of the prominent farmers near Neby, was in the city on Friday last. Reports that the crops are looking finer than for several years and the encouraging prospects for a good price for wheat makes everybody feel jubilant. A great deal of wheat was sown along the west side and it will no doubt bring a good deal of money to the happy grangers.

Capt. H. W. Donaldson came up on Friday morning and took the St. Vincent train for home, where he intended to spend the day looking after his business interests and then, return to the bedside of his mother, who was in a very serious condition, being unable to take nourishment of any kind. The Capt. said very slight hopes of her recovery were entertained.

Wm. Box, Sr., arrived from the Coast on Saturday evening in good form, and after spending the Sabbath with old-time friends in the city left on Monday morning for the farm near Warren, to see his son Will and family. Mr. Box has grown so much younger in appearance that he was enabled to walk right through a crowd of his old-time friends and acquaintances in disguise—all unbeknownst to them as it were—and he did it several times before he finally owned up and confessed that he was the only original Box, who was at one time city marshal of this city. Mr. Box has had all he wants of the great west and will, no doubt, bring his family back to Polk county to make their future home. Their many friends here will rejoice to welcome them back again.

I now have money again to loan on good improved farms.

Choice Mansury barley for seed. A few more bushels left. Call at JOURNAL office for particulars.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

Good Health

And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a blood purifier, its power to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now?

Many Persons

Cannot touch food prepared with lard, and yet all such people can eat freely of food shortened with, or cooked (even fried) in COTTOLENE. For dyspeptics, and those with delicate digestive powers, Cottolene is invaluable. Stealing His Own Property.

A reckless man left an apple in a bag on his desk in a room where several people sat. An office boy "peeped" into the bag, hovered longingly around it, finally brought another boy around to share the temptation, asked if anybody owned the apple, and then assured that the apple belonged to nobody in the world promptly fell. There seems to be something in the theory that crime, like misery, loves company, for the youngster divided the apple with the other boy, making him party to the theft. Not content with this, he placed a piece of coal in the paper, closed the top and replaced the bag on the desk. The rightful owner of the apple came in a minute later, and seeing the office boy and the bag containing the apple, as he supposed, he picked up the latter and held it out.

"Here's an apple I saved for you," he said, and he handed over the bag to the boy.

Honesty is the—but everybody knows what it is, and that office boy looked truly conscience stricken that he had divided the apple when he might have had it all!—New York Tribune.

BLACK MINORCAS.

A Writer Who Brings Proof of Their Great Value.

A writer in The Poultry Monthly says: "It is not my wish to disparage any breed of fowls, because I think all are good, but to maintain my position and show the true value of Minorcas as egg producers it is necessary to make some comparisons. Mr. A. E. Power of Obed, Los Angeles county, Cal., a breeder of Brown Leghorns and Black Minorcas, made a test for the year 1892, from January to December inclusive, selecting six hens of each variety and subjecting each lot to exactly the same conditions of feed, housing and care, thus making the test as fair as possible. The result reported is as follows:

	Eggs
Six Black Minorca hens, from January to December, 1892, laid	1,085
Six Brown Leghorn hens, from January to December, 1892, laid	774
In favor of Black Minorcas	311

The report from the government experimental station of Canada for 1891 gives this report for two winter months, December and January:

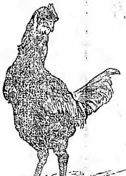
	Eggs.		Eggs.
10 White Leghorns	186	0 Black Hamburgs	55
10 Plymouth Rocks	143	10 Mixed hens	74
5 Black Minorcas	114	5 Buff Cochins	63
8 Langshans	61	0 Houdans	23
3 Andalusians	53	2 Red Caps	[illegible]
5 Brahmas	47	4 Wyandottes	51

Black Minorcas far surpassing any of the other 11 breeds tested. Notice that five Black Minorcas laid within 29 eggs as many as ten Plymouth Rocks, and only 72 less than ten White Leghorns. And how about the Light Brahmas, those "phenomenal winter layers," who "do their laying when eggs are high?" Five of them gave 47 eggs, an average of 9 2-5 eggs for each hen. The five Black Minorcas gave 114 eggs, an average of 22 4-5 eggs each, in a veritable Canadian winter, a most favorable time for Light Brahmas.

Like tests have been made from year to year, and a special report from the same station, printed by order of parliament for 1894, which I have before me, places Black Minorcas at the head of the list of "most profitable" laying hens, and says "Black Minorcas—one of the leading breeds of large, white egg layers, perhaps the greatest layers of large eggs known. They are rapidly taking the place of the Black Spanish, as they are larger and hardier. The males make fair table fowls. They are good winter layers when properly housed and fed, as all fowls should be. Fowls and chickens are hardy, the latter growing rapidly. During the past winter, eggs were obtained from Black Minorca hens, in the poultry department of the Central Experimental farm, which weighed six to a pound, all but three-fourths of an ounce. A large number of eggs were laid by Light Brahmas and Langshans, which went seven to the pound." Showing also that the Minorcas produced larger eggs than either Langshans or Brahmas.

A Word For Games.

Colonel Alfred Aldrich of Barnwell, S. C., writes on game chickens. Among other valuable hints he suggests that the game possesses a flavor more toothsome and exquisite than all other breeds of fowls. They are healthier, says Colonel Aldrich, and even the eggs may be distinguished by superior delicacy.



PRIZE GAME COCK

This is quite agreeable to hear, and coming from Colonel Aldrich, who is celebrated for his taste as a connoisseur of viands, as well as for his fine game fowls, is worthy of belief. In fact, we thank the debonair colonel for these valuable suggestions. We learn with certainty that the game chicken has other uses than to slaughter his kind for the amusement of men.—Columbia News.

Fowls and Friends.

Some hens owned by a widow laid eggs bountifully the year round. A friend, however, advised her to try a new kind of chicken, warranted to lay many more eggs than her old favorites. The widow disposed of her old birds and bought the new ones, but was grieved and mortified to find that they were not nearly as good as the birds she parted with. "Alas," she cried, "what have I done? I have parted with my favorites, which always kept me in eggs, and have got something in place which are of little value, and which do not pay for their keep." And she made haste to dispose of her new acquisition and get back her favorites. Moral—Never part with something tried and true for an unknown quantity. The old proverb that "a new broom sweeps clean" does not apply in the matter of fowls or friends.

George Vanderbilt's Hens.

There doubtless are people in the world who would envy the hens on George Vanderbilt's estate at Bar Harbor last winter. These aristocratic biddies live in a palatial residence heated with hot water. The floor is washed once a week. They have the choicest grains for food and lettuce was grown in a hothouse for their especial delectation. They responded with a liberal supply of eggs all winter, and the incubators are turning out the broilers that will be found very satisfying to the Vanderbilt appetite this spring.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

TURKEY CULTURE.

Experience of a Woman Who Has Made the Business a Success.

By turning to my record book, says a young woman in an exchange, I find that the number of eggs received from my four hen turkeys last season was 73. In addition to these, I bought 18 eggs of a neighbor who was about to move away, making 91 eggs all told. I experimented with the hatching of a few of the eggs, which resulted rather disastrously, hence my total hatch was but 71. Of these 61 turkeys reached maturity.

Of those that died three were accidentally killed by the mother turkey. The same number succumbed to disease, while the remainder met their fate in a way to me unknown.

I doubt not but that the long rainy season which came to us in the late springtime last year is well remembered by all. I told you at the time that I was doing all I possibly could to keep my flock warm, dry and the quarters cleanly until the clouds should roll by, knowing that these conditions were imperative.

Of course I watched the little ones closely in order that I might detect at once any signs of disease, should such present themselves.

One morning I noted that several when breathing opened the mouth slightly, as a chicken does when first affected with gapes. I saw also that there was a puffing out of the skin just beyond the nostrils and heard a slight sound as air was inhaled. Upon examination I found that the nostrils were closed by a gluey substance, and that at the sides of the mouth and under the tongue a yellowish canker had formed. I at once gathered into a basket all that were thus afflicted—eight in number—and carried them indoors. I then cleared the nostrils and gave each patient on the end of a stiff feather a dose of vaseline, taking pains to turn the feather in a way that should touch all of the affected parts of the mouth and throat, and as far as possible carry the vaseline into the nasal passages. I was careful also to rub the nostrils with the vaseline. Three hours afterward I sprinkled into each throat a small quantity of pulverized chlorate of potash. This treatment of vaseline and chlorate of potash alternately, at intervals of three hours, I continued until the canker had disappeared. The patients all recovered but one. I found afterward that this protracted "wet spell" was a source of great mortality among the flocks of my acquaintances in this vicinity. Some lost from one-third to one-half their flocks, while one lady more unfortunate than the others had remaining only ten from the goodly number of 55.

In rearing turkeys it is always safe to assume that the experience of several successive years will vary sufficiently to prevent monotony, and I must confess to you, my sisters, that during the past season my flock has eclipsed with such variation anything I have hitherto known. In the first place, I had at least 20 turkeys more than I have had in previous years. This increase in number doubtless produced the second variation—viz., a scarcity of insects—and this scarcity was the prime cause of the third variation, the long distance which the turkeys journeyed daily. As it is a cardinal principle with me that nightfall must find my turkeys at home, for weeks we sought them daily, lest they should fail to come of their own accord. This seeking was a weariness to the flesh when other needful duties had furnished sufficient muscular exercise without it. It served, however, to test most thoroughly my enthusiasm and persistence, which, truth compels me to state, on several occasions was very nearly vanquished. However, the flock did not remain out a night during the summer.

It has of late years been my custom to feed my flock morning and night, all through the season. This food has consisted (after the young turkeys have reached about 3 months in age) of rations of whole corn and oats. This year the sudden and large advance in the price of corn led to a fourth variation, as I was forced to seek a less expensive substitute. This I found in small potatoes purchased of a neighboring market gardener. These potatoes we boiled in an arch kettle, and when done poured in a quantity of ground corn, oats and wheat middlings, mashing together while hot. This combination afforded a very acceptable substitute for the whole grain. I continued this diet until husking time (about the middle of October), when I changed to whole corn, feeding once a day a mash of cornmeal and milk. We found that under this system of feeding the turkeys were healthy, thrifty and well fattened, and when dressed for market were as fine a lot as we have ever sold, meriting the compliment paid by the market man, "Those turkeys are good enough for a presidential dinner."

A Winter Average.

I have 400 fowls, says a writer in Farm Poultry, 375 pullets and 25 3-year-olds, all S. C. White Leghorns. They are kept in 10 pens, 40 in a place, each pen being about 8 by 20 feet in size. The ration consists of wheat, which is by them about all the time, with a soft feed once a day, consisting of cornmeal and middlings, 40 per cent each, and ground oats, bran and B. B. B. to make the 100 per cent, and about 25 pounds of green bone a week.

As for results, I give my account for 1895 up to Feb. 8, simply noting here that our real cold weather commenced about Christmas and continued until that date without much let up:

EGGS SOLD.

January 4	1,059
January 11	1,193
January 18	1,335
January 25	1,495
February 1	1,469
February 8	1,627

A number of the best layers had their combs badly frozen during the recent blizzard, but they lay right on as if there was nothing the matter.

Although the Leghorns are said to be tender to the cold, I doubt if any of our Plymouth Rock and Wyandotte friends can beat that average just now.

THE STORY OF A CLIPPER.

She Sailed Like a Witch and Engaged In More Trades Than One.

A young Swede came to this country in 1851 with some money and the intention of building a craft to be fitted up for passengers to the World's fair in London. For this purpose he located himself at Portsmouth, contracted with shipbuilders who had shipyards at Eliot, just opposite Portsmouth, for a ship of about 1,000 tons, with expensive cabin arrangements for passengers. The model of the ship was that of an extreme clipper.

When nearly completed, the projector fell short of money. Masts, spars and sails had all been contracted for and were in a state of forwardness. The mechanics concluded to complete the ship and put her in the hands of Governor Goodwin of Portsmouth for sale, each contractor to take his pro rata of his contract.

When completed, the ship, under mechanics' lien, was transferred to the governor, brought to Boston, purchased by Sampson & Tappan, named the Nightingale and under the command of a Captain Damaresque sailed for Australia with a cargo valued at $125,000. From there she proceeded to China, where she took the highest freight of the season, £5 per ton for London. To test her merits Messrs. Sampson & Tappan published in the London Times a challenge to the British merchant fleet to race from the Downs to China and back for £10,000—a distance of nearly 30,000 miles. But no one could be found to accept the challenge. She was afterward sold to a Salem house, who sent her to Rio Janiero, where she was sold and sent to the coast of Africa as a slaver, was captured by a United States cruiser, the slaves liberated and the vessel sent home. She was subsequently used by the government during the rebellion, and after the close of the war was sold and put into the California trade. The Nightingale made the shortest known run from the equator to Melbourne—25 days. Her whole passage from New York was 08 days.—Proceedings of the Bostonian Society.

Sequel to the Fair Wheat Deal.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—T. W. McGlaufin and Eugene M. Breeze, the stock brokers who engineered the big Fair wheat deal have fallen out and McGlaufin has sued Breeze for an accounting, charging Breeze with embezzling and passing destroyed papers and mutilating records, especially those relating to the Fair wheat deal. A receiver has been appointed to close the business of the firm.

Afraid of Luxuries.

"Last winter," said Mr. H. H. Coleman of Chicago, "I had the pleasure of attending a swell dinner given by one of our millionaire townsmen, at which Gene Field was an invited guest.

"Field's brilliancy as a writer is in inverse ratio to his ability as a money getter. In fact, the element of thrift is sadly wanting in his makeup.

"There were many good things to tempt the palate, among them strawberries, which are a costly luxury in the dead of winter at Chicago.

"When Field's bowl of berries were placed beside him, he looked at them with the scrutinizing air of an epicure, and then, in a very emphatic way, pushed them to one side, noticing which his host said:

"'Aren't you fond of strawberries, Mr. Field?'

"'Yes, very much indeed, but they spoil my appetite for prunes.'"—Washington Post.

EXPERIMENTS WITH POULTRY.

Laying Qualities of Several Well Known Varieties.

Four years ago last winter I made an experiment with eight varieties of chickens, says a writer in the Wisconsin agricultural report. I had a pen 80 feet long, divided into eight 10 foot rooms. My object was to determine: 1. Which was the better winter layer? 2. Could the S. C. Brown Leghorn be classed among the layers? As I said before, the pens were all 10 feet wide, but the first was longer than the others. It ran back 8 feet farther under a haymow. In that pen I put 22 Leghorn pullets; next, 10 Light Brahma hens; next, 12 Barred Plymouth Rock pullets; next, 15 Langshan Houdan pullets; next, 8 American Dominiques. In the last pen I put 12 Silver Spangled Hamburgs. When I fed one flock, I passed right along through and fed all the others; the same as to cleaning the pens, watering the fowls, etc. In fact, they all fared exactly the same. The results were very satisfactory in a financial way, as I had a contract for 30 cents per dozen for the eggs, and most of them did nobly. The egg record I have lost, but what I remember and started out to determine is one of the fixed things in my memory. The Light Brahmas and the Langshans were about equal; Plymouth Rock, third; Wyandotte, fourth; Houdan, fifth; Dominique, sixth. The Hamburgs were not in it, but the S. C. Brown Leghorn pullets were way ahead and out of sight. I remember distinctly that in three cold days in January the 22 pullets laid 56 eggs. You must bear in mind these pens were warm, water seldom freezing overnight. In my opinion, it teaches one thing plainly: The hen is simply an egg machine, and if in proper condition, fed the right kind of feed, water, light and warmth supplied, she must either lay or die, and most of them prefer to lay.

Ordinarily eggs cut quite a figure in the poultry business on the farm, and there is no trouble in getting good prices in winter, but from now until November requires a little more thought and trouble.

Since I learned that an unfertile egg keeps better than a fertile one I have had no trouble in getting good prices for eggs that are laid during summer. As soon as the breeding season is over kill off or remove every male bird on the place. Gather your eggs fresh every day. Have some cheap, clean barrels or boxes ready; also a barrel of dry salt. When you come in with the eggs, go directly to the cellar with them where your boxes and salt are. Cover the bottom about an inch deep with salt. Now take the eggs one at a time and gently press them, big end down, into the salt. When you have covered the surface with eggs, touching each other, cover them with another layer of salt, and so on up until fall. In November your eggs will be in good condition. All the trouble you will find will be to wash the salt from them carefully. Your barrel of salt will do for another season, or, better perhaps, feed it out to the stock. There is one extra precaution—be sure all the eggs are fresh and no cracked shells.

Mating Up Breeding Pens.

It is best to select the breeding pens by the 1st of February to be certain that the eggs will be all right and the chicks pure bred. A breeding pen of Leghorns may be made up of one male and 10 or 12 females, but of the larger breeds there should only be eight females in a pen. In making up the pen the females should be as nearly alike as possible, and if all are of one blood it is better for the progeny. Being of the same blood lines will be truer to the style the breeder wants to perpetuate. If there is a deficiency in the females, it should be counteracted by having a male that shows up strong in those sections where the females are deficient. Two-year-old females should be mated with yearling males, and pullets should be put with a 2 or 3 year old male. Never breed from pullets at all unless for some extra strain. The chicks from mature parents are stronger when first hatched and grow into better specimens nearly every time.

Five Cents a Day For Food.

By giving a change of food from grain to something bulky a great saving may be made. A pound of clover and a quart of bran should not cost over 2 cents, yet it should be a meal for 20 hens, and a good meal at that, for it is a combination which is conducive to egg production. The next morning a pound of cut meat and bone should serve as a meal, and it need not cost over a cent. At night two pounds of wheat or corn, costing about 2 cents, should answer. A flock of 20 hens can be fed for 5 cents a day, and if but three eggs per day are received in winter they will pay for all the food for the hens.

Nests For Turkeys.

Old barrels may be utilized for making admirable nests for turkeys. Knock out both heads with the exception of one-third of each. Sink the barrel in the ground on its side nearly as deep as the portions of the heads left in. Fill the barrel nearly even with the head pieces left in with dirt. Round out in the center to nest shape; put in sufficient fine wilted grass. Cover the barrel with brush so to partially hide it and keep it from blowing away. This is an ideal nest for turkey hens, and they soon find it and take to it very readily.

Green Bone For Poultry.

Another great boom for the use of green cut bone as a poultry food is passing over the country. It was long ago settled that this form of bone presents a very cheap source of "muscle makers" for the hen. As usual, any reference to this subject calls out questions from those who want to know if the cut bone will not make a good fertilizer. The green bones cut up much easier than the dry ones, and also contain more nitrogen because of their meat and gristle.

"THE BRACELET."

It Was Beautiful Until It Became a Reminder of His Doubt.

"Here," he said, "is a bracelet. Wear it always, that like our love it may prove endless and unbroken in its circle." And from a silken case, in which the name of the goldsmith glistened, he drew the pledge of their new affections. She stood before him, radiantly palpitating, as it seemed to him in the ecstasy of his attention—perhaps with the pleasure of so rare a trinket. The diamonds lost their luster in the rapture which her flashing eyes conveyed. Holding her hand, he was adjusting the gift to the flexible wrist into which tapered her well rounded arm—its skin seemed whiter now, as if expressive of so much purity about to receive the binding earnest of his words.

"But," he said, hesitating suddenly, "I must tell you, and yet why should I? This bracelet, by the touch of some mysterious magic—so the jeweler tells me, and yet I can hardly believe it—shrinks about the wrist of her who proves untrue, and its wearer loses forever the use of her hand, which then hangs limp and lifeless, in token of her perfidy."

"Surely," she answered, "you cannot wish to put me to such a test as this who need none. I should wear it were it not to me but an eternal reminder of your doubt, each diamond but an eye to watch—and it is much too gaudy. A plain ring will do for me."—Philadelphia Press.

Love Letters.

There ought to be a law making it a capital crime to keep any letter more than six months. More than half the trouble in this world—the sort of trouble, I mean, that breaks people's hearts and is occasionally aired in the divorce courts—is caused by letters foolishly preserved. Of course sensible people never write letters that all the world might not read. But all the sensible people are dead, for I venture to say there is not one of us who has not at some period of his life poured forth his soul in a letter he'd give his ears never to have written. If you are a man, it doesn't so much matter, for even if your letters to your old sweetheart do fall into the hands of her present husband it isn't at all likely he'll read them. Men haven't enough curiosity in the matter. Honorable scruples? Not a bit of it—simply lack of curiosity. But if you are a woman doesn't it make you writhe in spirit to think of those letters you wrote Jack or Will or George when you were sure he was the only man in the world? Of course the girl he married has read them—trust a woman for that—and she has made fun of your soul's outpourings, and—well, it's enough to turn one's hair white to think of it. Love letters ought to be written in ink that would fade in a fortnight, but so long as they are not people who keep them ought to be put into solitary confinement for all the rest of their lives.—Washington Post.

THE ORIGINAL ARYAN.

I am the ancient Aryan,
  And you have done me wrong.
I did not come from Hindustan—
  I've been here all along.

I never traveled from the east
  In huge successive waves.
You'll find your ancestors deceased
  Inside your own old caves.

There my remains may now be sought,
  Mixed up with mastodons,
Which very long with flints I fought
  Before I fought with bronze.

In simple skins I wrapped me round
  Ere mats I learned to make.
I dug my dwellings in the ground
  Or reared them on a lake.

I had no pen, I'm sure of this,
  Although you say I penned
All manner of theologies
  In Sanskrit and in Zend.

My nature you've misunderstood.
  When first I sojourned here,
I worshiped chunks of stone or wood;
  My rites were rather queer.

The more my little ways you scan
  The less you'll care to praise
And bless the dear old Aryan
  Of neolithic days.

They've mixed me up till, I declare,
  I hardly can report
Whether I first was tall and fair,
  Or I was dark and short.

But on two things I take my stand
  Through all their noise and strife—
I didn't come from Asia, and
  I had no higher life.
—Punch.

DECEIVED BY A DUDE.

How a $3,500,000 Bid by an Unknown Man Was Taken Seriously.

Samuel P. Schuckers died recently at Wooster, O. He was a brother of J. W. Schuckers, private secretary of Salmon P. Chase, and brother-in-law of John H. Oberly, ex-civil service commissioner. An interesting incident is recalled by Schuckers' death which has never found its way in the newspapers. The incident occurred a number of years ago, and during the time of the sale of the Lake Shore railroad at Cleveland it happened that Schuckers and John McSweeney, the great criminal lawyer, met at the sale. McSweeney had but a short time before made a great hit by his political speeches at Cleveland and Philadelphia and was attracting attention all over the country. At this particular time he was trying a case at Cleveland. Young Schuckers was in these days a veritable dude and very spruce.

He went to Cleveland to have a time, as he always left Wooster to celebrate, and was having a good, glorious time on this particular occasion. He was small and wiry in stature and always carried a silk umbrella. It happened that he met McSweeney in the rotunda just as he had finished an argument and while the sale of the Lake Shore railroad was going on. They stopped for a moment at the edge of the excited crowd bidding in the road. There were a number of syndicates represented—foreign, Vanderbilts, Goulds and others. The bidding had reached $3,100,000. In a spirit of devilishness young Schuckers bid $3,500,000. In a moment a rush was made toward the new bidder, and a demand was made to know what syndicate he represented. His only reply was, with a wave of his silk umbrella, "Go away from me." The excited representatives of the other syndicates asked for a recess, which was granted, and in 20 minutes they came back, when the bid was raised to $4,000,000 and sold.

Mr. Schuckers' spruce appearance and being in company with the great criminal lawyer had led them to believe he represented some secret syndicate who were trying to gain possession of the valuable railroad property.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Napoleon's Memory.

Napoleon had a wonderful memory. When emperor, he once surprised his council with his intimate knowledge of Roman law and was asked how he had obtained it. He stated that when a lieutenant he had once been placed under arrest and was in prison for two weeks. During that time the only book at his command was a treatise on Roman law. He sat down and in two weeks mastered the volume so completely that 20 years later he could repeat long passages from its pages. He never forgot a face or a name and would often greet private soldiers by their names, sometimes alluding to the march or the battle where he had seen them before. He kept in his head all the details of his military movements, and it was said of him that during the march to Italy and Marengo he knew where every pound of the supplies for the use of the army was located. It is said that he remembered the name of every officer to whom he ever issued a commission.

Orderly Music.

A colonel in the French army, who had a great eye for neatness, but not much of an ear for music, took occasion one day to compliment his bandmaster on the appearance of his men. "Their uniforms are neat," said the colonel, "and their instruments are nicely polished and kept in order, but there is one improvement that I must insist upon."

"What is it, colonel?"

"You must train your men, when they perform, to lift their fingers all at exactly the same time and at regular intervals on their instruments, so—one, two! One, two!"—London Answers.

Sure to Be the Case.

"I can't tell you," said the experienced suburbanite in reply to the question of his new neighbor, "when the next train goes, but I can tell you what your chances of catching it are."

"What are they?" inquired the new neighbor eagerly.

"Well, if you run as hard as you can," said the experienced resident, "you have 15 minutes to wait, and if you merely walk you'll find the train just pulling out."—Chicago News.

Mozart had a very sweet voice, though it was by no means strong. His conversational tones were well modulated and pleasing.

Catherine the Great never forgot a face or a name.

Heat of Incandescent Lamps.

It has been shown that cotton wool, cotton cloth and black silk would be set on fire in two to six minutes if saturated with india rubber and packed around an electric glow lamp of 32 candle power, but would not take fire if not saturated with india rubber. Captain Exler has now found that a 16 candle lamp, sunk in paraffin, reaches a maximum temperature of 94 degrees C., and a 25 candle lamp 101 degrees C. (213 degrees F.). A layer of gunpowder, ecrasite or pulverulent pyroxylin was not set on fire, but when spread on wood or other material opaque to heat rays the ecrasite melted, the gunpowder lost its sulphur, and its niter melted, the pyroxylin darkened and the wood charred. With two lamps in a cavity of wood the temperature rose to 215 degrees C., still without igniting the explosives, however. The breaking of a lamp did not explode pyroxylin or gunpowder, but fired an explosive gaseous mixture.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SECRETS OF THE HEART.

Deep down 'neath the bosom of the ocean,
  Unsounded by plummet or line,
At peace from the storm and commotion
  That rages o'er its hillows of brine,
There are secrets that time shall not fathom,
  There are jewels unknown to earth's mart.
As deep, as true and as precious
  Is the voice of the fond, faithful heart.
—Jessie Bartlett Davis.

SAWDUST VALUABLE.

Modern Discovery For the Utilization of a Heretofore Useless Offal.

One of the methods whereby profit has been made from sawdust is the manufacture from it of oxalic acid, which is a simple process, producing a material in wide commercial demand in the art of dyeing and other chemical arts. As intimated, the process is not only simple, but the outfit for conducting it does not involve a large investment. The principles involved are not complicated, and the process can be carried out by cheap labor under the superintendence of a fairly intelligent director.

Oxalic acid is frequently met with in the vegetable kingdom, especially in combination with gases which destroy its poisonous character. Oxalate of lime is found in considerable quantity in the rhubarb plant. Oxalate of potash is found in the sorrel, and oxalate of soda in salicornia and sal soda. Formerly the acid was obtained from the sorrel, Oxalis acetosella, but more recently from sugar by the action of nitric acid upon it. The nitric acid and sugar are boiled for some time, then evaporated to dryness, and the oxalic acid formed is purified by crystallization from water. A much cheaper material than sugar is sawdust. In this case an alkali must be employed instead of an acid, as well as at a higher temperature. The operation is conducted in an iron vessel of suitable size and shape, and either caustic soda or potash is employed, the yield being greater with the latter.

Some recent experiments made go to prove that a mixture of 40 parts of caustic potash to 60 parts of caustic soda will produce as large a yield as when potash alone is used, provided the operation be performed in shallow vessels with thin layers of the material, avoiding as far as possible the fusing of the mass. Soft woods, such as pine and fir, produce larger quantities of oxalic acid than hard wood like oak. The proportion of the wood to alkali should not exceed 75 to 100, and the temperature should be about 480 degrees F.—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Vaux Did Dance With Her.

The story often told that the late Hon. Richard Vaux had danced with Queen Victoria has been denied quite frequently since his death, but as a matter of fact he did dance with the queen. He was not her partner, it is true, but danced in what was known as the queen's cotillon at the ball given in her honor in 1837, when he was secretary of the United States legation. Mr. Vaux was selected by the queen herself as one of the seven persons to join with her in the dance, a very great honor. In the course of the evolutions in the cotillon he danced with the queen. This statement was made by Mr. Vaux to a well known Pennsylvanian who served with him in the Fifty-first congress.—Philadelphia Record.

Marriage of the Dead.

A strange custom prevails among a certain tribe in the Caucasus. When a single young man dies, some one who has carried to the grave a marriageable daughter in the course of the year calls upon the bereaved parents and says:

"Your son is sure to want a wife. I'll give you my daughter, and you shall deliver to me the marriage portion in return."

A friendly offer of this description is never rejected, and the two parties soon come to terms as to the amount of the dowry, which varies according to the advantages possessed by the girl in her lifetime. Cases have been known where the young man's father has given as much as 30 cows to secure a dead wife for his dead son.—Buch fur Alle.

Laura Faught of Mankato, who took the dose of arsenic on the night of the 31st of May, lingered along until Tuesday afternoon. She died in great agony. This was the second attempt, and when it seemed likely to be a failure she was very much incensed. It would appear that she had got the third dose.

The worst storm ever known in that section raged through the townships of Folden, Effington and Parkers Prairie and covered the ground with hail to the depth of four and five feet. It cut a swath of about three miles wide through the best farming section in that part of Otter Tail county, totally destroying all crops and in some cases killing and injuring live stock.

The adjutant general is very anxious to hear from some member of Company A, Fourth Minnesota volunteers, who knew John Anderson. The widow is now presenting a claim for a pension to the state, but lacks several links in the chain of testimony. The woman is poor and in every way worthy of relief, and while her case is probably a good one, the department cannot act without the necessary evidence.

Ethelbert Stewart, special agent of the United States department of labor, Washington, is in St. Paul, gathering statistics of strikes and lockouts from Jan. 1, 1887, to June 30, 1894. Mr. Stewart represents Carroll D. Wright in the field work. Facts are gathered from both sides to the controversies. The department has a complete record of strikes from 1880, and under instructions from congress will continue to keep up such a record.

THE WOOD DUCK'S FIRST SWIM.

How the Mother Gets the Little Ones From the Nest to the Water.

A few miles from my home there is a lake that has for years been the abiding place of a colony of wood ducks. I have spent hours along the shores watching these prettiest of water fowls. The wood duck has one peculiarity not possessed by other members of the duck family—it builds its home high up in the cavity of some decayed limb, usually one that juts out over the water.

The eggs, from seven to 13 in number, are creamy white in color. Housekeeping is begun in May, and the young are ready to leave the nest early in June.

I was curious to know how the little ducks reach the water from their lofty homes. I had often seen them, when hardly clear of their shell, swimming about with their mother and felt convinced that they never could have left home unaided.

One bright June morning fortune favored me. I had rowed along the lake shore to pay a visit to a houseful of noisy red wing blackbirds. My boat was lying motionless among the tall cattails that fringed the shores of the lake.

Suddenly I heard a loud splash behind me, and turning to look I saw on the water a short distance away, just shaking the spray from her wings, a female wood duck and near her two tiny yellow balls, so small that they resembled water lilies floating on the surface.

The old bird took wing, hovered and circled above her babies for a few minutes and then flew to a cavity in a tall tree, a short distance away. In a short time the male bird, arrayed in the handsomest of plumage, joined his mate. Then for a few minutes I could hear a soft cooing noise, which reminded me of husband and wife discussing some important point relative to the welfare of their children.

The cooing soon stopped and the mother duck appeared in the doorway of her home. Then she dropped toward the water at a slight angle. As her breast struck the surface she immediately dived, and where her body had been I was surprised to see two little ducklings swimming about as unconcerned as though they had been traveling in the water for years.

The routine of flying to the nest was repeated four times in rapid succession, and each time it resulted in an addition of two to the family in the water, which kept growing until it numbered 12. Then the mother duck swam out in the lake, followed by her brood, while the male bird brought up the rear of the procession, acting, no doubt, as a guard and protector.—C. S. Shick in Philadelphia Times.

He Got the Sugar.

The following anecdote of a tame monkey, to whom was given a corked bottle with a lump of sugar inside, indicates that the animal, though unable to invent, could imitate. A phrenologist would say that the monkey had "perception," but not "causality." How to get at the sugar was a problem that bade fair to drive him crazy.

Sometimes in an impulse of disgust he would throw the bottle out of his reach and then be distracted until it was given back to him. At other times he would sit with a countenance of intense dejection, contemplating the bottled sugar, and then, as if pulling himself together for another effort at solution, would sternly take up the problem afresh and gaze into the bottle.

He would tilt it one way and try to drink the sugar out of the neck, and then suddenly reversing it, try to catch it as it fell out at the bottom.

Under the impression that he could capture the sugar by surprise, he kept rasping his teeth against the glass in futile bites, and warming to the pursuit of the revolving lump used to tie himself into regular knots round the bottle.

Fits of the most ludicrous melancholy would alternate with spasms of delight as a new idea seemed to suggest itself, followed by a fresh series of experiments.

Nothing availed, however, until one day a light was shed upon the problem by a jar containing bananas falling from the table with a crash and the fruit rolling about in all directions. His monkeyship contemplated the catastrophe and reasoned upon it.

Lifting the bottle high in his paws, he brought it down upon the floor with a tremendous noise, smashing the glass into fragments, after which he calmly transferred the sugar to his mouth and munched it with much satisfaction.—Youth's Companion.

VARIETIES OF MARBLE.

Where the Different Kinds Are Found and Their Relative Value.

The selection of marble for a monument is altogether a matter of taste. The finest statuary marbles are found in Italy and Greece, but are very expensive, costing from $15 to $20 per cubic foot. In the United States good statuary marble has for several years been quarried at West Rutland, Vt., where a layer from three to four feet thick is interstratified with 40 or 50 feet of clouded marble. The finest of statuary marble is found at Pittsford, Vt., where there is a bed 20 feet thick, from which blocks have been taken capable of taking a very fine finish. This marble belt extends north and south of Rutland county, through Vermont and Massachusetts, but it loses in quality in both directions. Toward the north it is finer and harder, but less sound, and toward the south it becomes coarser. Another belt of white marble extends along the flanks of the Alleghanies, through a part of Massachusetts, through New York and Maryland and into Virginia beyond the Potomac river. It is quarried at various places in Westchester county, N. Y., and at Baltimore. At Canaan, Conn., and at Lee, Mass., and other places in New England, good building marble is quarried. Marble from Lee was used for the extension of the capitol at Washington. Variegated marbles are found in several localities in the United States. A mottled lilac, chocolate and white, known as Tennessee marble, is regarded with favor for mantels, tables, etc. Another of red, brown and white is quarried at Burlington, Va., but it is rather difficult to work on account of the silica it contains.—Montreal Star.

HARRY'S APPEAL.

Hayward's Attorney Serves the Notice on the Attorney General.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 18.—Shortly after 2 o'clock p. m. Attorney Shumaker, for Harry T. Hayward, served the notice of appeal to the supreme court on Attorney General Childe in his office in St. Paul. The ceremony was very commonplace and consisted of throwing the notice down in front of the official for the latter to read. Attorney General Childs looked the paper over carefully for a few seconds and then acknowledged the service by writing his name in the proper place across the blank. Following the service upon Attorney General Childs, the notice of appeal was served upon Frank M. Nye in this city and upon Clerk of the Courts C. N. Dickey. It had previously been filed with the clerk of the supreme court, and this ended the matter.

Will Be Heard in October.

Attorney Shumaker said concerning the appeal:

"We have not filed it before for business reasons. Just why I am not at liberty to say. I don't see how the hearing can possibly be had at this session of the supreme court. The body will adjourn July 3 in accordance with the law and will not meet again until October. The date of the hearing will rest solely with Attorney General Childs and he can put it first upon the October calendar or last just as he wants to."

Following the service upon the appeal Attorney Shumaker called upon Hayward in the county jail and showed him the document. The prisoner regarded it for a few moments, but expressed no opinion. He did not regard the paper even curiously.

His Girls.

Mr. Wilcox, the husband of the poetess of passion, is a common sense business man, with one big piece of sentiment in his disposition—that is his love for his wife. On one occasion, when he was traveling, he placed six or seven photographs of his wife on the mantel of his room in the hotel. The pert chambermaid, whisking them off with her feather duster, electrified the loving spouse by exclaiming: "My! What a lot of girls you've got!"—Chicago Herald.

PRACTICAL.

At the Dairymens Convention Held at Mankato Earmer John L. Gibbs Gives The Following Sensible Advise To The Farmers.

To the farmers of Northern Minnesota I wish to say, you are now doing what we were doing in Southern Minnesota a few years ago. You are growing wheat as a principal crop. I am not here to tell you to give this up at once. You could not do it if you would, and it would not be advisable for you to make the attempt. No farmer can change his whole system of farming without time and preparation and considerable expense. You have the facilities and conditions for growing large crops of wheat, and you will do so for years to come. You can however, without materially lessening your wheat acreage, utilize thousands of acres of grass that annually go to waste, and you ought to do it. In no other way can you do this better advantage than by beginning with a few cows and increace your number from time to time as your means will permit. In a short time you will have a sufficient number of cows in each neighborhood to justify you in building creameries, and making dairying an important part of the farm management. When this time comes you will enter upon an era of prosperity, such as we are now enjoying in Southern Minnesota, and such as you have never dreamed of. Your store bills will not run until after harvest, in too many cases not to be met then. But all of your little and necessary bills will be paid with your creamery checks, which you will receive each month. You will enter upon a new method of transacting all of your business. You will pay your expenses as you go. This will be worth more to this section of the state than I could tell you in a dozen speeches.

In building your creameries you can do no better than to adopt our plan. Let the farmers of a neighborhood meet in the school house, and discuss the whole subject. Do not move to fast, but hold two or three meetings, if necessary. Select a committee to make a canvas of the neighborhood, for the purpose of reporting at a future meeting, the number of cows which the owners will pledge to the concern. Rememder that you must have a sufficent number of cows to make the creamery a success, otherwise it will be a burden instead of a source of revenue. When it is determined to proceed with the enterprise, adopt a set of by-laws, elect a president, a secretary, and a board of directors. authorize them to borrow the capital, erect the plant and place a buttermaker in charge. You can do all this without giving a contract to outside parties. Let it be from begining to finish a neighborhood enterprise, owned and managed by the farmers. Each farmer in proportion to the number of cows he has pledged to the concern should have stone for the foundation and lumber for the building. There will then remain the hardware bill, the labor of the carpenter and the machinery to be provided for with money. By adopting this plan you can build a creamery with all the modern improvements that will take care of the milk from more than a thousand cows for $3,000.

And if you have a sufficent amount of milk you can pay the indebtedness without ever feeling that you have done so. For you will receive more money from the beginning for your cows than you are receiving now. Create a sinking fund for this purpose by levying a tax of 5 cents on each 100 pounds of milk. In this manner most of the creameries in Freeborn county have paid for themselves in from two to three years, and have enriched the patrons at the same time.

In conclusion allow me to say that I look upon the lot of the farmer as full of promise. We feed and cloth the world. What higher or nobler work is there for man to engage in? Let him who can suggest one speak. There should be no antagonism between the city and the country. Each is a part of a harmonious whole. The laws of nature have said that there shall be the city and the country and these laws will remain forever. Throughout the whole civilized world cities are growing at a rapid rate, at a rate that was not anticipated fifty years ago; villages and towns are springing up on every hand. These people must all be fed and clothed from the farm. Let us congratulate ourselves that we are farmers. Let us feed the people and reap our reward.

THE TOURNAMENT.

The Firemen's Tournament, although not as great a success as it would have been had it not rained, was after all quite a successful affair and very beneficial not only to the fire laddies themselves but to the communities they represent, because such events serve to awaken and keep alive a spirit of emulation and interest in the work that tends to develope efficiency. The home company proved themselves royal entertainers and the visiting companies seemed to enjoy themselves hugely. The next event of the kind will be held at Hallock next year.

DULUTH, PAST AND PRESENT.

It was our pleasure last week to visit the Twin Cities and elsewhere, finishing our little outing by a run up to Duluth via the Omaha. Much of the way over this route the road runs through some of the most dismal and forlorn looking country—pine lands mostly, chiefly valuable for their wealth of pine lumber which has been pretty generally stripped by this time, leaving a wilderness of jack pines, growing in a red soil that resembles the soil in the sunny southlands that rejoices the heart of every true Georgian native who has a mule—and a wife, to work it. Ever and anon as we approached some wretched, forlorn looking village the brakesman would stick his head in the door of our parlor coach —the Omaha runs one of those necessories to luxurious comfort even up into that forlorn region—and in a voice very much resembling the rough, guttural of the aboriginal settler—lo, the poor Indian, (and about as intelible) roar out some name or other never before heard on earth or—or even in East Grand Forks, until one was led to wonder if, could the place we happened to be approaching, only hear the brakeman's wild-eyed efforts to name it, whether it would not get up on its ear and resent it—but when the place itself would appear in view, so utterly wretched was its personal appearance that it did not seem to matter much whatever one did call it—anything at all would not be a misfit. Arriving at Duluth we found a busy, bustling city, stretching for 20 miles or more along the lake front, running back up the hill for a distance of eight or ten streets, and sometimes a few more. Nineteen or twenty school houses, the smallest of which must have cost way up in the thousands to build, besides the mammoth high school building that alone must have cost as much as all the rest, shows how well the educuctional interests are looked after, while her many churches showed that the spiritual as well as the temporal welfare of her citizens is duly provided for, and then with her flouring mills, her saw mills, her factories, her mammoth elevators and her big coal docks—said to be the largest in the world, was a striking contrast to the first time the writer visited the city, in '72, when Duluth was comparatively a small hamlet with only a few hundred inhabitants and a few years later becoming bankrupt to such an extent that she was obliged to take a reef or two in her sails and come down from a city to a village organization—or go busted. To-day she is one of the finest cities in the state and if she keeps right on not many years will elapse before she will be the biggest city in America. Along about the days we speak of A. S. Chase bought a half dozen or so wind-broken mules and started a street car line—to-day Duluth has as fine an electric line as can be found in the country anywhere. On July 4th, 1876, the writer was in Duluth, and standing on the docks facing the lake the eye gazed upon acres and acres of floating ice that reached out into the lake for miles, farther than the eye could reach, and by just turning around and facing inland one could see thousands of flowers in bloom and hundreds of gardens in which many vegetables and much small fruit was all ready for use. Duluth is to-dey a great city and destined to be the Lowell of America in a very few years time.

Cheap Excursion to Detroit Lake and Return July 4th.

On July 4th the Northern Pacific will run special train to Detroit and return, leaving Crookston at 7 a. m. Returning will leave Detroit about 8 p. m. One fare for the round trip, $2.67.

GRANGER DAY.

The Farmers Of Polk County Meet At Fertile And Discuss Matters Of Importance To Agricultural Interests.

Great Interest Manifested Which Will No Doubt Result In Another Meeting There in the Near Future.

STATE FARMERS' INSTITUTE

The weather, Wednesday, was all that could be desired and secured a large attendance at the Fertile Institute. At the appointed hour the hall was well filled with farmers, many of whom had brought their wives, and all of whom it was wished had done so. Supt. Gregg first introduced Mr. Theo. Louis, of Wisconsin, and in a preliminary said that he had just learned that Freeborn county, Minnesota, sent more butter to the New York City market than any other county in the United States, and if one county in Minnesota can do so well in that line he believes that other counties can not only do that but raise corn and have diversified farming in all its lines. Mr. Louis said although corn is naturally a tropical plant, it had by degrees become used to the northern climate and the region of its growth was being extended every year. He spoke first upon the proper selection of seed. He goes through the field early in the fall, securing the largest and first ripe ears, gathering enough to make a second selection from. These are braided and hung up in his summer kitchen till thoroughly dried and protected from frost. He quoted Prof. Sturtavant, of Illinois, who found by experiment that he got a better yield of corn when that from the tips and butts was used as well as kernels from the rest of the cob. If a crop of clover cannot be turned under to prepare the way for corn, he would plow under a dressing of manure, as either the decaying clover or manure will make the soil oftentimes six degrees warmer. He would rather plant as late as the 20th of May than the 15th, if the latter day was cold and unfavorable, because the word with corn is "go" from the start, and although re-planting must be done when there is failure it never promises so well as a first planting successfully done. In answer to some inquiries about clover he mentioned the help that winter rye is to it. It will break up the soil, preserve the young clover plants from being blown about, let in sufficient sunshine for their growth, and be cut earlier than any other crop you can put with clover.

Mr. Carlyle, of Canada, next came forward with his churning lesson. The sample of cream was very fine indeed, so far as it had gone, but it was perfectly sweet instead of being soured and ripened. Upon the proper ripening of the cream will depend not only the right flavor but the best keeping qualities of the butter. It is learned by practice and experience than cream when ripened will pour like thick syrup, be glossy on the surface and the bubbles will not break easily, but back of all in making butter is the food and water given to the cow, because the best cow and the best butter separator cannot make a good product from poor, musty, insufficient food. He spoke especially of the bud flavors that came from stagnant, filthy water. One time he weighed the amount of water his best cow drank on a summer day. It was 180 pounds taken in five or six drinks, which shows the amount that is needed, as does also the analysis of milk, which contains 87 per cent. of water. He also spoke of having salt constantly before the cows. They would not take enough to harm them, but would be guided just right by nature. He prefers barrel salt to rock salt and a cow thus freely supplied will usually take about four ounces per day. Cleanly milking and the care of the churn appropriately followed. He especially dislikes a dish-cloth because it always leaves its trail behind it. Neither would he use soap, but instead clear water with a corn brush. He always scalds and airs the churn thoroughly. The whole process of butter-making from its first start to its neat doing up in parchment paper, wet in salt water, was gone through in sight of the audience, and every step explained and questions answered.

During the churning Mrs. Tilson of Wisconsin, took up the subject of shelter for fowls. The importance of a scratching shed was dwelt upon, because in this cold climate a house large enough for daily exercise is too cold at nights and a warm, small house is too crumped day times. Her first shed was of stakes and corn stalks. A straw shed might be tried by the farmers here till convinced of its usefulness. Of course the shed will always face the south. The exercise thus secured makes healthier hens, fills the winter egg basket and helps good batches in the spring. She next dwelt upon the importance of movable nests and roosts inside of the house so that everything can be taken apart and the house thoroughly cleaned at least once a year. Whitewash is a very cheap and wholesome application, if plenty of hot water is kept at hand to maintain the wash thin and hot. She showed various methods of keeping layers from sitters and stated that some years she had no stolen nests whatever in consequence of her clean, comforteble, well regulated hen houses. Her talk was quite fully illustrated by her own drawings. About three hundred books were given out and thus closed the morning session, of great interest and attention throughout.

The afternoon session opened with an equally good attendance. Mr. Carlyle took up the care of cows. He showed by diagrams his method of stabling. He does not tie the cow by the head but in reality confines her by the other end, putting across the back of the stall a small chain about three and a half feet from the floor. If she attempts to lie down too far back this chain catches her under the hums and compels her to move forward. A stall three feet six inches wide is ample. It should be made reasonably stout and though it can be made fence like on the upper part of its sides, the first boards on the bottom should come down to the floor, so that the cow when lying down will not push her feet in under and get caught. The manger is about twelve inches high so that she can readily get her head over it while lying down and chewing her cud. The stalls are from four feet five inches to four feet nine inches in length, according to the size of the cows. The drop behind them should be a shallow one so that the cow will not strain herself by slipping into it. Comfort in every way will add to the milk production of our cows.

Mr. Louis then took up the topic of shelter for hogs and after describing his own house, largely built by himself, he suggested that in this country of straw it could be pressed into bales like hay and these bales laid brick fashion on a foundation and make an excellent house. The hog which comes out of a hole in a straw pile, reeking with sweat in the morning, and eats its food from a snow bank, gets rheumatism quite as assuredly as a man would who jumped out of bed and ate his breakfast out of doors. He took up the feeding of hogs in all its bearings, speaking specially against the old sour swill barrel. dealing out diarrhoea. He also spoke about the dangers of breeding from immature stock. Until a creature is perfect itself, it cannot perfect its offspring. As he retains the older and proved sows, a fender around each little pen prevents her from lying upon and crushing her young.

Dr. Reynolds, of the Minnesota Experiment station, was the next speaker. With a rope he illustrated different ways of throwing cattle if it becomes necessary to pare their feet, ring their noses or saw their horns. The great point made in the treatment of our domestic animals is that a little prevention is much more effectual than a great deal of medicine, in which direction he is upheld by the whole of the medical profession of to-day. He told the farmers how to prevent milk fever in cattle, by being careful that they are not too highly fed, and in the same way to ward off azstoria in horses. He also showed them a specimen of surgeons' rubber adhesive plaster, most excellent for holding the skin together in any slight wound upon any creature. The question box was then opened, which drew out from Mr. Reynolds the suggestion that barked wire cuts should be left to nature and sunshine for their cure, considering the farmer has no surgical appliances and liniments, and all irritating things do more harm than good.

GRANDEST CONFEDERATION ON EARTH

LEMMEN BROTHERS' Big 3-Ring Circus! 30-Cage Menagerie Hippodrome, Sports, Etc., Etc.

The Great Show is booked for Crookston, Saturday July 6th and regarded as a whole, it is doubtless without parallel. Wherein it differs from others is this: In its rare variety, its endless interests, its boundless capacity to please every taste Here we have a regal Roman Hippodrome, a Five-Continent Menagerie, Three Big Circuses, a Wild Moorish Caravan, performing droves of Wild and Domestic Beasts, a huge Tropical Aquarium, Aviary, Royal Japanese Troups, Arabian Night's Entertainment, Spectacular, Splendid Free Street Parade, and Rajah, the Largest Elephant on Earth, rolled into one tremendous alliance, for but one price of admission; or more properly speaking, roaring, rushing, racing, marching, dancing gliding, tumbling, soaring, diving, and disporting under some ten acres of tents Whew! the very thought of it fairly makes one catch his breath. And not only is it all a very great, but is a very good, clean, admirably managed show, under the immediate eye of its proprietors, and free from any and all annoyance or objectionable association. Had Artemus Ward lived to see such an exhibition he would not have wondered why it always took three grown up persons to take one child to a circus, but would have increased the number of adults to at least a score.

LET THE WOUNDS HEAL.

Ohio's G. A. R. Commander Wants the Past Forgotten.

SANDUSKY, O., June 12.—The state G. A. R. held its annual encampment and parade here to-day. In delivering his report Commander Nutt said at the coming national encampment in Louisville the members of the G. A. R. should commingle with the Confederate veterans, not in a way to leave the inference to rising generations that there had been a quarrel between them and the differences were mutually mended by the agreement that both were partly wrong and partly right; but "meet them as we did when the battle was over, without boasting or exultation." Since this error has been conceded and acknowledged, we do not desire to open healed ruptures, nor to ungallantly raise a question on that line. As citizen soldiers and soldier citizens of one common country, with one flag and one interest, the preservation of the United States of America, let it be our aim to maintain the principles without concession, but to forget the fight so far as individuals are concerned."

Alluding to the loyalty of the G. A. R., the commander said the late strikes and dissensions had exercised the people in patriotic thought, end they are realizing the importance of eternal vigilance in maintaining a republic. "As an organization," he said, "the Grand Army keeps its ear to the 'phone and its thumb to the button, with forty rounds ready in in case of revolt, to defend any legal administration against anarchists or others who violate the laws."

THE DISTRICT COURT.

Sedate and Solemn,
Gives Us "Hot Stuff"
To fill This Column.
In The Quarrels of Humanity,
The Lawyers Reap
A Good Fat Fee.
The Judge, With Dignity and Grace,
Bids The Grand Jury Take Its Place.
Its Duties Faithfully to Pursue,
As By The Law Required To Do.
And Here You Have the History
Of This Polk County Mystery.

At 10 a. m. June 24, District court for Polk county was convened by Judge Ives. The printed calendar showed 78 civil and 37 criminal cases. On preliminary call over 50 of the civil and all the criminal cases appear as for jury trial. Two cases omitted from the calendar by mistake and seventeen appeal cases were added to the list, making a total of 132 cases.

Attorneys out of town in attendance, John A. Hendrick and B. S. Bennett, Fosston, Chas. E. Boughton, Red Lake Falls and Albert Johnson, from Goodhue county.

The grand jury was called and excused till 2 p. m., on account of some absentees.

At 2 p. m. the grand jury, 19 members, were sworn, charged by the court and set to work. James McDonald was appointed foreman.

The Court's charge to the Grand Jury was along the line as laid down by the statutes, leying particular stress upon the fact that the Court did not want them to persecute anybody, but that they should do their duty as jurors faithfully and honestly, without fear or favor of any man. This the court and county required of them.

The first case on the calendar, John Gilbert vs. Martin Erickson and John Erickson, was stricken from the calendar.

2. School district No. 103 vs. Joseph Lejambe, was continued.

3. Smith & Zimmers vs. Stone & Columbus was announced settled.

4. John P. Lundin vs. A. C. Rhinehart, tried at last term and jury disagreed, and No. 44, Jos. Netzer vs. City of Crookston, which has been before this court and the supreme court and remanded back to this court for a new trial, will be tried before Judge Searle on July 8th.

5. To be tried before the court.

6. Mary E. McAvoy vs. A. E. Brush, continued by consent.

19. S. N. Kolhaft vs. J. K. Ulstad was settled.

33. Ames Iron Works vs. Joseph Lejumbe, et al, was dismissed without cost to either party.

37. Town of Angus vs. Agnes Finlayson, judgment was entered in favor of the defendant, that the ditch asked for in the petition is not necessary for the proper construction of the highway.

45. First National bank, of Decorah, Iowa vs. Frank Zeydkt, et al, was continued by consent.

48. Windolin Luxemberg vs. John Luesnelle, Gossman and Montague for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant, came up on motion to amend answer. Motion allowed.

57. Chas. Baumnn, et al, vs. Chas. A. Anderson, Bennet and Street for plaintiff and J. A. Hendricks for defendant. Plaintiff moved for judgment on the pleading on the ground the answer is insufficient. Motion was denied.

The case of E. D. Childs Co. vs. Christ Engstad and N. O. Nelson, A. A. Miller, for plaintiff and Ole J. Vaule, for defendants, appeal from justice court, came up on motion to set aside a stipulation. The plaintiff sued defendants in justice court for damages for cutting timber on plaintiff's land in town of Woodside. Engelstad was the chairman of the town board and Nelson was the man who did the cutting of said timber. The town was laying out a road. When the case came into justice court it appears that W. E. Rowe was attorney for defendants and it further appears that Rowe, after consultation with his clients, proposed a withdrawal of the au-

SAID TO BE SHORT

Collector of Taxes at Spring Valley, Minn., Missing From Home.

WAS A PROMINENT ATTORNEY

Amount of the Defalcation Reported to Be Over $40,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 26.—A special to The Journal from Stewartville, Minn., says: It is reported in this section, and there is every reason to believe the report to be true, that A. R. Holman, a prominent attorney of Spring Valley, is a defaulter in a sum ranging between $40,000 and $50,000. The greater portion of this amount is Fillmore county tax money. For years the county treasurer has employed him to collect the taxes in the west end of the county and his returns have always been correct till now. The matter has been kept exceedingly quiet, but he has been gone since June 1.

His Whereabouts Is Unknown,

but it is thought that he is in the East somewhere, probably in New York city. The county treasurer and his bondsmen will have to make good the deficiency in taxes, as Holman had no bonds and was employed simply as a citizen to assist the treasurer in a part of the county hard to reach from Preston.

Holman is a prominent Mason, and is a member of the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen. His friends still hope he will turn up and that there is nothing criminal in his absence.

THE FITZSIMMONS TRIAL.

Prosecution Claims a Malicious Blow Caused Riordan's Death.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 26.—When court adjourned nine jurors had been accepted subject to peremptory challenge in the Fitzsimmons trial. One of the attorneys in the case expressed an opinion to the Associated Press representative after court adjourned that only two of these would finally be accepted. It is learned that the prosecution intends to show that Fitzsimmons struck a malicious blow and a knockout to tea.n Riordan that he should not become intoxicated as he was the night the fatality occurred.

TAYLOR'S BOND $25,000.

No Action Taken for Trial Previous to Aug 13.

PIERRE, S. D., June 26.—The attorneys for W. W. Taylor appeared before Judge Gaffy and presented further argument for immediate trial, but the judge adhered to his position of Saturday, to grant the hearing only in regular session on Aug. 13. The attorneys in the case agreed upon a bond of $25,000, and Judge Gaffy set it at that amount. Taylor's attorneys expect to secure bondsmen.

Confessed Train Wrecking.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 26.—The arrest of seven negroes, some living in Floresville and some in San Antonio, charged with wrecking trains on the San Antonio and Araneas Pass railroad during the past four months, has been made in this city. All the accused are trying to turn state's evidence. Two have confessed. The refusal of free rides on trains is their excuse for the crime.

Dividends from Insolvent Banks.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The comptroller of the currency has declared dividends in favor of the creditors of insolvent national banks as follows: Twenty-five per cent, National Bank of Kansas City, Kan.; 10 per cent, Lloyd's National bank of Jamestown, N. D.; 10 per cent, the Albuquerque, N. M. National bank; 4 per cent, the First National bank of Auburn, N. Y.

Wind Caused the Colima Wreck.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—An account of the wreck of the Colima has reached the state department from United States Consul Battle at Acapulco, Mex., dated June 8. He transmits the statement of Mr. Chilberg, corroborated by three other passengers and two seamen, saying that the wind was the cause of the wreck and probably a leak in the vessel.

The Reporter Sentenced.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 26.—Henry A. Warren, a reporter who played insane in order to be able to get inside the state asylum at Highlands and write it up, and who was adjudged guilty of contempt by Superior Judge Clark, was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 or serve 100 days.

Big Reward for a Murderer.

CHICAGO, June 26.—The West Chicago Street Railroad company has offered a reward of $5,000 for the capture and conviction of the murderers of C. B. Birob, the night receiver of the road, who was killed by robbers early Sunday morning.

Scott Case About Over.

BUTTE, Neb., June 26.—The great Barrett Scott case, which has been agitating Nebraska for two years, has closed. The case will now go to the jury. Conviction of the three alleged lynchers of Barrett Scott is extremely doubtful.

WILL LEASE IT.

How President Hill Will Get Control of the Northern Pacific.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The union of the Northern Pacific with the Great Northern is about to become an actual fact. But the Berlin plan has been modified. The Northern Pacific railroad will be leased by its stockholders to the Great Northern. President Hill, representing the Great Northern, will undertake to pay a rental sum that will cover all fixed charges on the reorganized basis. The nominal principal and interest of the bonds will be reduced so that the Great Northern can safely undertake to pay interest and make money from the expected surplus. The lease will give Mr. Hill complete control of the Northern Pacific, which will be operated jointly with the Great Northern.

Hill Master of the Situation.

This is the best the Northern Pacific stock and bondholders can expect under the circumstances. There may be some squirming but the Northern Pacific mortgages are so entangled and the interests so conflicting as to make President Hill master of the situation. This plan has not been announced formally as yet, and it may take some time to carry it into effect. But it meets with strong approval in financial circles, and with the powerful endorsement of Pierpont Morgan. Fully realized, it corresponds with the means by which the Great Northern secured control, in a friendly way, of the old St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba.

HAYWARD GETS A STAY.

Supreme Court Defers the Execution of the Sentence.

ST. PAUL, June 22.—The application for a stay of proceedings in the Hayward case was granted late Wednesday afternoon. The stay is for 30 days only. Assignments of error and the record were filed in the supreme court in the morning, and after the usual session of the court the matter was taken under advisement.

The discussion of the case was, of course, executive, but it was afterward learned that there was a division of opinion in the court as to whether the stay should be granted at all, considering that the filing of the notice of appeal was left until such a late date.

DIPHTHERIA THE CAUSE.

Five Children of One Family Died Within Two Weeks.

GRINNELL, Ia., June 25.—William Case has buried five children within two weeks. Diphtheria was the cause in each case. The father is blind. The five children constituted his entire family.

Hoppers Have Bacilli.

DENVER, June 24.—Professor S. P. Gillette, entomologist of the state agricultural college, after an examination of the fluids of some of the millions of grasshoppers that have died near Brighton, finds that they are dying not from the attacks of parasite insect, but from a contagious disease, caused by minute germs similar, but not exactly like the germs that cause diseases of cholera and tuberculosis in higher animals.

The Corbett Divorce Case.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Judge McAdam, in the special term of the supreme court on application of A. H. Hummel, has sent the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Ollie Corbett against James J. Corbett, the pugilist, to Edward Jacobs, as referee. Referee Jacobs will determine the issues and ascertain to what amount of alimony, if any, the plaintiff is entitled.

ROSEBERY RESIGNS

LIBERAL CABINET RESIGNS ON ACCOUNT OF FRIDAY'S VOTE.

Salisbury Asked to Form a Cabinet—His Acceptance Is Conditional—Parliament Must Be Dissolved and a General Election Held.

LONDON, June 26.—It is just announced that the outcome of the deliberations of the cabinet in consequence of the adverse vote in the house of commons on Friday is that Lord Rosebery, the prime minister, has tendered his resignation to the queen. Her majesty has therefore summoned Lord Salisbury, the leader of the Conservative party, to Windsor in connection with the formation of a Conservative ministry.

The leading Conservatives declare that the Marquis of Salisbury will not formally take office until parliament is dissolved. He will insist that the government, before yielding, shall appropriate an amount necessary for the expenditures for two months, to enable a general election to be held. The Conservatives will thus be in a position of attack instead of defense.

General Topic of Discussion.

Throughout the day the situation was the absorbing topic at the chief political clubs. Several members of the cabinet called in Downing street in the afternoon in the expectation of seeing Lord Rosebery, who returned from Windsor at 6 o'clock and drove to Downing street, where an informal cabinet meeting, lasting 25 minutes, immediately followed.

It is understood that the Marquis of Salisbury only agrees to form a cabinet on condition that parliament is dissolved. Nothing is known regarding the personnel of the new ministry, but complete harmony exists between the Liberal Unionists and the Conservatives.

The Irish members are extremely uneasy and dissatisfied. They state that after acting for three years as the strongest arm of the government they are deeply concerned at the without passing any of the principal Irish measures. Not only has home rule not progressed, but the measure concerning the Christian brothers, the county council bill, which reached a second reading, the grand jury bill, and the proposal to extend the power of guardians regarding laborers' cottages were all lost. The only Irish measure now likely to be passed is Mr. Healy's municipal franchise bill, which has gone to the house of lords. The Liberal Scotch members are also sore, their expectations having been disappointed.

Sudden End of the Government

ACCEPTS THE JOB.

Lord Salisbury Agrees to Try His Hand at Forming a Cabinet.

LONDON, June 25.—The Marquis of Salisbury made his visit to the queen at Windsor castle during the day and has agreed to form a ministry, but there exists some doubt in the public mind as to whether the conditions he attaches to his acceptance of the task will be consented to by the outgoing Liberal ministry. It is said that he will demand that there be no opposition to voting the necessary estimates before the proposed dissolution of parliament and that none of the members of the cabinet chosen by him shall be opposed for re-election at the coming election.

Mr. Gladstone was in consultation with Lord Rosebery and other leaders of the Liberals until a late hour but nothing has been given out as to their decision on these questions.

Makeup of the New Cabinet.

Gossip continues busy as to the makeup of the coming cabinet, and the best opinion seems to be that the Duke of Devonshire will be given the place of foreign secretary, with Mr. Balfour as first lord of the treasury. Mr. Chamberlain is talked of as secretary of state for war.

The notice sent to Conservative agents throughout the country to prepare for a dissolution is indicative of Lord Salisbury's plans. The Conservatives and Liberal Unionists are seen to be in perfect accord, and no embarrassment is anticipated in the makeup of the cabinet from conflicting claims of the allied parties, which are now practically one. Mr. Goschen, who was chancellor of the exchequer in a former cabinet, is slated by the gossips for first lord of the admiralty. Rumors that Sir William Vernon Harcourt will if Lord Rosebery is continued in the leadership of the Liberal party are denied by The Daily News, the organ of The Liberals.

Retire From Public Life

It is expected that immediately upon the passage of the seal fisheries bill for the regulation of sealing in the Bering sea, which was presented by Sir William Harcourt as an urgent measure in his statement in the house of commons, that there will be an adjournment of parliament for several days, and it is possible that the new ministry will not be announced until the end of that time.

Fourteen Were Poisoned.

MONTEZUMA, Ia., June 25.—At a family reunion near Tilton, 14 persons have been poisoned. Jacob Trout died but the others will recover. The poison is supposed to have been in the water taken from an unused well. A dead bat was found in the well.

Denied a Writ of Removal.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Judge Brown of the United States circuit court, denied the application for a writ of removal in the case of Charles A. Dana, indicted by the grand jury of the District of Columbia, for an alleged criminal libel against F. B. Noyes of the Washington Star.

Assistant Attorney General.

MADISON, Wis., June 24.—J. L. Erdall of this city has been appointed assistant attorney general of the state to succeed L. K. Lucas, resigned.

THE CAMERON BOOM.

One of the Results of the Republican League Convention.

ST. PAUL, June 25.—A special to The Dispatch from Washington says:

Senator Don Cameron and his friends have taken courage at the outcome of the Cleveland league convention, and from now on there will be a Cameron organization having for its object the nomination of the Pennsylvania senator to the presidency. Chairman Tom Carter of the national committee, and Senators Dubois, Teller, Wolcott, Hansbrough and Pettigrew will help propel the Cameron boom. The scheme now contemplated is for the silver states to hold early conventions next year and instruct for Cameron. This, it is intended, will stir up the Republicans of the Keystone state, and all opposition to Cameron among his home constituency is expected to be subdued.

There is no doubt that Cameron has been assiduously at work among the country districts of Pennsylvania, and it is said that there is considerable silver feeling in the western part of the state. But the anti-free silver Republicans will never support Cameron, and there is talk already of bringing Governor Hastings out as a presidential candidate. Hastings is one of the most popular Republicans in the East, and if it is decided to pit him against Don Cameron he will probably carry the state delegation to the next national convention.

HE POUNDED STONE.

Emperor William Puts the Finishing Touch on the Big Canal.

HOLTENAU, June 22.—Emperor William visited the armored cruiser Burik at 9:30 a. m. and subsequently laid the last stone of the Baltic and North sea canal in the presence of many thousands of spectators. The weather was brilliant.

The scene of the ceremony was embellished by handsome designs in landscape gardening, and the lighthouse standing close to the spot showed the three bronze reliefs of Emperor William, Frederick II and William II. Under the relief medallion on Emperor William I is a black marble tablet, on which is engraved in gilt lettering:

"His Majesty Emperor William I, laid the cornerstone of the Baltic canal on June 3, 1887, and accompanied his blows with the hammer by the words: 'In honor of United Germany, to her perfect welfare, in token of her might and power.'"

The light house and the block of masonry into which the emperor placed the finishing stone were surmounted by enormous scaffoldings rising in a semi-circle and affording seats for about 15,000 people. In laying the stone, the emperor said:

"In memory of Emperor William the Great, I christen this canal the Kaiser Wilhelm canal."

His majesty then tapped the stone three times, saying:

"In the name of the triune God, in honor of Emperor William, to the weal of Germany and the welfare of nations."

WISCONSIN CENTRAL AIR LINE.

Such the New Road to Berlin Is Supposed to Be.

BERLIN, Wis., June 24.—There is much speculation in Berlin concerning the new railroad line from Oshkosh to Berlin, for which surveys are being made.

It is surmised that a short cut for the Wisconsin Central is being planned, starting from Oshkosh over the new road and proceeding by an extension to Wautoma, Plainfield and Grand Rapids, and thence over the Centralia, Port Edwards and Northern (a small independent road that the Central could easily obtain) to Marshfield and thence over the partially completed short cut to Chippewa Falls. This would shorten the distance between Chippewa Falls and Oshkosh considerably and give the line a number of good towns, tapping a now almost railroadless section. This would give the Central almost an air line from St. Paul to Manitowoc, a shorter line to Chicago and a large addition to its local territory from which to draw business.

ANNEXATION THE POLICY.

Message of President Dole to the Hawaiian Legislature.

HONOLULU, June 17.—The first legislature under the republic was called together on the 11th inst. and the president's message was read. It dealt with many questions of local interest. In speaking of annexation to the United States the president says:

"While the annexation of this country to the United States of America has not yet been accomplished it still remains the policy of the government. Its consummation will be earnestly sought, with an abiding faith that such a result will be of great and lasting benefit to our country."

But two bills have been introduced so far—the new land law and supplemental appropriations bill, one item of which is a settlement for Princess Kaiulani. She is to receive $4,000 a year from the government, commencing about April 1 of the present year. This money will be paid to her as long as she does not meddle in politics.

MANITOBA DEFIES.

Premier Greenway's Reply to the Dominion Government Endorsed.

WINNIPEG, June 22.—A vote on the school debate was reached at 10:30 p. m. All the amendments were voted down and Manitoba's answer refusing to re-establish separate schools was adopted by a vote of 25 to 10.

Howgate Convicted.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—After being out nearly 24 hours the Howgate jury at 1:30 p. m. brought in a verdict of guilty on each indictment, one indictment being for forgery and one for falsification of accounts. The jury added a recommendation to mercy. An appeal on a bill of exceptions has been taken to the district court of appeals and probably will come up in September.

CONVENTION ENDED

REPUBLICAN LEAGUE COMPLETES ITS WORK.

Contest Over the Silver Question Avoided by a Constitutional Inhibition—General McAlpin Elected President and M. J. Dowling of Minnesota, Secretary of the League.

CLEVELAND, June 22.—The convention of the national league of Republican clubs has adjourned, and the delegates have returned to their homes for the most part. The convention lasted three days. The first day was devoted to temporary organization, appointment of committees, welcoming speeches and the address of the retiring president. On the second day a president was elected in the person of General McAlpin of New York.

The delegates were also entertained by a speech from Hon. Warner Miller of New York.

The hard work of the convention was done by the resolutions committee. There was every prospect of a hot fight over the silver question if a resolution touching on the subject reached the convention. There were those in the committee who insisted that if silver were ignored all other issues must likewise be let alone. A compromise was finally made in the committee by presenting the following:

"Whereas, Sec. 13 of the constitution of the Republican League of the United States says: 'The League shall not in any manner endeavor to

of any national, state, county or municipal convention.' The delegates of the Republican League of the United States, in convention assembled, do hereby renew their allegiance to the principles of the Republican party and pledge their best efforts for the success of the candidates of that party, believing that this convention has no instructions from the Republicans of the United States or jurisdiction under our constitution to frame party platforms, we hereby refer all resolutions in relation to public questions to the Republican national convention of 1896, with entire confidence that its action will redound to the prosperity of our people and the continued glory and advancement of the country."

The proceedings of the third day were very tame. All week there were apprehensions of an embarrassing fight on the silver question, but nothing was disposed of in all the proceedings so quickly or so quietly as that matter. The committee on resolutions had settled this matter by deciding to report that the League had no constitutional right to adopt resolutions, and its report to that effect was approved. Constitutional limitations are sometimes in the way, but in this case the constitution was considered convenient by both factions. The gold standard men were not satisfied, but they could see no way to do anything better than Adopt the Patton Substitute.

The silver men are elated. They say if free silver was not adopted nothing else was adopted, and that it indicates that the Republicans concede they cannot get along without the Western states. Although it could not have been done without a hard fight on the floor of the convention, the Western delegates expected to have an anti-silver resolution adopted over their protests. They claim to have received more recognition than they ever expected at a national Republican convention. It is well known that telegrams were received here from presidential aspirants and leading Republicans in all parts of the country, suggesting that any action on silver

Would Be Dangerous.

The local papers tried to interview delegates on the report of the committee on resolutions. The free silver men all expressed satisfaction and the anti-silver men, as a rule, would not express any opinion. Senator Thurston of Nebraska, a leader against free silver, said:

"The report was entirely consistent with the League organization, but I should have preferred a disclaimer of any authority or purpose to make a platform or commit the party, followed by such resolutions as would express the views of these assembled delegates on political issues. I am in favor of improving the financial plank of the last Republican platform."

To Make Tariff the Issue.

The effort to divert attention from silver to the tariff as the issue continued during the day. The speeches in the convention, as well as at the banquet and elsewhere, were all in that line. When the Tippecanoes and other local clubs went to the depot to meet Governor McKinley, the Iowa band of the Allison men headed the procession. There was every possible effort to make the week of silver agitation end in a big boom for the tariff as the issue of the Republicans.

Dowling Is Secretary.

After the question of resolutions was disposed of the election of a secretary was taken up and quite a lively time ensued. Minnesota presented the name of M. J. Dowling and his nomination was seconded by a number of other states. The silver men were dissatisfied, claiming the nominations for secretary had closed. After considerable debate a vote was taken and Dowling received so many votes that his election was made unanimous without a count. The election of a treasurer was referred to the executive committee and at 1:10 p. m. the convention adjourned sine die.

The McKinley Reception.

CLEVELAND, June 22.—Governor McKinley arrived from Ottawa, Kan., at 6:30 p. m. He was driven directly to the Hollenden, the headquarters of the national Republican League, where he held a reception from 8 to 9 o'clock. Many of the delegates to the convention called upon him and the stream of people passing the governor in the parlors lasted an hour.

Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

SAM BROWN'S FIRST KILLING.

A Nevada Desperado Whose Career of Crime Was Started by a Bully.

"At my first meeting with Sam Brown, the famous desperado, he did me an honor that few men would care to receive," said Wash Parker, an old time Nevadan. "He invited himself to be my traveling companion on a two days' wagon journey. I was starting out one morning with a wagon and pair of horses from a little mining settlement known then as Goldcrop. As I came opposite the hotel a large man standing on the veranda hailed me and asked if I was going to Virginia City. I answered yes, and he said:

"'I reckon I'll go along with you.

"'I'm Sam Brown,' he added. 'Maybe you don't have much confidence in me since hearing my name, but I reckon we'll travel along together all right.'

"Well, there wasn't anything to be said but 'All right; jump aboard,' and Sam Brown, with a carpetbag in his hand and his pistols bulging under his coat, came out to the wagon and took his seat beside me. He proved a civil enough companion, and we got through to Virginia City all right, with nobody killed on the way. He had taken along a bottle of prepared cocktails, and I had a box of cigars, so that the time passed rather sociably as we made our journey together.

"We went into camp that night at Sandy Springs, about half way to Virginia City, and in the course of the evening he told me something of his life and adventures. One thing in particular that I remember was the way he came to start out on his career of killing. I don't recall whether it was in Texas or Missouri that this first affair happened, but it was when he was a hulking young fellow, green and chicken hearted, to use his own words in telling it. There was a certain gambler in a town where he was staying who used to bully and abuse him when they came together. Everywhere and whenever the gambler saw him in a saloon he would kick him about and drive him out of the place. One day a man unfriendly to this gambler said to Sam:

"'Why do you stand all this abuse from that gambler? Take this pistol and the next time he crowds you kill him.'

"Sam took the advice and the pistol, and the next time the gambler went for him, instead of sneaking away and looking sorry, he shot his tormentor dead. After he had thus got his hand in killing men came easy to Sam, and he made a long score before his own time came.

"Though, as I said, we made our journey together all right, I knew it would take too little to set things to going all wrong for me thoroughly to enjoy Sam Brown's society. I wasn't sorry to set him down at the Primaventura saloon in Virginia City, where we took a drink together, shook hands and went our different ways."—New York Sun.

Kissing of Stones.

Around the center of Jerusalem, where the religious growths of centuries gather like crystals around a rod, a half sedentary, half floating population is to be found, whose chief object is the pursuit of piety and the veneration of the traces of Jesus, the Nazarene. Here is a world within a world, a Christian picture in a Moslem frame. In this city, where the religion of Mohammed, 13 centuries ago, overcame that of Christ, and where at present its followers prevent the rival Christians from fighting for the possession of the venerated spots, we have a little area of ground which has been arranged by the sects of Christianity to suit the brief descriptions of the Testament, but in which no single place exists that can be proved to have been the scene of the events ascribed to it.

All things which are offered for veneration are venerated in this place of faith, where both native and European Christians become seized with what I am constrained to term a lithophilematic mania, since they are seen to be constantly engaged in kissing enshrined stones of the most doubtful authenticity.

A FREAK OF NATURE.

The Navel Orange and How It Came to This Country.

The first navel orange was doubtless a freak or "sport," as horticulturists say. To make such a fruit by artifice would be impossible. It is abnormal even in the bud. The navel shows in the bud as early as the latter can be examined under the microscope. It may even be traced back to the flower, which is double—though that word does not express the idea very well, each blossom having a secondary blossom within it. In the developed fruit the navel is itself a secondary orange, in some specimens having a distinct skin surrounding it.

The two story orange is no novelty. A book on horticulture published in 1642 gives a picture of the navel orange and calls it "pomum Adami fœtum." This is the earliest reference known. The blossoms rarely have any pollen, and the fruit is usually, though not always, seedless. The variety is reproduced by budding. Where it originated is not known with certainty, but it was probably in southern Asia. Thence it was brought to the region of the Mediterranean and eventually diffused over the world. A lady who had traveled in Brazil told Mr. Saunders, the gardener of the department of agriculture, about the orange, which she admired in that country. Acting on this information, Mr. Saunders told a Star reporter that he sent to Bahia and received a dozen young budded trees. These reached the United States in 1870, being the first navel orange trees known here.

From these trees others were propagated. One of the first batch thus obtained is now in the orange house of the department of agriculture. In 1873 two of the trees were sent to Mrs. L. C. Tibbets of Riverside, Cal. At the same time others were sent to Florida. But those planted in California fruited more quickly and were the first to attract attention. It soon became evident that the climate of that state was better suited to the cultivation of this variety. In Florida it is not sufficiently productive—i. e., does not bear freely enough to be profitable. Nevertheless the finest navel oranges come from Florida, though they are not so handsome as those from California.

LAFAYETTE'S GRAVE.

It Is In Old Paris, and a Silken American Flag Always Floats Over It.

"While in Paris a short while ago," said a traveler recently, "it occurred to me that it was a fitting act to make a pilgrimage to the tomb of that illustrious Frenchman, dear to the hearts of all American patriots, Marquis de Lafayette. I asked a number of people before I could find any one to enlighten me as to the spot, but after repeated inquiry ascertained its location. The grave is situated in old Paris, within the grounds of a convent that the ancestors of Lafayette founded, and where repose the remains of many of the French nobility. The first thing that attracted my attention in connection with the hero's tomb was that above it floated a silken flag bearing the stars and stripes.

"It seems that a good many years ago an American gentleman left in his will a sum of money to be used for the special purpose of keeping an American flag forever flying above the grave of Lafayette. It has done so, without intermission, from the day the will went into effect, and whenever, through the wear of the elements, one flag becomes unserviceable a new one straightway takes its place. Through untold centuries the emblem of the country which, in its early struggles for liberty, had his beneficent aid will wave above his ashes."

TEETH OF ROYALTY.

THEY ARE BAD, AND THEREBY HANG SOME INTERESTING TALES.

American Dentistry, Mixed With Diplomacy and Intrigue—The Part Played by Dr. Evans—How Lord Cromer Got Hold of the Khedive's Secrets.

European royalty is cursed with execrable teeth, the result of consanguineous marriages throughout countless generations, and even the princes of the reigning house of Sweden, who are of plebeian origin, the grandfather of the present king having been born as a peasant at Pau, on the French slope of the Pyrenees, suffer from marred teeth, necessitating much science and skill in treatment. It is only natural therefore that they should have frequent recourse to dentists, and inasmuch as dental surgery has attained a greater degree of science and proficiency in the United States than in Europe, it is American doctors, as a rule, who have been intrusted with the welfare of royalty's jaws.

Perhaps the best known and most famous of all these American court dentists in Europe has been Dr. Thomas Evans in Paris, who has had the honor of introducing his forceps into almost every royal mouth in Christendom.

But perhaps the crowned heads with whom he was most intimate during his professional career were Napoleon III and Empress Eugenie. Many a time he was consulted by both on matters of importance which certainly had nothing to do with teeth, while the emperor would frequently avail himself of the doctor's professional trips to foreign courts to intrust him with some communication which could not well be conveyed through diplomatic channels. And, as everybody knows, when the empire was overthrown, after the battle of Sedan, it was Dr. Thomas Evans, who, first of all, concealed the fugitive empress in his Parisian mansion, and afterward conveyed her at personal risk from the metropolis to the seaside, whence she escaped to England on the yacht of Sir John Burgoyne.

There was an American dentist who was implicated in the somewhat sensational incidents that led to the sudden removal of the semidemented queen of Roumania from Venice a few years ago. After the Roumanian government had exacted from the king, under threat of depriving him of his throne, a promise to put an end to the engagement which the queen had arranged between her nephew, Crown Prince Ferdinand, and her ambitious favorite and maid of honor, Helen Vacarescu, her majesty had withdrawn, a prey to the most violent excitement, to Venice, where her conduct became so extravagant as to attract much attention and to necessitate the journey post haste of King Charles all the way from Bucharest to the city of the lagoon.

His first step on arriving was to dismiss her entire entourage, the two most prominent members of which, next to the maid of honor, were her Alsatian secretary, M. Scheffer, and her American dentist, both of whom were credited with exercising influence of a hypnotic nature upon the half crazy queen. She was subsequently removed to Germany and kept for three years under close restraint in one of the Rhine castles of her brother, the Prince of Wied.

It was another American dentist, too, who almost led to the deposition of the late king of Wurttemberg, over whom he had acquired so great a power of persuasion that the king cut himself adrift from almost all the associations of his younger days, holding aloof from relatives and nobles. The king was finally compelled to choose between dismissing his American favorite or abdicating. Naturally he accepted the former, but he gilded up the pill for his friend by overwhelming him with honors and gifts.

Finally there was the American dentist of the late Khedive Tewfik at Cairo, who, perhaps inadvertently, became the means of communicating many a useful piece of information to the English government. The khedive had the habit of leaving all confidential documents in his pockets, where they would be found by his European servant at nighttime. This man was afflicted not only with bad teeth, but also with a loose tongue, and on his visits to the dentist would communicate to him bits of information acquired through perusal of these papers.

Although Lord Cromer, the English envoy, had magnificent teeth, yet they seemed to be in almost daily need of treatment, and as he is a man of remarkable astuteness he had little difficulty in worming out of the dentist the secrets imparted by the khedive's valet.—Chicago Record.

Remarkable Rhyming Epitaphs.

The village of Pownal, Vt., surely once had a poet who had missed his calling and become a marble cutter. Below are some specimens of his famous "rhyming epitaphs," samples of which are still to be seen in the little cemetery adjoining the town mentioned:

Here lies in silent clay
Miss Arabella Young,
Who on the twenty-first of May
Began to hold her tongue.

Here lies the wife of Simon Stokes,
Who lived and died like other folks.

Here I lie, and no wonder I'm dead,
For a wagon wheel passed over my head.

Here lies John Hill, a man of skill.
His age was five times ten.
He never did good, nor never would
Had he lived as long again.

Red Wine Vinegar.

Red wine vinegar is made just like cider vinegar, a shade greater care being taken, perhaps, to keep it clean and pure. The wine used comes largely from California and Ohio, which of late years has been making a good deal of it. The factory can easily turn out 80 barrels a day, and where one considers that a teaspoonful at a meal is a very large average for the ordinary adult, it will be seen how far such a quantity will go.

It Sets people Chewing—Lorillard's Climax Plug.

It is prepared with the utmost care and skill from the choicest leaf grown; possessing a flavor and substance that makes it dear to the heart of every tobacco chewer. It is made by the oldest tobacco manufacturers in America, and the largest in the world, and cannot be excelled. Try it. You'll agree with the many thousand discriminating chewers who use it exclusively, and pronounce it much the best. It's Lorillard's.

THE Fergus Falls Journal has indulged in a new dress that brightens up its appearance wonderfully. The Journal always was an excellent local paper.

THE Times asks "where, oh! where is the experimental farm?" Well, we are not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but we venture the opinion that the board is simply waiting for that deed to the land promised by Mr. Hill before they locate the farm. Everything else is all ready and has been for some time.

THE conviction of A. J. Whiteman, formerly a resident of Duluth and a member of the Minnesota State Senate, of forgery and his sentence to States prison, although the legitimate result of such a life as he led conveys to all young men a lesson that they will do well to heed. Naturally brilliant and talented he was enabled to and did amass great wealth and had he been possessed of right principles he could have always been a highly respected and influential citizen. The early teachings of a pious mother, and all the advantages that a home of refinement and culture could give, all went for naught and now he languishes in a felon's cell, a warning to all young men to ever walk in the paths of morality and uprightness. Had Mr. Whiteman been possessed of true christian principles he would never have been where he is today.

A Possible Wheat Situation.

Minneapolis Times.

There is a possibility that the wheat market in this country will be independent of foreign influence. That contingency depends, of course, on the yield of winter wheat, supposing that the spring yield will be an average. Estimates of winter wheat production now run as low as 200,000,000 bushels, which is the computation by some individuals and by the "Modern Miller." The state crop reports make a little better showing than this, but all estimates agree that the yield will be very deficient. If the yield falls to the above figure, and the spring yield should chance to be as much more, would not appear to be much margin for export trade.

If this country produces only 400,000,000 bushels of wheat, as present estimates would suggest at the best, it is not clear as to where Europe would have much foothold in price dictation. It would seem as if this yield must be the bottom of present prospects, although some may claim that 200,000,000 bushels of spring wheat is too liberal an allowance on present indications. It must not be overlooked that the visible will have a surplus to go into the next crop, and it may be sufficient in the case of early and liberal marketings to affect the market somewhat by checking for a time the advance. But this prospect would not seem to sufficiently important to consider as a factor of much disturbing power, as against a fair price for wheat. It is possible that for a time on the new crop prices may assume an easier position, but if there is any truth in reports, wheat will be a profitable product to possess for the next crop, because if there is not a shortage to begin the year on, must surely develop after a few weeks. But even with so favorable a prospect as to prices, it will be well to keep in mind the fact that crop yields are sometimes disappointingly large in years of prospective shortage. There is less reason to look for this now than in several seasons, but it may be realized to the point that predictions of an extreme nature may fail of realization.

DISTRICT COURT.

swer of defendants and allow judgment to be taken as against Nelson, if the case as against Engelstad was dismissed. This was agreed to by plaintiff and reduced to writing and signed by the attorneys to the action, and said judgment so entered. Dissatisfaction arose later for some cause and Ole J. Vaule appeared on the scene and appealed to the district court and moved to set aside this stipulation and re-open the case, on the ground that the stipulation was entered into without authority, and improvident, and in the heat of passion, without due consideration. He produced affidavits in support of his claims, setting forth that Mr. Rowe had withdrawn from the case and that he had no authority to make such a stipulation at that time. Mr. Rowe's affidavit charged Mr. Miller, who wrote the stipulation for judgment in justice court, with fraudulently leaving out a portion of the stipulation as agreed upon before reducing it to writing. He claimed to have stipulated for judgment for plaintiff against Nelson, but that plaintiff should prove the amount of that claim. Mr. Miller produced an array of affidavits from parties who were present to prove that it was as stipulation set forth and no other way. The motion to set aside the stipulation was denied.

Cases were set for the week and up to the 4th. Adjourned until 9 a. m. Tuesday.

TUESDAY, JUNE 25.

Court convened at 9 a. m. The petit jury was summoned to appear at 10 a. m. The case of Joseph Mercic vs. M. Broullilette, et al, A. C. Wilkinson for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant, was called first, the defendant not appearing on time the case by agreement went to the foot of the calendar.

A demurrer to the complaint in the case of C. J. Knox vs. Jas. Meehan Jr., et al, Ira C. Richardson attorney for plaintiff and H. W. Lee and F. A. Grady, attorneys for defendant, was argued at some length. The demurrer was sustained.

A jury was then called in the case of W. L. Perkins & Co. vs. Oscar Wick, A. A. Miller appearing for plaintiffs and no appearance for defendant. This was an action on two promissory notes. A verdict was directed for plaintiff for the amount claimed, with interest, amounting in all to $501.56.

AFTERNOON TUESDAY.

A jury was called in the case of Bartley Hagarty vs. Michael Quirk, H. Steenerson for plaintiff and De-Forest Bucklin and Martin O'Brien for defendant. This was an action for damages for $5000 against defendant for assault. It appears that on July 15 last these parties, with some others, met at John Logan's house down in the Red River country, to spend Sunday afternoon. A keg of beer was on tap, but no one was intoxicated. They were "just jolly," as one witness put it. Some old trouble was stirred up and this plaintiff and defendant got into a little "scrap," the plaintiff coming out of the melee with a little scratch on his face and a bump or two on his head. Friends intervened and defendant went home. The plaintiff thought he was damaged considerably and came to Crookston the next day and brought suit. The testimony was very animated at times and the children of St. Patrick kept the reporter on the qui vive to catch their rapid and somewhat amusing stories. The case went to the jury just before adjournment, 6:30 p. m.

The grand jury handed in three indictments, one against George Howard for burglary in the third degree; charging him with stealing from Lobsinger, in East Grand Forks, on the 9th of May, three gold watches and one chain and one ring.

Two indictments were found against Minor Rood, one for grand larceny in the second degree, and the other for arson in the second degree. He is the man charged with the burning of a house at Maple Lake.

Henry Benjamin, who has been in jail for some time was discharged, the grand jury failing to find any indictment against him.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 26.

The jury in the Hagarty-Quirk case returned a sealed verdict for plaintiff, assessing his damages at ONE CENT.

A jury was then called in the case of J. S. Nichols vs. Brown Knutson. J. Welseth, Wm. Watts, for plaintiff and A. A. Miller for defendant. This is an action in replevin. In April, '93, plaintiff bought a drill from Larsen, Carpenter & Co. and gave his note payable in Nov. of the same year, secured by chattel mortgage. In Dec. he made a payment of $75. The following May L. C. & Co. demanded the balance of the payment, which was refused by Nichols. Mr. Larson and Knutson took the drill. Nichols replevined it and brought suit against Knutson. The case was tried last January and a verdict for the plaintiff returned. On motion a new trial was granted and the case came up to-day. It went to the jury at 10:30.

In the case of Clinton Morrison vs. Louis Gonyea, the defendant withdrew his answer and allowed judgment to be entered as claimed in the complaint. E. P. Pierce and Wm. Watts appearing for plaintiff and Ed. George for defendant.

The next case set for to-day was that of Martin Erickson vs. C. A. Urness. A. A. Miller for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant. There was no appearance made on the part of the defendant and the plaintiff introduced three promissory notes in evidence and judgment was entered in his favor.

THE CHILD'S PRAYER.

Into her chamber went
A little maid one day,
And by a chair she knelt
And thus began to pray:
"Jesus, my eyes I close;
Thy form I cannot see;
If thou art near me, Lord,
I pray thee speak to me."
A still small voice she heard within her soul:
"What is it, child? I hear thee. Tell me all."

"I pray thee, Lord," she said,
"That thou wilt condescend
To tarry in my heart
And ever be my friend.
The path of life is dark,
I would not go astray;
Oh, let me have thy hand
To lead me in the way."
"Fear not, I will not leave thee, child, alone."
She thought she felt a soft hand press her own.

"They tell me, Lord, that all
The living pass away;
The aged soon must die,
And even children may.
Oh, let my parents live
Till I a woman grow,
For if they die, what can
A little orphan do?"
"Fear not, my child. Whatever ills may come,
I'll not forsake thee till I bring thee home."

Her little prayer was said,
And from her chamber now
She passed forth with the light
Of heaven upon her brow.
"Mother, I've seen the Lord,
His hand in mine I felt,
And, oh, I heard him say
As by my chair I knelt:
"Fear not, my child. Whatever ills may come,
I'll not forsake thee till I bring thee home.'"

ONE COINCIDENCE EXPLAINED.

A New Advertising Trick In the Book Trade Which Had Its Success.

"Have you a novel called ——, by ——?" asked a young woman of an attendant in a city library.

"No, and we never heard of the book until today, but we have had at least ten applicants for it since 9 o'clock this morning. I beg your pardon, but would you please tell me how you heard of that book?"

"Why," she replied hesitatingly, "I received a note from a friend telling me to read it."

"Well," he said, with a smile, "the others who applied had heard of it in the same way."

The young woman looked surprised, but said nothing and passed out. A man who had overheard the conversation spoke of it to his wife that evening as a curious coincidence.

"Coincidence, fiddlesticks!" she said. "Wait a moment until I show you what I received this morning." And going to her desk she brought this note for him to read:

MY DEAR—If you want a surprise read ——, by ——. You will immediately recognize the character ——. Hastily yours, E.

"Well, I thought over all of the Ellas, Evas, Emmas and Elizabeths of my acquaintance," she went on, "but I could not recognize the handwriting. It was a clear, round hand, but unformed, like a child's. Coincidence, indeed! It is a clever advertisement, new in the book trade, but I have seen similar letters. Four years ago a furniture firm sent out a clever imitation of a letter, written in a delicate feminine hand, dated at a country villa and addressed 'Ma chere amie.' It was a gossipy, pleasant letter, and at the end requested the friend to buy her two or three pieces of furniture, little pen and ink sketches of which were pinned to the corner. Of course the price and where to buy them were not overlooked."—New York Sun.

Both Died In Jerusalem.

Monk Gerbert, who ascended the papal throne under the title of Sylvester II, anticipating Roger Bacon, made a bronze head, which, like that owned by the reputed inventor of gunpowder, was capable of answering him like an oracle. From this head he learned that he would not die until he performed mass at Jerusalem, and so he determined to live forever, by taking especial care not to go to the Holy City. Unfortunately Gerbert soon found that brazen heads, like other juggling fiends, "but keep the word of promise to our ear and break it to our hope," for one day he was taken seriously ill just after he had celebrated mass in one of the churches at Rome. On inquiring the name of this particular church he heard, much to his dismay, that it was popularly known as "Jerusalem," and he died in great agony a few hours afterward. Five hundred years after this Master Robert Fabian gives us the story of the death of King Henry IV, and tells us how that in his youth it had been prophesied that he would die in Jerusalem, and that the prophecy, as in the case of Gerbert, was in a way fulfilled by the king dying in the Jerusalem chamber at Westminster.—London Standard.

The Foundation Stone of Success.

The one great rule of business is that of honesty, absolute and unqualified honesty, writes Edward W. Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal. All the rules of business are worthless if they are not founded on that one and only foundation stone to true commercial success. Honesty is not alone the best policy in business. It is the one and only policy. Upon it, and upon it alone, can a good reputation be built, and a man in business without a reputation for honesty might just as well stop. Any deviation from the rule of honesty in business may bring temporary gain, but it invariably means permanent loss. On the other hand, a strict adherence to an honest policy may mean a temporary loss, but it is sure to result in a permanent gain.

There need be no doubt in the minds of the people as to where the Republican party will stand upon the money question. It has always been a party of stability and honor. No matter what individuals of the party, interested in silver mines, may preach, the National convention of the Republican party will stand for honest money, protection to American industries and American labor. These cardinal principles have always been in beacon light, and under which, for over 30 years, it has carried the ship of state safely through rough as well as smooth seas, and the people after having tried the Democratic congress and administration for the past few years, became convinced in 1894, that they had made a grand mistake in electing a democratic and do-nothing congress, therefore reversed the order of proceedings, and December of this year will see a Republican congress in possession, possessed of the old time wisdom, and in advance of which the good times have already begun, the people realizing and feeling the old time confidence that always followed govermental affairs when in the hands of the Republican party.—St. Peter Tribune.

Woman In Journalism.

Writing on that topic the editor of the Champion, at Atchison, Kansas pays the following beautiful tribute to true womanhood:

"Many of the bright things in the newspapers of Kansas are written by women and these women writers are so modest and unassuming that they receive their meagre weekly salary with thanks, and, in many instances their literary existence is wholly unknown to those who read and enjoy their thoughts. A major portion of the best ideas in my own daily and weekly come from the pure hearts and active brains of good and noble women correspondents. Women has shown by her tact, skill, courage and scholarship that she is perfectly at home in writing an item about the markets, in chats with exchanges, and in the cool dispassionate discussion of questions of public interest.

Happy is the editor and publisher who has the benefit of the association with and advice, counsel and aid of a woman's noble aid and heart and mind.

The Woman in Journalism is here to endure and remain. Her influence is of the best for she is not soured by politics, not contaminated by the "habits" of the print shop—and, for one—I bid her cordial and hearty welcome to the Holy of Holies of newspaper life, for her words are kindness, her influence ennobling—her presence a blessing"

Rev. Fisher, of Crookston, was calling on friends in Fertile, Monday.

Mrs. P. J. Russell, of Crookston, is visiting friends in Fertile, this week.

Right or Left?

It has been asserted with much authoritative emphasis, that inability to sleep on the left side is indicative of disorder or feebleness of the heart. But here comes somebody who talks thus about sleeping on the left side: "It is the most prolific cause of nightmare, and also of the unpleasant taste in the mouth on arising in the morning. All food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side and hence sleeping on the left side soon after eating involves a sort of pumping operation which is anything but conducive to sound repose. The action of the heart is seriously interfered with and the lungs unduly compressed. Hence it is best to cultivate the habit of always sleeping on the right side, although Sandow and other strong men are said to invariably sleep on their backs." Well "doctors disagree," but our own experience is that if you are going on a journey, and secure a compartment in the Pullman Sleeper on the "Burlington" vestibuled limited, it will not make any difference on which side you sleep—you will have a good rest; and as for "unpleasant taste in the mouth on rising," the appetizing breakfast in the dining car will quickly and effectually remove that. In going to Chicago or St. Louis, see that your ticket agent gives you a ticket via the Burlington Route, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul. Minn.

Little Nellie Anderson is quite seriously ill.

Children's Day was observed at the Presbyterian church, last Sabbath, it having been postponed three weeks until the church was finished. The interior of the building was nicely decorated with flowers and plants. The children taking part in the exercises acquitted themselves nicely, showing the careful training they had received from Mesdames Currie and Misner.

Mr. J. Keenan, of Warren, was down Monday.

Mrs. Robert Casmey, Misses Emma and Fannie Casmey, Miss Jane Morrison and Chas. Casmey, are at Maple Lake spending a short visit.

Alexander Grimes returned from Thief River Falls, Wednesday, where he has been visiting with relatives and friends.

Miss Palmer, a missionary from Africa, delivered an interesting lecture to a small audience at the church, Tuesday evening. Miss Palmer is on her way to Winnipeg, where she goes to attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T.

The farmers of the township of Euclid have awakened to the threatened danger to the crops by noxious weeds and have called a meeting to be held at Chapin's hall, Saturday, June 29, for the purpose of discussing means of getting rid of the same.

The families of H. C. Misner, A. H. Pitkin and Dr. Chapin, accompanied by Mrs. Blanche Haley, went to Maple Lake, Wednesday, to enjoy a brief outing.

FOSSTON ITEMS

(From the Thirteen Towns.)

Attorney J. R. Montague, of Crookston, was in town Wednesday evening on business.

Conductor Ditty has quit the mixed train and comes up with the daily every fourth evening.

Miss Olive Halvorson, assistant postmistress at Crookston, paid a visit to her parents here this week, returning to the city Wednesday morning.

J. E. Campbell has let the contract for the building of his residence on front street and work was commenced Monday thereon.

After traveling at a rather swift pace for the several months that he has been in business here, J. A. Nystrom, formerly of Halsted, Minn., was closed up two weeks ago. He succeeded in disposing of the business to Mr. Bridger and left on Tuesday afternoon's train for Crookston. Unfortunately he had neglected to settle his bill with landlord Anderson and, through the telegraph, he was ceremoniously detained at McIntosh, constable Soderberg bringing him back in the evening. However, upon paying his bill and expenses connected with its collection he was allowed to go.

A heavy thunder shower, bringing down with it a little hail, cooled the air very quickly Wednesday afternoon. Of late, every stray cloud empties itself on the land—and the grain continues to grow at a great rate. Those who know say that no such extremely promising prospects for a bountiful harvest have ever been shown at this time of the year since the thirteen towns were settled.

AYER'S PILLS

Never fail to relieve Dyspepsia, Constipation, and Headache.

"I have proved the value of Ayer's Pills in relieving dyspepsia and headache, with which complaints I was so long troubled that neither the doctor nor myself supposed I should ever be well again. Through the use of the above medicine I am better than I have been for years."—A. GASKILL, Versailles, Ill.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for 15 years as a cathartic in liver complaint, and always with extremely beneficial effect, never having had need of other medicine. I also give Ayer's Pills to my children, when they require an aperient, and the result is always most satisfactory."—A. A. EATON, Centre Conway, N. H.

"Having been severely afflicted with costiveness, I was induced to try Ayer's Pills. Their use has effected a complete cure, and I can confidently recommend them to all similarly afflicted."—C. A. WHITMAN, Nipomo, Cal.

Mrs. A. Dickinson of Stephen, stopped off to visit grandma Reynolds, on her way to a visit to her husband's former home in Wisconsin. Mrs. Dickinson will be remembered by most of our people as Miss Frankie Sang, who used to live at Fisher in her girlhood.

Hans Peterson came up from Fertile on Monday morning to he ready for his case in court. When the case was called Mr. Peterson asked for its continuance on account of the the absence of his attorney DeForest Bucklin, who, owing to the death of his father could not be present, so the case was postponed till later.

James Bucklen, father of Attorney DeForest Bucklen, died on Sunday morning at the age of 90 years, and was buried on Monday afternoon. On Saturday afternoon he received a stroke of paralysis, and only lived a few hours. He had recently come to Crookston to spend the balance of his life with his son.

District court convened on Monday.

Atty. Bennet is down from Fosston attending court.

Felix Fournet went out on the St. Hilaire branch on Monday.

P. Meehan, of Thief River Falls, is attending court this week.

Bob Leick was up from Fargo to spend the Sabbath with his family.

J. H. Peterson took the St. Vincent line for a trip north on Monday.

Max Ericsson came up from St. Paul on Monday for a few days on business.

Dr. Holte and wife went up to Thief River Falls for a few days visit returning this week.

S. C. Bagley says the logs will be down by July 15th. Plenty of water for driving purposes.

The report reaches us that the crops of J. P. Bullan, in Fairfax, were severely damaged by hail, last week.

J. T. Knight drove in from Red Lake Falls on Monday——through the rain. Reports business picking up.

Gen. Manager C. H. Warren was up from St. Paul this week on a tour of inspection of the Great Northern branches.

Miss Olive Halvorson is again on deck at the post-office after a pleasant vacation visit with her parents and friends at Fosston.

Joseph Tagley and bride returned on Tuesday evening from a brief wedding tour in Dakota and went out to their home in Mentor.

A. M. Ham will remove his family to Minto. They have been residents of this city for nearly a year and have made many friends who will regret to see them go.

A. M. Sievertson will oversee the carpenter work required in building the new school house; Wm. Erdmann will do the brick-work and L. O'Brien will do the plastering.

Hugh Thompson has returned from a trip to Montana. While out there he narrowly escaped a pistol ball that was intended for an escaping bank robber that a policeman was trying to induce to wait a minute.

The Lutteman Sextette will appear at the opera house in this city on Thursday evening July 4th. The celebrated lady violinist, Miss Ollie Torbett, is with this company. Seats on sale next Saturday at Tom Morris' jewelry store.

Ayer's Pills promote the natural motion of the bowels, without which there can be no regular, healthy operations. For the cure of biliousness, indigestion, sick headache, constipation, jaundice, and liver complaint, these pills have no equal. Every dose effective.

Frank Cernousek was in from Tabor on Tuesday. He reports a hailstorm in that vicinity on Thursday which did considerable damage in several cases. The prospects for crops up there were never better he says, and the farmers are rejoicing in the hope of better prices for their wheat than ever before.

Good Health

And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a blood purifier, its power to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now?

Overcoats and gloves on the 27th day of June. We were never more forcibly impressed that "this is a queer world!" Pass the ice cream, please.

Death of Michael Jeffers.

On Tuesday evening the sad news of the death of Michael Jeffers by drowning at Red Lake Falls reached the city. Mr. Jeffers was one of the oldest settlers of Polk county, was a member of Col. Cobham Post and a man possessed of many redeeming qualities of mind and heart and he leaves many friends to mourn his sad death.

Edward Roberts died at 4:30 Tuesday morning, at the home of his father, Al. Roberts, of a complication of troubles, from which he has been a great sufferer. Ed. came here in his boyhood, and when able to do anything has followed railroading. The funeral obsequies took place at the house on Wednesday, the Rev. H. P. Fisher officiating, and the remains were laid to rest in Oakdale cemetery.

Circular Regarding French Weed.

Constant reports are coming to the Experiment Station regarding the weed known in many parts of the Red River Valley as French weed, wild garlic or penny cress; botanically known as THALASPI AVNSEL. This weed belongs to the mustard family and is rather difficult to eradicate because the seeds will doubtless live more than one year. The seeds are known to blow from field to field in high winds and ripe seeds are produced among the crop before any of the small grains are ripe. Some plants live over winter producing seeds very early in spring, these in their turn produce plants, and even the third generation ripens during some years. These qualities make the weed very difficult to eradicate. In fact we are not able to recommend any economical way of getting rid of it where thoroughly intrenched. We want to give a general warning regarding it that our farmers may prevent its entrance into their neighborhoods and into their farms. An ounce of prevention in this case is worth many pounds of cure.

This communication is sent out partly as a word of warning but more especially to solicit information regarding this pest, that we may know the facts to be had regarding it for publication in a bulletin in the near future. Information of any character, especially as to methods of keeping it out of the land and of eradicating it will be most thankfully received by the undersigned.

Fisher Items.

(From the Bulletin.)

The social event of the week was the wedding of Joseph Tagley of Mentor to Miss Milla Olson of this village, which happy event occurred Wednesday evening at the residence of the brides parents Mr. and Mrs. Evan Olson, the Rev. Skyberg officiating. The groom is a prominent merchant of Mentor, while the bride is one of Fisher's fairest daughters, and has grown up here from childhood. The happy couple will go at once to housekeeping. The Bulletin joins with many friends in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous life.

Dr. Lankester's term as Grand Master I. O. O. F. expired last week. The Grand lodge voted the doctor a magnificent gold medal and a vote of thanks at the same time stating that he had made, if not the most efficient Grand Master, one of the most efficient the order has ever had. The meeting of the Grand Lodge was the largest ever held; consisting of between 400 and 500 Past Grands, and the manner in which it was conducted showed that the Grand Master is a thorough parliamentarian.

A reporter of the Bulletin was prowling around Monday in search of the elusive news items and dropping into the cheese factory we found Mr. Robt. Rose, the cheese maker, just putting the last of ten cheese for that day, into the press. In answer to our inquiry he said that the quantity of milk is increasing daily, so that they were now making ten cheese a day as against two and three the first week the factory opened. The cheese finds a ready market, not only at home but elsewhere and one order is always supplemented by another, showing conclusively that Mr. Rose is no novice at the business. After leaving the factory we stopped into one of our stores where the cheese is sold and sampled some of the cheese, which we must say is as fine grained and of as excellent flavor as any we have tasted. One thing that particularly attracts our attention while at the cheese factory is that everything was scrupulously and spotlessly clean.

I now have money again to loan on good improved farms.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in this city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself—and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

HYPHENATED NAMES.

Some Are Genuine, Others Simply Stand For Snobbery—How to Distinguish.

Hyphenated names in Europe may be divided into two categories—namely, those wherein the hyphen is a mere piece of snobbery and affectation, and those wherein it is consequent upon a legal obligation. The latter are in the minority and are borne almost invariably by legatees and their descendants, who have inherited property, usually real estate, contingent upon their tacking the name of the testator on to their own, or else they are men who have married heiresses and been accepted as husbands for the latter on the condition that they should append the family name of their wives to their own patronymic.

People in the other category, who use the hyphen merely with the object of creating the impression that they are of more ancient lineage than is really the case, invariably prefix, instead of appending, the additional name, and it is this that enables one to distinguish the "bona fide double barrel," as Lord Randolph Churchill used to call them, from those who are not, for you have only to ask Mr. Ponsonby-Jones for the name of his paternal grandfather in order to find out that the old gentleman was a simple Jones, devoid of the aristocratic Ponsonby, whereas in the case of surnames adopted in deference to testamentary dispositions one will invariably find on inquiry that the paternal grandfather and ancestors bore the first of the two patronymics.

The persons who make use of hyphenated names without being compelled to do so are usually the owners of patronymics excruciatingly plebeian, who hope, vainly, it is true, to redeem the commonplace character of their name by prefixing thereto one calculated, they trust, to create the impression that they are connected with some of the great houses of the nobility. Thus it is quite common to find Montmorency-Smiths, Plantagenet-Robinsons and Vere de Vere-Browns.—Chicago Tribune.

RUMSEY'S STEAMBOAT.

Records Which Show That It Antedated Fulton's Product by Twenty-two Years.

The records of Jefferson county, W. Va., prove what is not generally known—that Robert Fulton was not the first man to build a steamboat in this country. He was anticipated over 22 years by James Rumsey of Charleston, Va., now West Virginia. Rumsey's steamboat was partly constructed in Frederick county, Md., in 1785. It was fitted up with machinery partly manufactured at a furnace called "The Cococtin Furnace," owned by Johnson Brothers, and located near the town of Frederick.

The two cylinders, the boiler, pumps, pipes, etc., were built in Baltimore. Part of the work was done at the old Antietam Iron works. Rumsey's boat was 80 feet in length, and it was propelled by an engine which worked a vertical pump placed in the center of the vessel. The water was drawn in at the bow and forced out at the stern through a horizontal pipe. The entire weight of the machinery was 665 pounds, and the tonnage of the vessel was three tons. The entire machinery, including the boiler, etc., took up a space of very little over 4 feet square.

The first public experiment took place on the Potomac river on March 14, 1786, when the boat showed a speed of four miles an hour up stream. The records of Jefferson county also show that George Washington and Governor Thomas Johnson of Maryland were among the patrons of Rumsey, and that the experiment was made in the interest of the then proposed Chesapeake and Ohio canal.—New York World.

He Could Be Indifferent.

It isn't every man that owns a silk hat, but it is the dream of every very young man's life to possess one. A young man in our end of town went to the matinee with the only girl he ever really loved, and he wore a silk hat. He put it under the seat carefully, and the next person who came in gave it a kick that practically ruined it. Most young fellows would have had a fit right there, but this one said nothing at all. He was so philosophical that the girl was charmed. As they came out of the theater they met another young man, and the three went to get some soda water. The girl told about the young man's hat, and how philosophical he was:

"Why, do you know, Jack," she said, "Charley didn't even look annoyed. It was lovely."

"Umph," said Jack, with fire in his eyes, "it's all right for him to be lovely, but it's my hat!"

It is just such little things as this that wreck the friendship of a lifetime.—Washington Post.

Chair of the Giant Idris.

One of the mountain peaks of north Wales is known as the Chair of Idris, or Cader Idris, as the Welsh people call it, because its top is hollowed out like an immense couch. According to local tradition, whoever spends a night in the Chair of Idris will, on the following morning, be dead, raving mad or endowed with the loftiest poetical inspiration. No one seems to know exactly who Idris was or when he lived, but he must have been a giant if his body was in proportion with his celebrated "chair." Mrs. Hemans has a fine poem with the Chair of Idris as the theme, and Tennyson also mentions it in "Ænid."—St. Louis Republic.

Cost of Policemen's Uniforms.

The prices paid by the Baltimore police are: For overcoats, $20; dress coats, $9.90; blouses, $8; summer trousers, $5.12; winter trousers, $6.25. These prices, the commissioners say, are lower than those in any city, with the exception of Philadelphia, where a different system obtains, and where the men are required to purchase new clothes every year, making the cost to them eventually more than to the Baltimore police.—Baltimore Sun.

WOMAN AS A FARMER.

Miss Sarah Pollard, of Mentor, is in the city this week attending court in the capacity of a witness. We never think of this woman without a feeling of greater respect for American womanhood, and while we really cannot say that we should advise our lady friends to emulate Miss Pollard's example by buying a team of oxen, taking up a government claim and developing into a horny-handed granger, yet Miss Pollard's example might prove beneficial to some spoiled pets of fashion, as showing what a thoroughly self-reliant womanly American woman can accomplish when she makes up her mind to do and be something in this queer world of ours. Miss Pollard came to this country in the early day, secured a claim and a team of oxen, built a house and stable, broke up some land for the next season's crop and has worked her farm ever since alle samee Mellcan man—well, no, not exactly the same, for she has made a brilliant success where many a man has failed; but then Miss Pollard is a woman and not subject to some little expenses that mankind affects. For instance, Miss Pollard being a woman, is not obliged to use tobacco in any form—a trifle, perhaps, yet something of a saving. Being a woman she is not obliged every time she comes to town to go to some saloon and take a drop to keep the cold out, or the heat out, which is quite a saving. Being a woman she don't have to come to town every day during exciting political times to talk politics and "save her country," hence has more time to stay at home and save her crops. You see the fact that she is a woman is partly to blame for her success as a granger, for the fact obliges her to stay at home and tend to business enough to ensure that success that can never be attained in any other way. This year she has a growing crop of the finest grain she ever raised and her bank account will receive large a accession as soon as the crop is marketed.

Absent Minded--Rather.

On Friday evening of last week the wife of a prominent business man of the city, at tea-time said to her husband "I am going down to attend the church social this evening and I wish you would look in at 9:30 and escort me home." "All right," said he, "as soon as I close the shop for the night I will," and he departed for the shop. A little after 9, he closed the shop and, totally forgetting his promise to his wife and thinking it rather early to go home he sauntered up to the Shaker medicine camp to see the show. About 11 o'clock he started for home where he found his children and the hired girl in a state of mind bordering on hysterics all because "that baby had been so long without food" and for the first time remembered his promise to his wife! Catching up his hat he hurried out and up town as fast as he could go. Up town somewhere he found a hack but nary a driver could he see so up hopped C—— on the box and away went the horses on the jump, up to the picnic where he found one of the most nervous of women biting her finger-nails and saying all manner of complimentary things (in stage whispers) about his lordship. It did not take him long, however to get back home—but he has not dared to look his wife square in the eyes since then.

THREE NEW YORK LANDMARKS.

Trinity, St. Paul's and Grace Church Defy the Advance of Business Interests.

Three landmarks on Broadway occupy sites so valuable that their retention confounds every calculation of real estate speculators. They are the only three churches on Broadway below Forty-second street, and each has come to be part of the popular distinction of that thoroughfare. They are Trinity, St. Paul's and Grace. All three have high claims to architectural eminence, and all three are of one denomination—the Protestant Episcopal.

The site of Trinity church, on Broadway at the head of Wall street, is appraised officially at $4,000,000; that of St. Paul's church, at Broadway and Fulton street, at $1,750,000, and that of Grace church, Broadway opposite Eleventh street, at $350,000. The frontage of Trinity church, including the churchyard, is 400 feet, of St. Paul's church 107 feet and of Grace church 150 feet. The gross valuation of these three churches is $6,100,000, and as the usual rate of assessment on real estate is about 60 per cent the actual market value of these three Broadway plots is in excess of $10,000,000. In European cities it is no strange thing for public thoroughfares to be dotted with venerable edifices erected for ecclesiastical, military or governmental purposes, but in New York, where there is no material partnership between church and state, and where, perhaps, more utilitarian views prevail than abroad, the steady enhancement of real estate values has been such that few religious corporations have been strong enough or felt themselves strong enough to withstand the temptation to sell. On the present site of Tiffany's, for instance, Broadway and Fifteenth street, formerly a church stood. There was a chapel opposite the site of the old New York hotel. But with the advance of business interests the congregations reluctantly moved away. These three landmarks named have stood their ground, and it seems probable that they will continue to do so.

St. Paul's church is the oldest religious edifice in this city. It was built in 1764, and it was the church which George Washington and his associates attended immediately following the inauguration ceremonies in 1789. Trinity church is the third of that name on the present site, and was erected in 1846. Grace church was erected in 1845, one year before Trinity, and the site, at the bend of Broadway where it turns an angle at Tenth street, was carefully chosen. All three buildings enjoy the advantage of being kept in excellent repair, and are improved from time to time by the liberal contributions of benefactors. This is especially true of Trinity and Grace church, which may almost be said to improve year by year. It is a peculiarity of these three landmarks of New York that those who attend them come, in nearly every case, from sections of the city far up town, so that they are, if such an expression may be used, the three churches to be reached by carriage. Very few persons who attend either Trinity or St. Paul's reside in their vicinity, and the number of such parishioners decreases each year. Grace church retains its high rank architecturally, notwithstanding the number of new church buildings in New York, and it has the additional distinction of being popular for fashionable weddings.—New York Sun.

SURPRISED THE OLD MAN.

Richard Thought He Owed the Bank $1, but It Owed Him $343.25.

Richard Roe deposited $705 in the Bowery Savings bank between 1835 and 1849. Between 1835 and 1855 $753.89 was withdrawn. When the last draft was made the depositor's book appeared to be overdrawn $1. There were due Roe at that time, however, dividends amounting to $100.01, which had not been entered in his passbook, and the bank really owed him a balance of $99.01.

The balance went on accumulating dividends until 1875, when it became a dormant account and ceased to draw interest. The amount then due Roe was $343.25. Efforts were made without success to find him. He had become very poor, was too old and feeble to go to work again, and was given a home by his sons at Rutherford, N. J.

Roe always intended to repay the $1 he thought he owed, but never did so. President Townsend of the Bowery Savings bank, in looking over the books the other day, came across Roe's account. A new search was instituted, and Roe was found at Rutherford. He was told to call at the bank with his old account books. Shortly afterward he did so, accompanied by his granddaughter, 17 years old.

"I suppose it's about the dollar I owe your bank that you want to see me," said the old man, addressing Mr. Townsend. He was astonished when told the facts.

"Guess these bank people know what's right," he said to his granddaughter. "I never was much on 'rithmetic."

He pocketed the $343.25, shook hands with the bank officials and returned home.—New York World.

Cutting Remarks.

Mrs. Bugsby—You can't deceive me, John! I'm sharp, you know—sharp as a knife!

Mr. Bugsby—Yes, Maria, you resemble a knife—a table knife—you never shut up.—New York Ledger.

"Fiasco" means a bottle or flask. When the Italian glassblowers detected flaws in the vase they were blowing they made an ordinary bottle of the failure, and hence the name.

Baluchistan was thus called because the Belooches were the dominant tribe in its river valleys and plains.

Candles were first used symbolically on the altars of churches in the fourth century.

BREEDING BUFFALOES.

Some of the Hybrids That Are Produced Are Fine Animals.

A famous Montana character is Charlie Allard of Ravalli. Mr. Allard is famous mainly because he is one of the owners of the largest herd of buffalo in the country, and no man living has given to these now rare animals more patient study and attention than he.

"The coldest storms of winter do not trouble them," he says, "for their thick, shaggy coats are windproof. During the heavy snows and blizzards they climb the hills, and turning their breasts to the wind defy the storm. They feed where the snow is thinnest. Cattle are driven before a storm and will often go with a wind 60 or 100 miles from the accustomed range unless they reach a sheltered spot. Horses turn their backs to a storm, but the buffaloes face it every time. They seem to keep in about the same condition of flesh the year round and are as good eating in the spring as they are in the fall, and a buffalo steak is about as fine a morsel as ever a man made a meal of. About two years ago I purchased the Jones herd of buffalo, which was at Omaha. There were 31 of them in the herd, and we paid (for I have a partner now) $18,000 for the lot. Marchiel Pablo, a well known cattleman, has joined me in the business and for the past year has had entire charge of them, so that I do not know just exactly how many we have—about 140, I should judge, now, and by next fall there will be fully 200 of them.

"We have experimented in crossing buffalo with all breeds of cattle, and the results are most satisfactory. The Polled Angus stock when crossed with the buffalo produces a magnificent animal. The fur is finer and closer than that of the buffalo, and the meat is sweet and wholesome. We are producing as many of these animals as possible, but will not put any on the market for several years yet. We are not selling any buffalo either, for the reason that we need them all at present. We receive letters every day from museums, parks and shows wanting them in all quantities, and though we might dispose of one or two singly we have no pairs to sell.

"A good buffalo hide is worth $100 now in the market, and heads bring from $200 to $500 when mounted, and the value of these is steadily increasing, so that buffalo breeding is as good an investment as real estate. Our herd is about the only one I know of of any size. There is a small one in the Texas panhandle, and these, with the few that roam in the national park, are the sole remnants of the thousands which roamed the prairies but a few years ago."—Anaconda (Mon.) Standard.

TWO INVENTIONS IN ONE.

The Kinetograph the Latest Marvel Turned Out by Edison.

"We are progressing, progressing," said Thomas A. Edison to a Boston Herald representative when informed that his retreat had been invaded for the purpose of getting information concerning the latest and greatest of his inventions, the one which is being eagerly awaited and which very few have had a chance to see—that is, the combination of the phonograph with the kinetoscope, the contrivance to which Mr. Edison applied the term kinetograph on this occasion.

"The object of this machine," he said, "is to afford the spectator two inventions in one—that is, two senses are simultaneously appealed to. Suppose, we will say, an opera is to be reproduced. The phonograph already repeats the sound. The kinetoscope afterward affords a view of the movements. Now, however, we wish to combine the two and combine them far more effectively than ever their distinct elements have heretofore been rendered by separate instruments.

"Thus, if one wished to hear and see the concert or the opera, it would only be necessary to sit down at home, look upon a scene and see the performance reproduced exactly in every movement and at the same time the voices of the players and singers, the music of the orchestra, the various sounds that accompany a performance of this sort, will be reproduced exactly. The end attained is a perfect illusion. One really hears and sees the play, because the conditions necessary to the suitable impressions upon the eye and ear are obtained."

An Unlucky Draw.

Don Simplicio, to dispel the clouds of melancholy that cast a gloom over his spirits, has taken to theater going. "Ernani" was produced, and everybody spoke highly of the performance, our hero among the rest.

"But there is one fault about it," he said on coming out of the house one evening.

"What is it?"

"I'll tell you. In the third act, where the conspiracy takes place, they draw lots to ascertain which of them is to kill Charles V. Now, what was drawn the first night? Ernani. And the second? Ernani. And the third? Ernani again. Always Ernani. Six nights running! Now, that's unlikely on the face of it. For the same name to be drawn once or twice may pass, but six times running—that is too much."

His remarks were received with a regular ovation.—Giornale delle Donne.

Scott's Favorites.

Scott believed that "Waverley" was his best novel and the "Lady of the Lake" his best poem. He and the Ballantynes had more than one lively discussion on the subject, but he would never admit a change of opinion. He knew the "Lady of the Lake" by heart and once repeated the whole to prove the fact.

A Crime.

"Is it true that Maud Makeface was arrested for intimidating voters?"

"Yes. She threatened to kiss every man who would vote for Johnson."—Indianapolis Journal.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will ead with intense interest: "I cannot descr he numb, creepy sensation that existed in m rms, hands and legs. I had to rub and be hose parts until they were sore, to overco n a measure the dead feeling that had ta possession of them. In addition, I had strange weakness in my back and around waist, together with an indescribable 'gon eeling in my stomach. Physicians said was creeping paralysis, from which, accord g to their universal conclusion, there is n elief. Once it fastens upon a person, the y, it continues its insidious progress un t reaches a vital point and the sufferer die uch was my prospect. I had been doctori year and a half steadily, but with no pa ticular benefit, when I saw an advertisem of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured bottle and began using it. Marvelous as may seem, but a few days had passed befor very bit of that creepy feeling had left me and there has not been even the slightes ndication of its return. I now feel well as I ever did, and have gained te pounds in weight, though I had run dow rom 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommen ation, and it has been as satisfactory in thei ases as in mine."—James Knae, La Rue, O.

Chicagoese.

I frequently resent the rich roasts given Chicago society by the terrible Town Topics, but now and then I am forced to admit that some of its wild and weird whoppers are not altogether unprovoked. At the recent Fellowship Club ladies' layout I overheard one of the officers importune a brilliant boulevard beau not to be in a hurry to leave, as Mrs. Alice J. Shaw was about to appear and whistle. "Is that so?" ejaculated the swagger swell. "Then I'll stay a bit longer. I knowed her over in London."—Chicago Weekly.

Prices of Wheat, Etc.

(From the Review of Reviews.)

To a newspaper statement that wheat in 1859 was as low as it is now, and that corn in 1873 was about the same price (38 cents) that it is now, Coin replied (p. 114): "The statement that wheat in 1859 was as low as now is not true. The average price of No. 2 red winter wheat for 1859 was $1.10 per bushel. The average price for the month of May, 1859, was $1.35. We will take some other things," continued Coin. "I now hold in my hand the statistical abstract of the United States, issued in 1892. On page 341 we see that the average price of cut nails in 1859 was, per 100 pounds, $386. In 1892, $1.83. Now they are about $1.00. On the same page the average price of pig iron in 1859 was $23.38 per ton. In 1892, $15.75; now it is about $12.00. On page 334 we find that the average price for 1859 of cotton was 12.08 cents per pound; now it is about 7 cents. On page 335 we find that the average price for 1859, of fine washed clothing, Ohio fleece wool, was 60 cents. For 1992, 30 cts. All other values on an average have declined like these I have just read. What you say about the price of corn in 1873 is true, but I want to call your attention to the cause of it (p. 116.)

"Corn does not seek distant markets like wheat. This is partly on account of its small price per bushel. It cannot always stand the freight. Its use is not so general as wheat, and it seeks the home market. On p. 215 of the report of the Chicago board of trade for 1892, you will find that the corn crop of the state of Illinois, for the year 1872, which controlled the market price for the spring and summer of 1873, was 217,628,000 bushels; while by this year's report the crop for 1893, which controls the present price, was 160,550,470 bushels. The demand for corn now, with nearly double our population, is greater than it was in 1873, and yet in 1873 the corn crop was 57,000,000 bushels greater in this state than it was last year. This overproduction in 1872 accounts for its low price in 1873. The gold standard accounts for its low price now."

Of the farmer testing this question Coin says: "That after paying his taxes he starts for the depot, and to get there he takes a street car. He finds the fare the same as in 1873. He gets on a Pullman car to find the cost the same as in 1873. He registers at a first-class hotel. He finds the cost about the same as in 1873. He sends a telegram and finds it costs the same as in 1873. He gets a shave with the same result. He buys tea and coffee, with the same result. He gets back home and goes to his bank to borrow money. He finds interests, except in cities on first-class loans, about as high as in 1873."

Answer: "The subject embraced in this part of Coin's school is admitted by all thinking men to be most serious. The great decline in wheat, cotton, wool and some other farm products in the past few years has been such as to cause great distress among the agricultural classes. This decline has amounted to a public calamity, and it has been one of the chief obstacles to a more rapid recuperation from the silver crisis of 1893. Coin, however, misrepresents as usual. Take his farmer journeying to Chicago—he says that he pays the same for a telegram that he did in 1873, the same fare on a Pullman (rather luxurious farmer to travel on a Pullman), the same price for tea, etc. These are positive untruths, for it is well known that rates for telegraphing, railroad fares and the price of tea, are all vastly lower than in 1873. But there has been no connection between the decline in silver and the decline in products, and this may be satisfactorily established by a consideration of the following points:

"1. The decline in silver. It may fairly be conceded that the closing of the mints of Europe, the United States and India to the coinage of silver, has been the principal cause for the decline in the value of that metal. At the same time, the product of silver up to 1893 had steadily and largely increased, thus throwing on the markets of the world an increased supply to be absorbed by the silver standard countries alone, after the United States discontinued their monthly purchases in accordance with the repeal law of November 1893. The effort is made by Coin and all his followers to show that the decline in silver has caused the decline in wheat and other products, merely because the decline in both line occurred somewhat contemporaneously during the past few years. There is no argument in this, although to the unthinking man it is very plausible to say silver has declined and at the same time caused the fall in wheat, cotton, wool, etc. It is the old fallacy, known to every scholar as the reasoning of post hoc ergo propter hoc. The deceptive assertion is repeatedly made by Coin that an ounce of silver will buy as much as it ever did, and therefore that silver has held its price on a parity with merchandise. But this claim in the first place is positively untrue, because it is only of a few articles like those above named that silver will purchase as much as ever, while of a host of others such as corn, beef, pork, lard, butter, cheese, coffee, etc., and specially of day's wages, an ounce of silver will not buy nearly as much as it formerly did. Let anyone look to the ruling prices of merchandise in Mexico for a confirmation of this statement. Merchandise is very high there, though wages have risen but little, showing that everyone gets the benefit of the silver prices sooner than the poor workman. If it is correct to say that an ounce of silver will buy as much wheat and cotton as ever, it is just as true to say that a ton of iron will buy just as much of those articles as ever, and the price of silver bullion has no more relation to the price of wheat than the price of iron has. What Coin and his disciples now fear more than anything else is a substantial rise in the price of wheat within the next year. A healthy and nonspeculative advance to 80 cents in Chicago would knock the main argument out of his whole book.

"2. How then is the large decline in prices of merchandise to be accounted for? In the first place, this decline so much talked about is by no means universal, and many articles are now as high or higher than they were in former years. The extreme decline in a few prominent articles, such as wheat, cotton, wool and iron, serve to lower the whole average of prices. No better examples could be selected for a discussion of the entire subject of low prices than the four articles above named. Suffice it to say, that a candid examination of the whole subject shows very clearly to all reasonable men who are desirous of getting at the truth, that the depression in these great articles of commerce has been largely due to a vast extension of production through the opening of new fields, together with the improved facilities for production and lower prices of transportation. At the same time there has been in progress, since the Baring failure in November, 1890, a prodigious commercial crisis that has extended throughout the civilized world. Australia, Argentina, the United States and India (the two last named through independent silver coinage) were the countries most acutely affected; but all of Europe has felt the severe shock.

GRANGER DAY.

Mrs. Tilson then followed and traced out the particulars in which the care of fowls resembles that of other stock, and suggested that if the children are helped and directed by their parents, through the fowls which they can handle, learn valuable lessons in the way of taking care of larger stock in due time.

Supt. Gregg then thanked the audience for their attendance and the local editors and business men for advertising the institute so well and expressed the hope that we should all meet again. But a large part of the audience refused to be dismissed and called for Supt. Gregg's system of selecting dairy cows. He gave with great force and clearness his four points: Depth at the flanks, steep pitch at the crops, large milk wells and milk veins, and an udder that is not pendulous or beefy, but supple in texture and clasping in form. As the wish was expressed that the Institute corps could remain another day, it is very probable that Fertile will have another institute some time in the near future.

LONGFELLOW'S FIRST POETRY.

He Was More Than Thirty When His First Volume Was Published.

Toward the end of 1836 he took up his abode in Cambridge, where he was to reside for the rest of his life—for 45 years. He was made to feel at home in the society of the scholars who clustered about Harvard, then almost the sole center of culture in the country. His work for the college was not so exacting that he had not time for literature. The impulse to write poetry returned, yet the next book he published was the prose "Hyperion," which appeared in 1839, and which, though it has little plot or action, may be called a romance. The youthful and poetic hero, a passionate pilgrim in Europe, was, more or less, a reflection of Longfellow himself.

A few months later in the same year he published his first volume of poetry—"Voices of the Night"—in which he reprinted certain of his earlier verses, most of them written while he was at Bowdoin. Some of these boyish verses show the influence of Bryant, and others reveal to us that the young poet had not yet looked at life for himself, but still saw it through the stained glass windows of European tradition. The same volume contained also some more recent poems—"The Beleaguered City" and "The Reaper and the Flowers" and the "Psalm of Life"—perhaps the first of his poems to win a swift and abiding popularity. These lyrics testified that Longfellow was beginning to have a style of his own. As Hawthorne wrote to him, "Nothing equal to them was ever written in this world—this western world, I mean."

Certainly no American author had yet written any poem of the kind so good as the best of those in Longfellow's volume of "Ballads," printed two years later. Better than any other American poet Longfellow had mastered the difficulties of the story in song, and he knew how to combine the swiftness and the picturesqueness the ballad requires. His ballads have more of the old time magic, more of the early simplicity, than those of any other modern English author. Of its kind there is nothing better in the language than "The Skeleton In Armor," with its splendid lyric swing, and "The Village Blacksmith" and "The Wreck of the Hesperus" are almost as good in their humbler sphere. "Excelsior," in the same volume, voices the noble aspirations of youth and has been taken to heart by thousands of boys and girls.—Professor Brander Matthews in St. Nicholas.

Preparing For a Caning.

Kit Alexander had been warned several times for breaches of school discipline and was at length reported to the head master, who gave him a final warning. One night not long after Kit was again caught in mischief, and he felt that this time he was "in for it." A flogging by the doctor was no joke, and Kit determined to make what preparation he could that the wind might be tempered to the shorn lamb.

On rising the next morning he put on first his undershirt, then a layer of stiff brown paper, then his jerseys, upon these a sweater and over all a clean white shirt, borrowed from his chum, whose clothing was two sizes larger than his own. Lastly he put on his coat and vest.

It was a very hot day in June, and at morning intermission Kit whispered to a friend: "I'm nearly stifled. I hope he'll give it to me now."

But the doctor said nothing, and Kit went on stewing until dinner time. He felt half inclined to dispense at least with the sweater before afternoon school, but fear of the doctor's cane deterred him.

All through the afternoon he suffered untold misery, mopping his face until his handkerchief would mop no more. But at length, just before dismissal, came a messenger. "The doctor would like to see Alexander in his study."

On entering the study the boy saw the supple, snakelike cane lying on the table.

"Well, Alexander," said the doctor, "I can go on warning you no longer. You have brought this upon yourself. But as it is your first visit here for such a purpose I shall make your punishment somewhat milder. Hold out your hand; four on each!"—Youth's Companion.

HILL AT PORTLAND.

President of the Great Northern Silent on Northern Pacific Matters.

PORTLAND, Or., June 4.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, arrived here during the evening, over the Oregon and Navigation Company's line from Spokane, accompanied by his wife and three children, and his private secretary. Mr. Hill comes here to meet Jacob H. Schiff, a New York banker and stockholder in the Great Northern. Mr. Hill's Western trip is taken mostly to rest and inspect his line. This is, at least, what he says about it. In an interview he would say nothing further about the Northern Pacific going into his control than it was being reorganized and would be soon on a sound financial basis. With the Northern Pacific in good shape financially, he predicts renewed prosperity to the Northwest.

Mr. Hill denied emphatically that he had any intention of getting control of the Oregon and Northern company. "The Oregon and Northern company," he said, "holds the key to the railway situation as far as it pertains to Portland, and this city will be a great deal better off as long as the road remains independent of any transcontinental line."

Caffarelli thought so much of his voice that once when challenged to fight a duel he refused on the ground that he had no right to expose to any risk the life of so great a singer.

Gambling Is Worse Than Drunkenness to Business Integrity.

"Gambling is the skulking, poisonous foe to business integrity," said an experienced business man. "You can see the signs of drunkenness," he said, "and guard against being damaged by a drinking partner or employee, but more often than not you know nothing of the gambler's downward progress until your losses tell the tale. I have seldom seen a case in which the habit of gambling did not have the companion habit of lying. The lying gets worse as the gambling becomes confirmed. Your gambling associate comes along with such a cheerful mask of falsehood that you are indignant when somebody intimates that he is treading the dangerous path of dalliance with cards or horses.

"Some years ago I had a little experience which I've no doubt many merchants can duplicate. I was a managing partner in a branch of one of the most extensive houses in St. Louis. We had a salesman whom we valued highly. It came to our knowledge that he was falling in love with poker. I said that he must be warned. The other partner thought he was all right, but consented to the warning. In a few months the man collected a bill and lost the money at poker. I then insisted on reporting a discharge to the main firm, but my partner stuck to his faith in the man's promises. Finally we compromised by retaining the delinquent on condition that my partner notify the firm that he would be personally responsible for losses caused by a repetition of the occurrence. We also sent to every customer a notice that all bills should be paid directly to our headquarters.

"Before six months had passed the salesman managed to collect a bill of $1,500 and lost every dollar.

"My partner took the money out of his pocket and reimbursed the firm. It is not necessary to tell anybody who knows gamblers that he never received a cent from the man he had befriended.

"The preacher and the lawmaker may grade other vices as more heinous, but the merchant and the banker who know what is good for them are more afraid of gamblers than of anything

Importance of the Exchange Reader.

The man who reads the exchanges is a very important man, and, let me say, too, he is a pretty highly paid man. He has to read, we will say, 3,000 papers regularly. All the newspapers in the country come into the office, and he does not do anything else. He sits at his desk all day, and a pile of newspapers, or, say, a cord of newspapers, is laid before him every morning. He starts to work and turns them over and over to see what is in them. He has to know what it is that should be taken from them and put into his paper. What is the interesting story? It requires judgment to know this. It requires knowledge and experience as well as talent. It also requires a sense of humor, because there are a great many things that are really important that may not seem so at the first glance, and the newspaper reader has got to judge about that. He must always be on hand and spend a great many hours at his desk, and he is pretty tired when he gets through with his day's task. It is a hard duty, but he has lots of amusement, and, as I said, he is very well paid. So he is happy.—Charles A. Dana in McClure's Magazine.

LION AND THE LAMB.

You Must Decide Which Was Lyin and Which the Young Sheep.

"Yes," said the lion of the evening, "I flatter myself that we African explorers get in some queer places."

The fair young girl at his side regarded him dreamily.

"I, too,"—her eyes brightened and she spoke quickly—"have been around a little. Let me see"—

He smiled superciliously.

"Around the world in 50 days; a winter in the arctics; two weeks in a balloon; on horseback through Asia Minor; six months in Patagonia; among the hill tribes of India; through the diamond fields of Kimberley; in the Australian bush; across the Great American desert; from Sweden to Siberia; two months in Alaska, and on foot through the Bitter Root mountains of Idaho. Yes"—

Again that dreamy look.

"We young lady reporters have to hustle round!"

And for the space of five minutes the African explorer sat silent and thought he was thinking.—New York World.

THE DISTRICT COURT

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 27.

An indictment was returned against P. O. Havervold, of East Grand Forks, charging him with grand larceny in the second degree. He is the attorney charged with having appropriated to his own use $50, the money of Henry Rosenberg, which had been entrusted to his care as agent. He plead "not guilty," and bonds given for his appearance for trial.

George Howard, the young man charged with burglary in the third degree—taking some two or three watches from a house in East Grand Forks, through his counsel, Ira Richardson, plead guilty to larceny in the second degree. This plea was accepted by the county attorney and Howard was sentenced to the reform school at St. Cloud.

The first case set for this morning, Albert E. Olson vs. John Peterson, went to the foot of the calendar, the parties not being ready.

No other case being ready for trial this morning, the jury was discharged until three o'clock p. m.

Two appeal cases, C. L. Lasher vs. John J. Enright, and A. A. Hofto vs. M. O. Homme were moved on the calendar by respondents and judgment of the lower court affirmed.

The grand jury handed in its report, stating that it had visited the jail and hospital and found everything in good order. It recommended that a desk be placed in the jail office for the keeping of papers, etc. It stated that they had examined carefully into all crimes and charges presented to them and of which they had knowledge, and asked to be honorably discharged.

They handed in an indictment against D. Collins, of Fosston, for selling liquor to an habitual drunkard, and one against Jens Haason for a like offense. Collins entered his plea of "not guilty."

AFTERNOON.

No. 28. Frank Hunt vs. Joseph Bergeron, et al, Chas. E. Boughton, for plaintiff and Wm. Watts for defendant, was the only case set for the afternoon. The plaintiff was allowed judgment for the amount claimed, $82.10. This was an action on a promissory note.

A matter from Kittson county was brought before the court. Albert W. Stiles vs. A. Goslin, et al. a petition to vacate the townsite of Interapolis. This once would-be city was laid out about 15 years ago in the extreme northwest corner of the state. It did not prove a booming success and now the owners of that site would like it vacated. The petition was granted. Wm. Watts appeared for plaintiff. No appearance for defendants.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28.

No. 9. J. D. Bacon vs. M. C. Gray, A. R. Holston for plaintiff and C. J. Gunderson for defendant, was stricken from the calendar. No appearance for either party.

A jury was called in the case of Chas. Bauman, et al, vs. Chas. A. Anderson. Bennett & Street for plaintiff and J. A. Hendricks for the defendants. This was an action in replevin. The parties live in Fosston. The defendant attached a team of horses belonging to Miss Bauman and Chas. Bauman; the horses being in the possession of John Bauman, the father of the plaintiffs. It appears that the father bought the horses for his son and daughter and the son and daughter paid for the team with their money. The horses were replevined and the case brought to determine the ownership. The case went to the jury about 11 o'clock. A verdict was returned in favor of the plaintiffs, entitling them to the possession of the property and $25.00 as damages for retaining same.

A jury was then impanneled in the case of Eliza O'Brien vs. Mathew Martin and Thomas Logan. W. E. Rowe and Wm. Watts, attorneys for plaintiff and DeForest Bucklen attorney for defendants. This action was brought to recover for a lot of wheat, about 500 bushels, claimed to have been wrongfully taken from plaintiff by defendant, Martin. Plaintiff had a farm rented from defendant and according to the terms of the contract was to leave a corresponding number of acres plowed back in the fall as when she Work Commences at Once.

On Monday morning W. S. Hayes arrived with the overseer of the new experimental farm, Mr. Hoverstad, who will commence breaking on the new experimental farm north of the city. The other work, putting up necessary buildings, will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

A Floater.

On Thursday evening, while playing near the river below the dam, some boys discovered the body of an infant in the river. They at once notified the authorities and the body, which was in an advanced stage of decomposition, was taken to Chesterman's morgue, when it was examined by a physician, who gave the opinion that the body was that of a still-born babe. Indications seemed to indicate foul play, but in the condition of the body when found it would be difficult to determine. The body was buried by Undertaker Chesterman and thus, perhaps, what may have been a dark crime, is hidden from mortal view.

Ho, For Detroit!

This morning, the ever-glorious day that we celebrate, the excursion train for Detroit will leave the N. P. depot at 7 o'clock. Returning will leave Detroit at about 8 o'clock. Round trip tickets $2.67, good to return on the morning of the 6th.

Going to paint or paper? If so give Schmidt & Lean a call and get their prices.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

This is the day we celebrate—or used to when Herb Mason was here to enthuse the people, and hav'nt done much at it since Herb moved away. Why this matter was neglected this year we can't well understand, and we have had the question: "Is Crookston going to celebrate this year?" asked us a great many times within the past two or three weeks, by farmers living convenient and when we said no, the invariable reply was: "Well, I should think the prospects for crops in this vicinity this year were sufficient to induce your people to turn the eagle loose and let her scream for all that's out." And we had to say, as we sadly turned away: "Herb is not here this year."

Charlie Misner, if not a whole fire department has at least the making of a howling terror as a fire laddy, the proof of which came about on this wise. The other evening at midnight's holy hour, as Charles was rocking to sleep his youngest, the hired girl of one of his neighbors came tearing in and exclaimed: "Oh! Mr. Misner, our house is all on fire intirely, and av yees don't moind, would ye be kind enough to rin over an put it out at all at all." Arising in all his native dignity, Charles remarked: "Whist, Biddy, be aisy before you wake the kid, but show me the house and I'll put it out before a fireman would have time to put his hat on. Lead on, McDuffy!" Very quickly the house was reached and Charlie beheld a very much excited lady of the house and a red-hot stove pipe induced by an extra dose of dry mill wood to get a quick dinner with. With the air of a Chesterfield, Charles casually remarked, "Calm yourself, madam, your house is in no immediate danger. There is no fire in this building. You can't find anywhere in Hick's almanax where he predicts a fire in this house in the latter part of June. Observe your stove. Its rosy complexion indicates the ending of one of Hicks' storm periods, therefore all immediate danger is over for the present." Saying which Charlie proceeded to examine the chimney up stairs to satisfy his mind that he had diagnosed the case properly and departed, a firmer believer in Hicks than ever, if possible.

Commercial Union Club.

The meeting of the Commercial Union Club on Friday evening was one of great interest and importance, many matters coming up for discussion. Among other things the president announced the following list of standing committees:

Auditing—Messrs. Eiken, H. R. Robertson and Berg.

On Progress—Messrs. Ellington, Alex McKinnon, Ringdal, Saake and Kelsey.

Reception—Messrs. Alex McKinnon, Wheeler, Vance, Ellington, McGuire, Sawyer, J. R. McKinnon, Cooke, McKenzie, Hammond, Fournet, H. Steenerson, Rosenthal, LePage, Saake and Erickson.

Good Health

And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaprilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a blood purifier, its power to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now?

WANTS TO KNOW,

YOU KNOW.

A Dweller in the Pine Barrens of Michigan Inquires

WHAT HE SHALL DO TO BE SAVED.

This week the JOURNAL receives among other letters of inquiry, a letter from a Michigander whose abode is in Big Rapids, Mich., who wants to know "what are the prospects for business in Polk county?" Well, briefly, Crookston claims 6,000 population, has ample educational facilities, has seven or eight churches, has a saw-mill of 150,000 feet capacity, which annually manufactures a large quantity of pine lumber from logs floated down the Red Lake River from the vast pine reserves to the east of us; has a 200-barrel roller mill, a large tannery, a brick yard, a pork packing establishment on a small scale, that is about to be enlarged and extended, and various and sundry enterprises that employ many men during the year. Owing to the financial conditions prevailing in Uncle Sam's domains for the past few years our material interests have suffered in common with all to that extent that property of all kinds is very low, rents are cheap and living cheap. Horses and machinery necessary to carry on farm work are very cheap. This year all kinds of farm products indigenous to this soil promises an immense yield, and wheat, our great staple, promises to pay well. This has a tendency to create a great demand for our cheap farm lands and the sales are becoming lively. Farm lands range in price from the cost of opening a farm on government lands to $20 per acre as the top notch. Indications all point to an early revival of business all along the line in Polk county, and in that hope we live. Crookston needs a few more manufacturing industries to place her in the front ranks of the progressive cities of the country, and an energetic board of trade is doing much in this direction.

first rented the land in 1892. When the wheat was threshed in the fall it was divided at the machine, each taking half and putting it in the granary. The farm was rented under one of those "cut-throat" or "iron-clad" contracts which allowed the owner of the farm to take all grain if the party renting failed to plow the requisite number of acres, and pay all sums due owner for advances made. Defendant in this case claimed that he sold four cows, one mare and furnished some other things for plaintiff, through her husband, acting as her agent, and that the plowing was not complete as per contract, and he came and hauled off plaintiff's share of the wheat. Plaintiff claims that she never authorized her husband as her agent to buy the cows and horse and that the plowing was in progress when the wheat was taken and that she had ample time to finish before freezing up. The case went to the jury just before adjournment 6:30.

SATURDAY MORNING JUNE 29.

The jury in the case of Eliza O'Brien vs. Mathew Martini and Thos. Logan handed in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $151.98.

A jury was called in the case of Carrie Melland vs. Gust Hanson and Levi Steenerson, intervenor. Ole J. Vaule attorney for plaintiff and Bennett & Street and H. Steenerson for defendant. This case was tried in district court January '94 and a verdict for $40 or over was rendered for Levi Steenerson. It appears that plaintiff owned the lots in Fosston on which the building in question is located. She moved an old building onto this land, and with another woman, Mrs. Toite, repaired and built to that building. They bought the lumber from Mr. Steenerson; he understanding that the two were buying together. Plaintiff claims that each was to pay for the amount of lumber she used. Mrs. Toite it appears, used the great bulk of the lumber. Miss Melland paid part of her share of the lumber but Mrs. Toite refused to pay anything. Mr. Steenerson, as he claims, had an agreement with Miss Melland after he found he could get nothing from Mrs. T.; that he was to get possession of Mrs. Toit's part of the building, and then Miss Melland would buy from him. She denies this agreement. However he got a bill of sale from Mrs. T. for her portion of the building. He further claims the building was to remain there until his claim for lumber against it was paid by rents. She denies that also, and wants possession of the whole thing, although she don't claim to own that part of it. The case went to the jury just before adjournment Saturday evening.

In the case of J. S. Nichols vs. Brown Knutson the jury rendered a verdict in favor of plaintiff that he is entitled to a return of the property, if a return can be had, if a return can not be had, then for the value as set forth in the complaint.

MONDAY MORNING JULY 1.

The jury sent out Saturday evening in the case of Carrie Melland vs. Levi Steenerson, returned a sealed verdict in favor of the plaintiff, that she is entitled to the possession of the house, but that she must pay to the defendant $175.

A jury was then called in the case of State of Minnesota vs. Gustav Peterson and John N. Ostby. Co. Atty. Gossman and Asst. O'Brien for State and J. Walseth and H. Steenerson for the defendant. Defendant moved for separate trial for Gustav Peterson. Granted. Ostby is up at Lake Bemidji. The case was first set for the 8th. The charge is selling intoxicating liquors to an habitual drunkard. Thos. Johnson is the man to whom the liquor was sold. He is a man 71 years of age. He used alcohol. He said he liked it. One witness said he saw him pretty often with a "jag" on, and explaining "jag" he said he meant half full, and when he had a "load" on he was "chuck" full. The jury were out but a few minutes and handed in a verdict of "guilty as charged."

New York Fashion Letter.

In the make up of the summer wardrobe for leaving town, the bicycle gown, or rather the bicycle outfit, is such an important factor that the choice of material and style is a serious question. Mohair or alapaca is a favorite fabric and is desirabe for street and traveling costume on account of its light weight. Linen, duck and holland in tailor form, with blazer or Eton jacket and dainty cotton or silk shirts are made up for mid-summer wear. For cooler days the Norfolk jacket increases in popularity. Mohair also appears in the new bathing costumes and is a serviceable fabric as it does not easily absorb water. The "Trilby" jackets, now so popular, are very pretty in mohair, lined with bright colors and trimmed with revers of velvet or silk. These jackets are made up in the same material of the skirt as well as of pique, embroidery and linen to be worn with wool skirts Fancy waists are more abundant, more varied and more attractive than ever. The styles, fabrics and trimming with their Dresden and Watteau effects are ideal.

Delicate white toilettes are exquisitely trimmed with Lois XV ribbons and Marie Antoinette berthas. Large Leghorn hats massed with flowers of every hue add to the final touch of picturesque effect. In looking over the new Fashion Magazines at hand we find the "Paris Album of Fashion," "La Mode de Paris," "The French Dressmaker" and "La Mode," published by A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th Street, New York City, unusually attractive this month.

"La Mode de Paris" and "Paris Album of Fashion" cost $3,50 each for a year's subscription, or 35 cents a copy. "The French Dressmaker" is $3.00 per annum, or 30 cents a copy; and "La Mode" $1.50 a year, or 15 cents a copy. If you are unable to procure either of these journals from your newsdealer don't take any substitute, but apply by mail to Messrs. A. McMowell & Co., 4 West 14th street, New York City.

America's Representative Rider.

The Pride of His Native Country—America. A Feature With the Walter Main Shows. Claude Orton a Born Artist.

Among the most noted of America's representative great artists who have justly gained a world-wide reputation there are none who are more deserving than Claude Orton. Coming from a family of riders—his father justly celebrated over the entire world and his grandfather during his life the representative rider of Europe—it is no wonder that Claude should early in his life attain a reputation that is second to none in the entire circus profession. This young and talented equestrian is this season one of the features of Walter L. Main Grandest and Best Shows on earth. He is, however, not the only rider with this all featurs amusement enterprise. There is a full score of lady and gentlemen equestrians who are all thoroughly well-known on both sides of the Atlantic; in fact the entire organization is composed of the very best circus talent the world affords, including the great Rosarias four in number; Frank Miller, the famous hurdle rider. Miss Gracie Thomas, the representative lady rider of the world, who has created a positive sensation in Europe for the past several years, will make her first American appearance with this attraction. Dollie Miller, another noted equestrienne, is a most valuable addition to Manager Main's enterprise. A double troupe of Royal Japanese, the three famous Renos. The only riding lion, "Wallace" a king of the forest that rides a ponderous elephant and a thoroughbred Arabian steed. Capt. Pierre Perier, captain of the fire department of Paris, France, will daily make two dives from the top of a tower one hundred feet high into his patent life saving net, in view of the thousands of spectators and free to all. The Roman hippodrome is a feature that can be seen nowhere else in all the world, and daily at 10 a. m., the massive street parade, over a mile in length, containing ten kinds of music steam calliopes, mounted knights and ladies, a herd of elephants, a drove of camels, and upward of three hundred of the finest horses ever owned or controlled by an amusement enterprise, together with more than a score of open dens of rare wild beasts, will take place. It is worth coming miles to see, and is free to all. Its appearance in Crookston on Thursday July 11, will be just reason for a holiday.

The July number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW opens with a discussion of "Fenimore Cooper's Literary Offences," in which Mark Twain satirically protests against Cooper's poverty of invention and dullness of word-sense. The Hon. FREDERIC C. PENFIELD, U. S. Diplomatic Agent and Consul-General to Egypt contributes a highly interesting paper on "Contemporary Egypt" showing the land of the Nile as it exists today, while in "Thirty Years in the Grain Trade," EGERTON R. WILLIAMS reviews the history of the grain trade in the United States for the last three decades. "How Free Silver Would Affect us," is ably explained by the Hon. EWARD O. LEECH late Director of the Mint, who, writing from the gold standard point of view, considers free silver coinage would be a national disgrace as well as a national misfortune. The third in the series of "Wild Traits in Tame Animals," by DR. LOUIS ROBINSON, proves as interesting as its predecessors, and shows the author's fondness for natural history. A timely and seasonable article on "The Disposal of a City's Waste," is furnished by Col. George E. Waring, Jr., Commissioner of Street Cleaning of the City of New York, whose suggestions respecting sanitary measures are applicable not only to New York, but to all other places—large and small. ALBERT D. VANDAM'S seventh instalment of "Personal History of the Second Empire," treats of "The Conspiracy of the Carbonaria," and in "Coin's Financial School and Its Censors," W. H. HARVEY, author of "Coin's Financial School," piquantly replies to the critisms bestowed on that popular work. Under the heading of "Degeneration and Evolution" space is found for three valuable papers, viz.: "A Reply to My Critics," in in which Dr. Max Nordau vigorously refutes the strictures made on his degeneration in the June Review by Kenyon Cox, Anton Seidl and Mayo W. Hazeltine; "Kidd's Social Evolution" is thoughtfully considered by the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, and "The Decay of Literary Taste" is forcibly deprecated by Edmund Gosse, the eminent English writer. Other topics dealt with are "New Light on English History," by Edward Porritt; "Industrial Future of the South," by Frederic G. Mather, and "The Need of Better Roads," by Martin Dodge.

Going to paint or paper? If so give Schmidt & Lean a call and get their prices.

A SUMMER OUTING.

Where to go for a summer outing of any extent is no longer (if it ever was) a Hobson's Choice. The railroad companies offer excursion rates and routes by the hundred. The Seaside, the White Mountains, the St. Lawrence, the Great Lakes' the Colorado mountain resorts, Yellowstone Park, and far off Alaska, are all to choose from, time and money being supposed no object. The demand of business and the size of the pocket-book, however, make it impossible for thousands to do more than pass a few days in a quiet way and at moderate expense. To such, we might suggest if they have not taken it, a journey along the Upper Mississippi. There is no river scenery in our country that really surpasses it in either variety or beauty. From the rapids at Rock Island to the Falls of St. Anthony, through the placid expanse of Lake Pepin, is an ever shifting panorama of beauty, while there are many towns and villages enroute where a stop of a day can be made with a great deal of pleasure. If this trip is to be made in a short time, the best way is to take the trains of the Burlington Route, which run for three hundred miles close along the east bank, affording a thousand charming views. An agreeable and inexpensive outing may be had in this way for a trifle of cost. Apply to any of the Burlington ticket agents for maps, time tables and tickets, or for more detailed information, address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

IN YOUR BLOOD.

Is the cause of that tired, languid feeling which afflicts you at this season of the year. The blood is impure and has become thin and poor. That is why you have no strength, no appetite, cannot sleep. Purify your blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla which will give you an appetite, tone your stomach, and invigorate your nerves.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

The great popularity of Ayer's cherry Pectoral as a cough-cure is easily explained. It is soothing, healing, agreeable to the taste, does not interfere with digestion, and is the most economical of all similar preparations. It is prompt to act and sure to cure.

The Fireman's Tournament.

Of this event in Crookston the Warren Register says:

The tournament was a grand success, despite the rains, which frequently interfered with the sporting events and to some extent cut down the attendance. The Warren fire company had received little drilling and did not deem it advisable to enter any of the contests. At the association meeting held in McKinnon's hall Thursday morning about sixty firemen were present from the departments of Crookston, East Grand Forks, Hallock, McIntosh, Thief River Falls and Warren. After the deliverance of the annual address by President Schmidt, and acceptance of the report of the committee on credentials, the association proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. E. A. Nelson, of Hallock, was chosen president; W. A. Knapp, of Warren, secretary; S. H. Drew, of McIntosh, treasurer; and C. A. Brown, D. Main and J. E. O,Brien, executive committee. It was decided to hold the tournament next year at Hallock. The hose race was won by Thief River Falls; the hook and ladder race, the wet test, and the hub and hub races by Crookston; and the coupling contest by East Grand Forks. The firemen are enthusiastic over the successful outcome of their first tournament, and are already laying plans for making the one next year an even greater event.

A DINNER IN KOREA.

It Is a Ceremonial That Extends Through the Entire Day.

"Korea, the country which caused all the trouble between China and Japan, has many queer social customs," said J. A. Morrill, "and I remember going to a banquet given by a member of the foreign office there, which, in many respects, was quite unique. The guests arrived long before the dinner hour, for in Korea an affair of this kind lasts all day, and were ushered into a pavilion adjacent to the one in which the dinner was to be served. After several half hours had been whiled away in smoking and in conversation the dinner was at last announced, and we were summoned into the other hall.

"As soon as we had entered the officials began to divest themselves of some of their clothing, for parts of a native's wearing apparel seriously incommode him in taking food. We took our places at a large rectangular table, which was heaped with food of all kinds in brazen dishes of hemispherical shape. For the first course we had soup and eel, which is a kind of wine, and for the second the waiters handed around some of the other dishes which stood on the table. These contained meats of various kinds—beef, pork and fried fish cut in thin yellow slices. At this juncture there entered several Korean singing girls, clad in the gaudiest costumes, and whose business it was to make themselves generally agreeable when at a banquet, for they constitute all the female society that there is in that country. Their singing was not what an American would call good, nor was their dancing, but their conversation and presence certainly added a zest to the occasion.

"Long as it is, a Korean banquet eventually comes to an end, and this one closed with a decoction of pear juice colored crimson and spiced with pine nuts. This we sipped at our leisure, while the attendants lighted pipes for us. After watching the performances of the singing girls we summoned our chairs and were carried to our various home, I at least feeling much wiser by having participated in one of the queer customs of a queer people."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ROBBED BY PARROTS.

These Birds Play a Part In Shaping the Destiny of America.

A flight of birds, coupled with a sailor's superstition, robbed Columbus of the honor of discovering the continent. It is a curious but historical fact. When Columbus sailed westward over the unknown Atlantic, he expected to reach Zipanga, Japan. After several days' sail from Gomera, one of the Canary islands, he became uneasy at not discovering Zipangu, which, according to his reckoning, should have been 216 nautical miles more to the east.

After a long discussion he yielded to the opinion of Martin Alonzo Pinzon, the commander of the Pinta, and steered to the southwest. Pinzon was guided in his opinion solely by a flight of parrots, which took wing in that direction. It was good luck to follow in the wake of a flight of birds when engaged upon a voyage of discovery—a widespread superstition among Spanish seamen of that day—and this change in the great navigator's course curiously exemplifies the influence of small and apparently trivial events in the world's history.

If Columbus had held to his course, he would have entered the gulf stream, have reached Florida and then probably have been carried to Cape Hatteras and Virginia. The result would probably have given the present United States a Roman Catholic Spanish population instead of a Protestant English one, a circumstance of immeasurable importance.

"Never," wrote Humboldt, "had the flight of birds more important consequences."—Current Literature.

A Haunted Lumber Camp.

Strange tales come from the Sourdnahunk region in regard to Jack Reed's depot camp on the road leading to Strickland's mountain. The camp is built over the grave of a man who was killed in some unknown way, and the woodsmen say the place is haunted. At any rate on every moonlight night a listener outside the camp can hear the sound of rolling stones that apparently are grating, grinding, rattling, plunking each other, as though sliding down a steep bank.

Diligent search has been made for the source of this strange noise, but so far no-one has solved the mystery. Old lumbermen remember that the camp has been considered to be haunted for years, and the sound of the rolling stones has been heard on many a moonlight night in the past. Many lumbermen who are on their way into the Sourdnahunk region prefer to push by the depot camp and take a night tramp rather than sleep over that grave and hear those grinding, rolling stones.—Bangor News.

Nonsensical Names.

It has been complained that foolish names are often bestowed on the materials in which we garb ourselves, and that it is nonsense to speak of "electric blue," "crushed strawberry" or "Lois Fuller," but such titles are sensible and descriptive compared to many used to describe fashionable tints in vogue during the reign of Louis XIV. What should we think nowadays of "consoled widow," "expiring ape," "invalid Spaniard," "risen dead," "love's desirs" and "baboon laughter?"—Chicago Post.

Order For Hearing on Claims.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss. In Probate Court.
County of Polk. }
Special term June 28, 1895.

In the matter of the estate of Isaac Underhill, deceased.

Letters of administration, with the will annexed, on the estate of said deceased, being granted to Cora B. Underhill, of the county of Huron and State of Ohio,

IT IS ORDERED, That all claims and demands of all persons against said estate be presented to this Court, for examination and allowance, at the Probate office in the city of Crookston, on Thursday, the second day of January, 1896, at 10 o'clock a. m.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That six months from the date hereof be allowed to creditors to present their claims against said estate, at the expiration of which time all claims not presented to said court, or not proven to its satisfaction, shall be forever barred, unless, for cause shown, further time be allowed.

ORDERED FURTHER, That notice of the time and place of the hearing and examination of said claims and demands shall be given by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to the day appointed for such examination, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 28th day of June, A. D. 1895. By the Court,
C. M. BENSON,
Judge of Probate.

A Winning Bluff.

Fogg—What do you mean by saying that the thing can't be done? Gouger says it can be done, and Gouger is the best authority in the whole world. I suppose you will admit that?

Fenderson—Oh, of course! If Gouger says it can be done, I have nothing more to say.

Figg (after Fenderson's departure)—Who is this Gouger and is he such an authority upon the matter?

Fogg—Never heard of him in my life. Don't know there is such a person. Probably there isn't. If there is, don't know whether he is an authority on this or any other question.—Boston Transcript.

Curious Facts.

The medical statistics of this country have been studied by Dr. John T. Billings from the racial standpoint. He deduces many curious facts: The infantile death rate among the blacks is very high; the race itself is shorter lived than the white; it is less liable than the white to malaria, yellow fever and cancer, but succumbs more readily to tuberculosis and pneumonia. Irish children survive infantile diseases, but the adult death rate is high; tuberculosis, pneumonia and alcoholism cut them down. Germans are especially liable to digestive disorders and cancer. Jews have a low death rate; they live long; their diseases are diabetes, locomotor ataxia and kindred nervous ailments.—Zion's Herald, Boston.

ARCADY.

Be not hesitant with me,
For I go to Arcady.
Winter is stern monarch here,
And without the window there,
Scornful of the leafless year,
Breathes his frosts upon the air.
Now from all the hapless trees
Every frisky dryad flees.
Be not hesitant with me,
Let us go to Arcady!

Be not hesitant with me,
Come and go to Arcady!
We have drunk the summer's wine—
Every yellow drop is gone—
Plucked the last grape from the vine.
Yonder woodland hides the fawn,
Where beneath the young moon's glance,
Lithesome dryads throng and dance.
Be not hesitant with me!
To the woods of Arcady!

LITTLE STARTS A FUSS.

Homemaking and Homekeeping Built on Trivialities.

Men and women don't need to swing clubs to break up home concord. A sneer and a waspish tongue will be quite as effective. Sarcasm and nagging are to the atmosphere of love what sand flies and fleas are to summer. Who would not prefer an occasional brush with a roaring June bug to the torment of a flea you can't catch?

Unjudged, accepted, trusted to the end.
A man must hold his friend.

There is more than one virtue that has gone out of date along with town pumps and tallow candles. There is the old fashioned trick of loyalty to one's friends. There are plenty of friendships which, like costumes, are put on and off to suit circumstances, but the custom of "sticking up" for a friend, as our grandmothers called it, through all trouble and calumny, whether deserved or not, went out with calashes and knee buckles. How many understand the deep and delicate meaning of the words Ruth spoke so long ago to Naomi, "Thy friends shall be my friends?" We all of us number so called friends upon the ephemeral records we keep whose lips are ready to traduce, unchallenged by us, the names of others for whom we vow an equal regard. It should be as impossible for us to listen to a word of reproach against any one whom we love as it would be to say the slanderous thing ourselves. What does the sensitive plant do when rude touch approaches its blossoms? Just what we should do when the breath of scandal touches our friends.

If loyalty is out of date, so is modesty. I do not allude to the modesty that would interfere with a woman's plan to go half dressed into a theater box or to a public reception. I pass that by and take up the question only of such modesty as keeps a young girl diffident and preserves bashfulness in a boy like the bloom on a plum. "He is green!" you say of such and such a one So is April! Who would not prefer such greenness to the withering blight of hay and a midsummer drought? Never condemn a young person because there is enough sap left in his soul to flutter a green leaf late in the season. I love to see that modesty which makes a youth deferential to his elders. It's horribly out of date, I know, but I love bashfulness and modest, unassuming ways are mighty sweet to see.—Amber in Chicago Times-Herald.

To Start the Story.

In writing a story there are authors who do not plan the course of events in advance because they do not know them, but they write on, certain that some ingenious complication will suggest itself—in short, the story is to write itself.

I confess I believe in and rather follow this system, for the reason that the incidents seem more like real life where the unexpected so often happens, and where events turn up in a capricious way. However this may be, I have always found that everything depends on getting well started—that is, started with such eagerness and enthusiasm that you could sit down then and there and write on and on to the end.

Others deliberate and potter, as it were, hover on the brink, hesitating to make the plunge. The moment of departure is put off and put off, and when at last a start is made it becomes a task and a drudgery and is virtually no start at all, because it is so labored and uninspired that you feel you have not begun.—"Memoirs of an Author," Percy Fitzgerald.

Dr. de Koven's Letter.

At a recent exhibition of dolls in Chicago a doll was shown which once had a letter addressed to it by the late Dr de Koven, the great Episcopal high church leader. It was as follows:

MY DEAR WAX—I am glad to hear of your birth, and that you were named for me, and that you are of wax. You could not be of better stuff for a minister. You will look sweet This will please the young. You cannot talk too much. This will please the old. You can wink at things, which you will have to do You will eat little; you will need but small pay. When you are bruised, you can be put on a shelf without a word, and a doll, new, fresh, and with red cheeks, will take your place If you have to be a martyr by fire, you will melt easy and save pain to those who have to put you in, but if you do good to even one little girl like C—— your life will be worth a great deal. So goodby, from your affectionate friend.

South African Bushmen.

Civilization is making rapid strides in South Africa, but the bushman yet makes his own knife and with considerable ingenuity. They dig a little iron, find a broken hatchet or a hoop from a rum barrel, and out of these parts they form even axes, adzes, hammers and about everything they need in that line. These implements are of course very crude, but the native has much patience.—Hardware.

John Herschel could remember every figure of the long and abstruse mathematical calculations made in his astronomical work. He often made a long calculation, then called his amanuensis and dictated the whole from memory.

Dr. Johnson had a loud, harsh, dictatorial voice. When excited in argument, he raised his voice and overwhelmed his opponent by its strength.

"TOOK THE WRONG MEDICINE."

Why This Headline So Often Appears In the Daily Newspapers.

It is an odd trait in human nature that a man who has been ordered by his physician to take paregoric will never take it if there is any carbolic acid or prussic acid in the house that he can absorb in preference.

Statisticians who have studied the thing declare that an invalid will search the whole house for a poisonous drug and drink it rather than the medicine ordered by the doctor. The death notices in the newspapers in cases of that kind are generally headed, "Took the Wrong Medicine."

A man arrived at his home the other evening, and glancing on the bureau saw a bottle of liquid that he had been ordered by the doctor to take.

"That looks like the stuff," said he, "but I'm not sure. As I was locking up the cellar I saw behind an old shelf a blue bottle that looked as if it hadn't been touched for years. It said on it, 'Sulphuric Acid.' Now that bottle on the table looks exactly like the one I drank out of last night, but still I have an idea that the stuff down in the cellar is what the doctor means for me. I don't know how the dickens it got down there when it's meant for me to take, or how this bottle that isn't meant for me to take got on this bureau. But I'm not going to take any chances. I'll just go down into the cellar and make sure, and I'll throw this stuff out of the window."

Then he cautiously went down stairs and took the sulphuric acid, and he was buried in due form after an ambulance surgeon had done his best and the coroner's physician had made a complete investigation and autopsy.

It isn't only children who make these blunders. Doctors will tell you that they have only to label a bottle "Lotion, For External Application Only," to make sure of its being drunk. If a patient gets a bottle of corrosive sublimate to put on a felon on his great toe and doesn't use it all, he will carefully save it. Ten years afterward a doctor gives some cough mixture to him, and then he goes and hunts up the corrosive sublimate bottle, plays three card monte with it and the cough mixture, gets them thoroughly mixed up so that he can't tell one from the other, and then when he feels that tightness across the chest that the doctor told him about he swallows a part of the corrosive sublimate and leaves his widow to collect the life insurance. By no accident is the cough mixture ever taken—it is always the corrosive sublimate.—New York Herald.

CURIOUS WEDDING CUSTOMS.

Some Odd Phases of Social Life In Northern Michigan.

Many curious customs are in vogue among the foreign population of northern Michigan, especially in social matters. When a French couple get married, a carriage or a sleigh ride is inevitable, according to the season of the year. The couples are not packed together in one wagon or sleigh, but each fellow and his girl have an individual rig, the bride and groom taking the lead and the others following like a funeral procession, but there is nothing funereal about it, especially the pace set. After the procession has been riding for hours, a dance ends the festivities.

The Polanders have a curious wedding custom that is very ingenious as a money getter, and takes the place of wedding presents. After the wedding feast follows a dance that sometimes lasts 12 to 14 hours, and even longer. The chief honor is to dance with the bride, and this is decided in a curious manner. The mother of the bride takes her place in one corner with a plate in her lap, which she takes very good care shall be built after the plan of an eating house coffee cup. The gallant who wants to dance with the bride, and all are in honor bound to do so at least once, must pull out a piece of silver and endeavor to chip or break the plate by throwing their money upon it, and only those who succeed in chipping or breaking the plate are allowed the coveted honor. Let those who think it easy to break an ironstone plate try it. Few succeed in doing it for less than 50 cents, and it is not an unusual thing for the bride's money to amount up to $75 or $100, even where the crowd is apparently as poor as a church mouse, and it may go even higher when the bride is pretty and popular. All the money goes to the bride, and in a backwoods country $50 to $75 will start a happy couple nicely in housekeeping.—Detroit Free Press.

A Japanese Test For the Aspiring Bride.

In Japan it appears that one factor entering into the choice of a daughter-in-law is her skill in raising silkworms. There is more to this than appears on the surface of the statement, for it seems that the thread spun by a silkworm is regular and even in proportion as the worm has been regularly and carefully fed. The prospective mother-in-law carefully and minutely examines the garments of the aspiring bride, judging of her qualifications by their condition. This seems even more absurd than the woman who said her son should never marry a woman who could not keep her top bureau drawer in order.—New York Times.

Chicago Wine Comes Cheap.

Customer—A table d'hote dinner, including a bottle of good wine, for 75 cents? Yes, that's cheap enough, but I don't care for any wine, and I can't afford it. How much will it be without the wine?

Waiter—I'll do what's right with you, boss. You can have the dinner without the wine for 70 cents, sah.—Chicago Tribune.

Marriage a Success.

Foreign Visitor—I am told American marriages are generally happy.

Mr. Gotham—Oh, perfectly. The husband is devoted to business, the wife to society, and they hardly ever meet.—New York Weekly.

ORIGIN OF THE BANJO.

A Primitive Instrument In 1840, With Its Own Peculiar Airs.

The banjo was in use long before the day of Joe Sweeney. It was principally played by the negroes, and was indeed a rude and simple instrument. The first one I ever saw was made in this way: A large gourd covered with a raw sheepskin served for the drum, and the strings were of horsehair, pulled from a white horse's tail. It had only four strings. I am confident that Sweeney added the bass string. My father's carriage driver was a banjo player. He played two or three changeless tunes on one cord. I saw Joe Sweeney for the first time about 1842, while I was at school at Prince Edward Court House. He and his brother Sam were together. Joe led on the violin and Sam played the banjo. Both had good voices, especially Sam, a rich, full baritone of great sweetness and power. Even at this distant day I can recall some of the tunes they sang—"Old Dan Tucker," "Do Johnnie Booker," "Julianna Johnson," "Oh, Susanna," "The Blue Tailed Fly," "Jim Crack Corn," and "I Don't Care."

When I saw the brothers again, the character of the music was somewhat changed, and was much more sentimental and sympathetic. They rendered such pieces as "Dearest May," "Rosa Lee," "Annie of the Vale," "Nellie Was a Lady" and "Ellen Bayne," with wonderful effect. These airs were melodious and concordant, and often brought tears to the eyes of the audience. Joe Sweeney was above the medium size, and of fine proportions. He had light hair and a ruddy complexion. He had wonderful facial powers. He could change his expression in a moment from grave to comic.

Sweeney as a negro delineator was inimitable. He knew the negro well, and was perfectly natural, and, like Polk Miller, never overdid his work. One of his performances always excited applause. His old Virginia breakdown, a jig tune, he danced, and made his own music with his banjo hung around his neck with a string. Sweeney was entirely uneducated, but he was naturally bright, and he often made smart local hits that brought down the house. Sweeney gave notoriety to the banjo and brought it into popular favor. His habits were improvident, and he was the subject of many temptations. He lived a life of unselfish generosity and died in poverty. He spent his last days in the county of Appomattox. I have heard this story about him. I do not vouch for its truth:

Before he died, his mind wandering, he said to his sister: "Come here. The old banjo is out of tune, the screws are slipping, and the bridge is about to fall." These were the last words of the old fellow, who had charmed two continents with his melody and song. His brother Sam was in the cavalry service during the war. He often played for General Stuart, and the brave troopers would dance to his merry music as he sang:

"If you want a happy time, jine the cavalry."

I never heard of him after the war.—Richmond Dispatch.

Such Is Life.

Yesterday a lady in a Broadway cable car addressed me, and everybody listened and was amused. She was young and pretty and well dressed. As we rolled down Union square a cab passed the car. My neighbor craned her neck, and pointing her finger at the cab remarked to me, "That's Judge Hilton in that cab." Every one in the car looked at the occupant of the cab. Then she took me into her confidence and retailed such facts about the judge as have been printed from time to time in the papers.

As the car tore around the Broadway curve her attention was diverted, and she hadn't done scolding about the speed and the curves when we passed a Broadway shop window on which was announced in white enamel letters, "Collars and Cuffs Laundried." "If they don't correct that misspelled word soon," she exclaimed, "I shall scream." Everybody turned and looked at the freak in orthography. Then a man who was watching the woman from the rear platform came in and tapped her on the shoulder, and she arose and followed him. As she passed out the men opposite smiled, and one said to his companion, "Crazy as a loon." But how could they tell? All she said was true.—New York World.

Cardinal Di Rende.

Speculation on his successor by the pope himself is humorous and interesting. Leo XIII smilingly told some cardinals recently that Cardinal Di Rende, archbishop of Benevento, would be the next wearer of the tiara. On being asked why he thought so, Joachim Pecci looked round slyly at the cardinals and said: "Because he is the youngest. The mortality among aged members of the sacred college is so great." Cardinal Di Rende is one of the pope's favorites. He speaks English perfectly and was for some time attached to a church in the Marylebone road, London, and a professor at the Westminster diocesan seminary of St. Edmund's, Ware. He was afterward nuncio in Paris. He belongs to the Odescalchi family. The mention of his name by Leo XIII makes him topical.—New York Advertiser.

We See All of the Sun.

The inhabitants of this earth never get a glimpse of but one side of the moon, but in the course of a year every portion of the sun's surface is turned toward us. This is because the sun's equator is almost coincident with the plane of the ecliptic, the inclination being only about seven degrees.—St. Louis Republic.

Frederick the Great had a sharp, hatchet face, with a cold, blue eye, that, as one of his contemporaries said, "gleamed like a reflection of light from a bayonet."

IT was Goethe who said: "Strive to do thy duty; then shalt thou know what is in thee."

THE proposition to send a C. K. Davis delegation to the National Republican convention meets with decided disapproval on the part of some Republicans who regard it as an effort to trade.

THE report that Lewis F. Menage had been killed and buried that was in circulation last week lacks confirmation from that gentleman himself. There are those in Minneapolis —and elsewhere, that take the story with a large-sized grain of allowance.

MRS. CORBETT, the champion's wife, seems to have put the gloves on. She has entered suit for divorce against his royal highness on the ground of brutal treatment. Quite natural, in that calling.

THE rumor that Chauncey M. Depew was about to lead $8,000,000 to the altar is denied by the gentle Chauncey. He admits, however, that "Barkis is willin'." Shouldn't be surprised if there was something more than mere rumor in the story.

THEY do say that Mary Yellin appeared on the streets of Wichita the other day upon a bicycle and wearing a pair of b—loomers, while Mr. Lease was attending to the household duties at home. It is possible that there may be a mistake about it—she may have been only running for some office.

WHILE in Chicago, last week, ex-Governor Merriam gave his views upon the financial situation to the Tribune of that city. He considers the financial interests of the country of paramount importance, and tells how, in his judgment, the question should be dealt with. Gov. Merriam is not only one of the best financiers in the state, but is a shrewd politician, as well.

IT is easy enough to preserve a happy, cheerful manner when the sun of prosperity shines, but the test of true manhood comes when the waves of adversity dash mountain high, threatening to engulf the bark. And right here comes in the practical side of christianity—but man is so constituted that he needs help at all times—in sunshine as well as in storm.

SOME people seem to think it strange that Hayward, with the hangman's noose dangling about his neck, should make application for the insurance on Kitty Ging's life. Nothing strange about it at all, when you remember that Hayward assumes to be guiltless of the crime he is charged with, and he evidently argues that this course would seem to establish innocence.

THE ladies' edition of the St. Paul Dispatch is "out of sight," as it were. Think of a 52 page sheet gotten up entirely by ladies even to the reportorial work! But that's just what they did and proves that "when a woman will she will, you may depend on't." It was, indeed, a very meritorious work, reflecting great credit upon the ladies who did it, and makes one wonder what "the coming woman" can do when she gets a bit of experience.

THE DISTRICT COURT.

A jury was then called in the case of A. R. Urion vs. Heden N. Forsberg et al. A. A. Miller for plaintiff and Ole J. Vaule for defendant. This action was brought to recover on a promissory note for $20.40. The defense was usury, and no consideration. It appears that the citizen's bank of McIntosh had a note of $100 from these defendants to Carrie Anderson to collect. Chas. Conger, on behalf of the bank, went to the defendants to collect. They were not able to pay it then, but gave a new note with interest added. In consideration for his trouble and drawing four mortgages and extension of the note, the $20.40 was given by these defendants to the bank. When the $20.40 came due the defendants refused to pay. The note was sold to this plaintiff. The bank brings suit to recover on the note. The case went to the jury about 5 p. m.

A jury was then called in the cases of J. B. Mooney & Co. vs. Wm. Sanders; J. B. Mooney, et al, vs. Wm. Sanders and Michael Enright vs. Wm. Sanders. A. A. Miller, counsel for plaintiff and R. J. Montague attorney for defendant; these three cases involving the same questions. It was stipulated by the parties to consolidate the cases and make one trial decide the three.

The other three cases against Gust Peterson and John N. Ostby, being for selling liquor to minors, were settled by the defendants pleading guilty to one charge and the others were dismissed. The fact being that three young fellows were together when the whiskey was sold them, making the ground for the three indictments to grow out of the one transaction. A fine of $50 and cost was imposed on Peterson in the case in which he was found guilty by the jury, of selling intoxicants to an habitual drunkard; and a fine of $25 in the case he plead guilty of selling to a minor. Nels H. Romold plead guilty to the charge of selling intoxicating liquor to a minor and was fined $25 and costs. The other two charges against him were dismissed, the facts being the same as in the last named case.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 2.

The cases of Wm. Sanders were resumed. This case was brought to recover on two notes given by defendant, or rather three notes, one of which is not yet due, for an engine. One note for $200, one $175 and the one not yet due $375. A chattel mortgage on the engine and two spans of horses, elevator on a machine and separator. The defense set up is breach of warranty in the defendant claiming that plaintiff warranted the engine to be first-class, and that it was no good. Defendant also claims that plaintiff inserted two or three articles into the mortgage after he signed it. The case occupied the whole day, going to the jury at 6:30, just before adjournment.

Jens Hanson was arraigned on an indictment for selling intoxicating liquor to an habitual drunkard.

[From The Courier.]

Joseph Lobsinger attended court at Crookston on Monday as a witness for the prosecution of one Geo. Howard charged with burglarizing Mrs. Lobsinger's residence this spring.

The grand jury brought in an indictment against Attorney Havrevold, on Monday, for grand larceny, and he was escorted to the county seat Wednesday evening by Deputy Shriff Wick. The evidence, we understand, is pretty straight and Mr. Havrevold stands a good chance of making an extended visit to Stillwater.

Thos. Corcoran, of Wadena, Minn., looked over our city this week, with the intention of locating permanently. Mr. Corcoran is a hotel man and may possibly start up in business here.

We are credably informed that Mr. Battlebury is rapidly failing and his death is looked for at any time.

The uniforms for the East Side Bicycle club will probably arrive today, and if the roads are in good condition the club will make its first appearance in uniform on Sunday.

From the best obtainable information it appears that the hay crop throughout Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and parts of Iowa and Missouri is a very limited one. This condition not only cuts off the supply from Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota, but will create a limited demand for hay in some parts of the section named. The conditions are exceedingly good for the farmers in Minnesota and North Dakota to put up a large amount of wild hay to ship and sell. One of the difficulties in the past with hay made in some sections has been that it has not been put up until late in the season, consequently lacking the fair, merchantable quality that is essential to profit. If farmers will put up hay in good order in July before it grows too rank and the good qualities have been destroyed by the toughening process incident to full maturity, there promises to be a good market for all they will have to sell.

Mrs. J. H. Reterson came over from Crookston Wednesday to pay a visit to her parents.

Messrs. R. T. Webster, U. Z. Webster and Hod Haney did business at Crookston yesterday.

The band boys enjoyed a most delightful trip on Mr. N. Peterson's steamboat, Greenwood, last Sunday and furnished sweet music for the rest of the passengers. They are contemplating a trip down the river to Grand Forks to-morrow.

The home of Rev. and Mrs. Skyberg was the scene of a very pretty surprise party last Saturday afternoon. A large number of friends from this place, and a large portion of the congregation of the church at Bygland were in attendance. Rich and numerous presents were contributed to the pastor's family, among which was a neat little sum of money to Mrs. Skyberg from the Bygland admirers. A most excellent repast was given on the lawn in the evening.

A very quiet wedding took place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of Olaf Pearson. The contracting parties were Mr. Wm. Geddes and Miss Bertha M. Strande, both of this place. Rev. Skyberg officiated. The happy couple will go to housekeeping at once. No honeymoon trip was taken as Mr. Geddes' duties here demand his constant care. The Bulletin extends its congratulations and wish them a long and happy life.

ENGLISH STATE TELEGRAPHS.

Messages Cost 12 1-2 Cents Each, and All Must Be Prepaid.

The telegraph service of Great Britain is undoubtedly quicker, more reliable and cheaper than that of the United States. I make this statement after proper allowance of the differences in distances. It costs 12½ cents for 12 words and 1 cent for every additional word. This for Great Britain and Ireland—a uniform rate.

It works admirably, as nearly all the postoffices are also telegraph offices. As a rule, the people are civil and obliging, and the delivery of messages more prompt than with us.

These postoffices, which include, as a rule, news stands and stationers' shops, are scattered all over the city, especially in London, and one has no such trouble in getting postoffice orders, postal notes, stamps, etc., as is too often the case in New York.

Another great advantage of the British system is that there is no such thing as sending messages "collect." You can prepay an answer to a telegram, and the boy brings up a blank with the telegram when an answer has been paid for.

Again, if you write to any one and want a telegraphic reply, merely inclose a blank with sixpenny postage stamps affixed. This saves the trouble of transmitting money or imposing on a friend for reply.

At one of the big city dinners a few weeks ago I sat opposite W. H. Preece, C. B., the engineer in chief and electrician of British Telegraphic Wonderland. He was greatly interested in the fact that we counted the population by the means of electricity, and of course knew exactly how it was done.

The increase in 25 years of messages alone from 6,500,000, when three private companies controlled the business, to 70,000,000 messages in 1894, tells its own story. That the number of offices has increased threefold, now numbering 9,000, and the miles of wire have increased from 60,000 to 200,000—surely this indicates that the public are well and cheaply served.

Financially the telegraph department is today paying expenses, but not the interest on the money invested. It is claimed, however, that the division of expenses between the postoffice branch and the telegraph branch was of such an artificial character that the two services should be looked at together financially. This would show a net annual surplus of from $13,750,000 to $15,000,000—a very handsome addition to the public revenues.

A uniform telegraph service, say, of 25 cents per message, is no more, in this advanced day of electrical appliances, than a uniform 2 cent letter rate was when adapted.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

At a meeting of the citizens' census committee at Minneapolis Chief Clerk Tupper was present and addressed the members. Mr. Tupper cautioned the committee against allowing the enumerators to count heads twice, and stated that in looking over the schedules which have been turned in he found 100 names of Minneapolis residents that had been duplicated. These, he said, had been stricken from the lists. He urged the committee to be careful about the duplication of names.

MINNESOTA WAR LOSSES.

Statement of the Number Who Lost Life in the Rebellion.

ST. PAUL, July 1.—For the first time in the history of Minnesota a complete comparative list of the soldiers of the state who, during the civil war, were killed and died of wounds, as compared with those who died of disease, accidents, in prison, etc., together with the total number who died of all causes during the war has been compiled. Adjutant General Muehlenberg has received many inquiries for that sort of information, and, as none of the historical works or statistical compilations of the war contained the information, he has had in compiled in tabular form for use in the office.

During the civil war 24,020 Minnesotans bared their breasts to the rebel bullets and bayonets. They composed the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Minnesota regiments of infantry, the First, Second and Third batteries, the First heavy artillery, the First and Second and Brackett's and Hatch's cavalry. Of this number 2,539 lost their lives either on the battlefield, of disease, accidents or in prison. There are now about 3,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic in Minnesota, while 12,000 of the brave men of the North Star State who fought in the Civil War are not members of that order.

Poplar postoffice will now be re-established. B. F. Brown received his appointment as postmaster last week and expects his commission in a few days. As soon as the office is ready for business it will be announced. It is quite proper that there should be a postoffice at that point and a considerable number of Beltrami county residents will be benefitted thereby. The mail will be carried three times a week via the Red Lake stage route.

H. F. Howe, who has faithfully performed his duty of carrying mail for Uncle Sam on the Red Lake route for several years past, left here yesterday on his last trip in the capacity of mail carrier, his contract being completed to-morrow night. Mr. Howe has always been obliging and accommodating and his resignation will be regretted. He will in future make his home on his farm south of here. Jerome Thayer has received the sub-contract and appointment in the place.

The commissioners of Beltrami county inspected the new county road leading to Fosston and found it all right. The money for them to pay off the orders issued for work on this road was received by them last Saturday.

John Mittum has finished sawing lumber on the Red Lake road, west of Poplar and moved his mill several miles east to the E. D. Childs old site where he will saw the logs now in the lake and those hauled in during the coming winter, moving back again in the spring.

Go to the California wine house for choice wines and liquors for medicinal purposes. (5)

INDIGESTION
Cured by Using
Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Words of Comfort to All who Suffer from Dyspepsia.

"For years, I was a martyr to indigestion, and had about given up all hope of ever finding relief, as the complaint only seemed to grow worse instead of better, under ordinary treatment. At last, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and I hereby testify that after using only three bottles, I was cured. I can, therefore, confidently recommend this medicine to all similarly afflicted."—FRANKLIN BECK, Avoca, Ia.

"I am personally acquainted with Mr. Beck and believe any statement he may make to be true."—W. J. MAXWELL, Druggist and Pharmacist, Avoca, Ia.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla for general debility and, as a blood-purifier, find it does exactly as is claimed for it."—S. J. ADAMS, Ezzell, Texas.

Judging from the numbers of settlers that every day pass through the city enroute to Roseau county one would think that there would be very little government land untaken long enough before fall. Most of these settlers have horses, oxen, cows, sheep, poultry and hogs and seem to be a very desirable class of settlers.

Last week Stone & Columbus received one of the Aultman & Taylor separators, with the wind-stacker attachment. Instead of the old-fashioned stacker is a long iron flue that conducts the straw to the stack, and no matter how hard the wind may blow the machine will build up a stack just the same.

There seems to be a few farmers who oppose the idea of aiding in the building of a packing house in Crookston. When one stops to consider the good such an institution would do to every farmer in the county, this opposition seems very peculiar and injudicious and when analyzed seems to spring more from prejudice than anything else, and is unfortunate, as the institution would benefit farmers more than anyone else if built.

Fourth of July.

In the opening part of his discourse last Sunday morning, on "The 119th Anniversary of American Independence," Rev. Mr. Fisher quoted the words of John Adams, styling Fourth of July "The Great Anniversary Festival of the Nation." "It ought to be solemnized," he said, "with pomp, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations from one end of the continent to the other." "Moreover," he continued, "it ought to be commemmorated as a day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty."

Said Mr. Fisher, in his sermon last Sabbath:—On Fourth of July there will doubtless be display and noise. Will there be the commemorative devotion to God as well? Solidity should always be the support of any display. Seriousness should under-gird playfulness. Tossing of caps, beating of drums or exploding of powder have meaning only as they spring out of thought and conviction. All that we do on any national holiday, however jubilant or lost for the moment in the festivity, should have beneath it the solidity and seriousness of a genuine, God-fearing patriotism.

Next Sunday morning, at the Congregational church, the Communion of the Lord's Supper will be administered.

TIMBER STEALING.

Serious Charges by Uncle Sam Against Prominent Lumbermen.

ST. PAUL, June 29.—A rather sensational suit has been commenced in the United States court by John E. Stryker, as special counsel for the government of the United States, to recover from prominent lumbermen in Minnesota $467,474.34 for the value of lumber alleged to have been cut from logs taken from the Mississippi and Winnebagoshish reservations in the northern part of the state within the past four years. The defendants to the action are: The Pine River Logging and Improvement company; Joel B. Bassett and William Bassett, copartners as J. B. Bassett & Co.; John S. Pillsbury and Charles A. Smith, co-partners as C. A. Smith & Co.

It is charged that the agents of these defendants entered upon the territory referred to and cut timber that was converted to the use of defendants, and the value of the lumber made therefrom is represented by the amount sued for.

SWIFT'S SENSATION.

Chicago's Mayor Charges Ex-Commissioner Reynolds With Many Deaths.

CHICAGO, July 1.—Mayor Swift has issued a sensational statement condemning Dr. Arthur Reynolds, ex-city health commissioner, for the latter's management of the smallpox epidemic last winter. The mayor charges the doctor with gross neglect of duty, asserts that he alone was responsible for the spread of the disease, and declared that to him are directly chargeable the 159 deaths which occurred in the pest house during the winter. The mayor says that the pesthouse was kept in a frightful condition; the attendants were careless or inefficient and no deaths need have occurred had the health department been properly managed. The statement has caused a sensation in political and medical circles, as Dr. Reynolds is one of the most prominent physicians of the city.

Ravages of Grasshoppers.

PESHTIGO, Wis., July 2.—Owing to the ravages of grasshoppers throughout the country, farmers have been obliged to cut their tame hay two weeks before the usual time. Fields of oats have been attacked by the pests and will in a short time be totally destroyed.

General Green Clay Smith Dead.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Gen. Green Clay Smith, once Prohibition candidate for president, a war veteran, and in recent years a well known Baptist pastor of Washington, died at his home in Northeast Washington at 12:56 p. m.

The Sentence of Williams.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 2.—Fritz Williams must spend seven years in the penitentiary for the murder of H. W. Thomas. Judge Elliott, in passing sentence, commented on the mitigating features of the case pointed out by the jury.

FREE SILVER CANDIDATE ON A GOLD PLATFORM

"Sound Money" Men Run the Resolutions End of the Kentucky Democratic Convention, But Cannot Control the Nominations.

LOUISVILLE, June 27.—The Democratic state convention of Kentucky has certainly endorsed the administration, with special tributes to President Cleveland and his distinguished coadvisor and secretary, J. G. Carlisle. No outing was ever productive of more effective results than that of Secretary Carlisle to Kentucky and the Memphis convention. The silverites, including Senator Blackburn, attribute their defeat to the recent speeches of Carlisle and the circulation that was given them. The free coinage men do not deny that they expected to control the convention and all its committees, platform and nominations. They fought gamely to a finish and acknowledge their defeat, although they make charges about the way it was done, especially on the part of Auditor of State Norman and others at Frankfort.

The Free Silver Men were beaten by the adoption of the minority report of the committee on credentials, seating Clay's "sound money" delegates, as well as by the adoption of a majority report on resolutions for sound money and the endorsement of the president and Secretary Carlisle. The committee on credentials is one that the sound money men did not look after and the silver men had a majority on it, but the convention overruled that majority by adopting the minority report.

The silver men felt that General Hardin had been looking more after his nomination than after a free silver plank, and some of them deserted Hardin, while the Clay men were urging the sound money delegates to stand together on nominations as well as on the platform.

Senator Blackburn and other free silver leaders remained on the floor of the convention and fought to the last on the resolutions, after which they did not take much interest in those who, as they said, had previously deserted them.

They were very bitter towards Auditor of State Norman, who was General Hardin's manager, and himself a candidate for renomination. In Senator Blackburn's speech against the majority report on resolutions he showed his feeling towards some on whom he had depended, while he referred very respectfully to Senator Lindsay, Congressman McCreary and others who had opposed him openly. The convention was a record breaker in great speeches as well as in other respects.

Hardin Nominated.

After the adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions, dilatory measures occupied almost an hour when the name of General Cassius M. Clay was presented by George C. Lockhart for the nomination for governor. J. R Breckinridge, the eloquent brother of W. C. P. Breckinridge, presented the name of General Hardin. Before the result of the ballot was announced the Clay men moved that the nomination of General Hardin be made unanimous, and it carried with a great hurrah. The ticket as completed is as follows: For governor, P. Watt Hardin; lieutenant governor, R. T. Tyler; treasurer, R. C. Ford; auditor, L. C. Norman; register of the land office, G. B. Swango; attorney general, W. J. Hendrick; secretary of state, Henry S. Hale; superintendent of public instruction, Ed Porter Thompson.

CONFERENCE ENDED.

Epworth Leaguers End Their Meeting With a Rousing Farewell Service.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 3.—The second international conference of the Epworth League came to an end Sunday night. There were no morning services at the tent, but all the churches of the city were put at the disposal of the League for a common consideration of the subject, "The Descent of the Holy Ghost." Bishop Galloway, Bishop Merrill, Chaplain McCabe, Dr. John Potts and a number of other distinguished ministers led these meetings. At night the farewell services were held at the tent. The audience was the largest of the occasion and, Chaplain McCabe says, the largest ever held south of Mason and Dixon's line. The tent will hold 12,000, but could not hold the throngs that crowded to hear the services.

MACEO CAPTURED.

Reported the Cuban Leader Has Fallen Into the Hands of Spaniards.

MADRID, July 1.—According to a report received here General Antonio Maceo, the Cuban insurgent leader, has been captured by Spanish troops and consigned to prison, pending orders from Captain General Campos.

Dr. Buchanan Electrocuted.

SING SING, N. Y., July 2.—Dr. Buchanan, whose case has been hanging fire in the courts of the state many months, was electrocuted at 11:23 a. m.

Dr. Buchanan walked in without a word and took his seat. In about 30 seconds he was strapped and in 40 seconds was pronounced dead. The voltage of 1,740 was kept on for 4 seconds and then reduced to 40 volts which was kept on for 30 seconds more. It was the quickest and most successful execution ever seen at this prison.

Located a Normal School.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., July 2.—The executive committee of the normal school regents has located the seventh normal school here on Grand avenue near Eighteenth street. The cities of Northern Wisconsin have been contending for this school for over two years. It will cost $100,000.

A good many of our citizens have been planning to go to Maple Lake anyhow, celebration or no celebration, and the committee, seeing that this was the case, braced up and decided to celebrate out there anyhow.

Louie Monson was up from Fisher, Thursday. Says that his barley was cut down by frost three times and the result will be three different crops to ripen, but he is afraid that the first and second crops will be too ripe before the third comes on.

Fred Krausec started on Tuesday, June 25th, from Minneapolis with a horse and buggy and reached Crookston Monday evening, July 1st. He drove from Barnesvile on Monday, which is by rail 81 miles but by wagon road must be 8 or 9 miles further at least.

The Shaker Medicine Co. held its last pow-wow on Saturday evening of last week. The crowd that was in attendance was wonderful to see, the seats being all well filled and a great many standing about the enclosure. From what we learn, "the doctor" did a land-office business here.

On Monday morning A. F. George took the position of cashier in the Scandia-American bank that Mr. Wheeler resigned a few days since. Mr. George is a thoroughly competent business man, a man well posted upon real estate values and will be a valuable acquisition to that institution.

Comrade Freeman commenced this week to drive the stage on the route between this city and Wylia. In about two weeks he will take the other end of the route, between Wylia and Thief River Falls, which will necessitate his removal to that place. Comrade Freeman is one of the faithful members of Col. Cobham Post, and we shall miss him.

Fred Warnecke leased a farm out in Fairfax last spring, and finding that his crops promise so well, he went to the owner and bought the farm, thinking it cheaper to do it that way than to give half the crop. Says that this grain crop will pay for the land all right. That seems to be the kind of crops we are getting this year.

AN ACTORS' MATINEE.

GENERALLY THE SPECTATORS TEAR THEIR HOST TO PIECES.

Actors Are the Harshest Sort of Critics of Members of Their Own Profession—The Have Beens and Those Who Will Be Smile at the Efforts of the Star.

The soubrette came clinging to the arm of the villain. She was glorious in a yellow silk waist and he was glorious in a high hat and patent leather shoes. Thus armed they felt quite sure of conquering the world, which means that they expected to "star" together some day.

Nine out of ten persons in every audience which consists entirely of players have like expectations, and right here lies the structural weakness of the actors' matinee. Your future star begins criticising the performance as soon as the curtain is lifted for the first act. In every movement of the star, in every word spoken by the star, he sees how much better he could have done the part if he had had the chance. As it is not half satisfying to have half of the house whispering when one is in the midst of his loftiest flight in the third act, the star's first actors' matinee is usually his last.

"There are three reasons for giving a professional matinee," said an old manager. "First, for the self gratification of the actor, who wants his colleagues to know what fine work he is doing; second, out of courtesy to the profession, and third, to get a little advertising. The second is the most common. The manager of every production which has a long run gets many requests from actors who say they want very much to see it, but can't, because they're engaged.

"The first thing a manager does when he determines upon a professional matinee is to ask the different managers of attractions playing in town how many seats they can use. Usually every person in every company wants two or three seats. Their extra seats are generally occupied by some stanch admirer of theirs who will believe that every criticism they utter upon the performance is true. This person is called 'the sympathetic ear.'

"Ticket sellers complain about finicky people, who always insist upon such and such a seat. But an actor, when the seats are given to him, will come and raise a terrible hullabaloo unless they are in a certain, exact spot in the house. I've even known a manager to send back a dozen seats because he couldn't get them six instead of twelve rows back. There's a line of would be actors waiting outside your door all day long, who want anywhere from one to twenty seats apiece, and you don't get a moment's peace until the thing's over. You don't get much peace even then."

After all of their trouble to get seats to please them, many of the actors who have engaged seats do not come. If they are merely enemies of the actor who gives the matinee they present the tickets to a boarding house keeper; if they hold an actual grudge, they give them to a bootblack. Consequently the well dressed leading man doesn't always find the persons at his elbows exactly the sort of company he would choose.

The most important figure at the professional matinee is by all odds the middle aged lady who is a relative of a soubrette. The more distant the relation the more important she is. If she is an eighth cousin she expects the great doors to swing open when she is within a block of the theater, and eight ushers come out to meet her. She is fat and comfortable looking, and she always has a temper.

The old time actor, who has barn stormed it in the legitimate as long as he could, comes to see how low the stage has fallen. Maybe one of these fat and comfortable boarding house keepers is his sympathetic ear. He tells her that things were far different when he and Booth were starring it; these young actors don't know much, and the stage has gone to the bowwows.

Between the acts the corridors swarm. Acquaintances meet, and then they begin to talk in this way:

"How did it happen?"

"Don't ask me, dear boy. Bullhead luck!"

"And, do you know, he really thinks he can act."

"Yes. I suppose that he thought he was going to astonish the natives. Gad! Did you notice that entrance?"

"Horrible. Conception is all wrong. Now, if I"—

"And if I"—

But they break right there—each being immediately convinced that the other does not know anything about it.

But there are exceptions. They are usually the most prominent actors. Sometimes the hand of the star is grasped warmly between the acts, and he feels the thrill of triumph with the words: "It's immense, old man. You are a revelation."

The reporter had on his right side the soubrette and the villain, and on his left a very nice old lady with white curls, who had come with her son. The young man was very critical. He picked out flaw after flaw, and regaled his mother with them. The old lady was an actress herself—a very good actress, apparently. And finally she said to this boy in a gentle aside:

"Willie, you may think that you can play the part better, but we do not see ourselves as others see us. And don't you think, Willie, that it would be better to say that your opinion of the part differs from that of the gentleman? And, Willie, do you think it exactly right to talk about your best while he is talking? Now, I am sure, Willie, he can do the part a great deal better than you could. Not but that I am proud of you, Willie, and I hope that some day, if you study hard, you may even do better."

And Willie looked hard at the bald head of the orchestra leader, and doubtless thought that mothers were unappreciative.—New York Press.

THE UNSEEN WORLD.

Hades as It Is Pictured In the Books of the Apocrypha.

The book of Daniel, dating from the Maccabean age, is perhaps the earliest work in which any clear moral differentiation as regards the unseen world is manifest. "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." To find a more detailed account of hades we must turn to the books of the Apocrypha, written in Greek, and pervaded by ideas not precisely Hellenic, but Hellenistic.

In particular the book of Enoch, which deals largely in eschatology and the secrets of the universe, speaks in some detail of the future of righteous and wicked: "All goodness and joy and glory are prepared for them and are written down for the spirits of those who have died in righteousness, and manifold good will be given to you in recompense for your labors, and your lot is abundantly beyond the lot of the living." And in contrast: "Know ye that their souls (the sinners) will be made to descend into sheol, and they will become wretched, and great will be their tribulation, and into darkness and a net and a burning fire, where there is grievous condemnation, will your spirits enter, and there will be grievous condemnation for the generatione of the world."

In the fourth book of Esdras it is said of the enemies of God that "they shall decay in confusion, and be consumed with shame, and wither in fear, when they see the glory of the Most High, in whose sight they sin while they are alive." Much influence on later Jewish thought was exercised by a well known passage of the later Isaiah: "They shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." These words in their primary meaning refer to the material bodies of the dead, but in the Hellenistic age they were used of the future world of spirits. And the picture of which the outline was thus sketched was by degrees filled in from non-Biblical sources. But this filling in went on but slowly and was not far advanced at the beginning of the Christian era.—Contemporary Review.

LETTER WRITING.

The Art a Lost One to the Present Day Scribblers of Hasty Notes.

Every one knows, of course, that the actual number of letters passing through the mails of every civilized country is greater, rather than less, year by year. But every one also feels that these letters are no longer letters, in the true sense, at all. They are amplified telegrams, bald and bare statements of fact, and they have the loose and disjointed and careless phraseology of the telegraphic message. That sense of the fit expression, the graceful concept; that feeling for the lucid and connected exposition of the ideas, for the balance of the parts, of a letter, for its composition, in short—the very term is pre-Adamito to the end of the century ear—that used to preoccupy the best letter writers of another generation have gone from our present day scribblers of hasty notes, as though such musty things had never been.

The only people who "compose" their letters now are cultivated old ladies. Their college bred granddaughters, intellectually armed and professionally equipped, exhibit productions in that line, of which, for the most part, it might be said, as Henry James remarked of the notes of invitation of the London society woman, that they have nothing in common with the epistolary art but the postage stamp.

It may be held that such an accomplishment is not, after all, of the greatest value. But behind it there is an instinct, deep seated in the race, that a widespread habit of careless writing affects very directly the thinking of a people. And this one cannot but believe to be the case. It takes no intellect to put plain facts into honest, self respecting phrases. But it takes self restraint and attentiveness, and these lead in time to a disciplined and coherent way of looking at life.—"The Point of View" in Scribner's.

Payn's American Dual.

James Payn, the English writer, tells this story of the "American plan" of dueling, wherein the two duelists, with one second, meet within doors and draw lots for who shall shoot himself: On a recent occasion, A and B, having had a "difficulty," A was the unlucky man, and retired for the purpose of self destruction into the next apartment. B and the second, both very much moved by the tragedy of the situation, remained in listening attitudes. At last the pistol was heard; they shuddered with emotion and remorse, when suddenly in rushed the supposed dead man, triumphantly exclaiming, "Missed!"

Elevator Wit.

The elevator boy in the big flat was airing his views to a passenger on the proper conduct of children.

"What do you know about it?" laughed the passenger. "You're not married, are you?"

"Well, no," replied the boy, "but I've brought up a good many families in my time," and then he gazed up the elevator shaft with a rapturous expression.—Detroit Free Press.

Tennyson.

Tennyson would not talk about his poetry, but once intimated that he regarded the "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington" as containing more inspiration than some of the others. He once said that he did not expect much of the "Charge of the Light Brigade" and was agreeably surprised at its reception.

WOMEN CAN'T TALK.

That Is, Mr. Depew Says, They Are Not Good After Dinner Speakers.

Notwithstanding the many disguises in which the feminine after dinner speaker appears, Chauncey Depew says she is a "failure," and as he sank into the favorite lounging chair in his den, Dr. Depew reiterated, "Yes, a failure."

"And your advice to her is?"

"Quit the business."

Of course the new woman, who thinks she is a great success as a companion to after dinner coffee, will rise to object to such wholesale condemnation, but who has a clearer title to criticise than the king of after dinner talkers?

Club life produces after dinner talkers by the dozen. But none, as yet, becomes the queen of after dinner speakers. A majority are too conscious of their own efforts to reach that distinction. Almost as many are in too deadly earnest over their particular line of work to heed the graces and the lightsomeness of coffee talk and become popular.

When asked if his judgment was the result of experience, Mr. Depew said:

"Yes, I have heard women talk at Sorosis, at dinners political, charitable, reform dinners, dramatic dinners, dinners of every conceivable kind, and after them all my advice still is, 'Don't do it.' Among themselves they are well enough, but in a mixed dinner party they seem out of place.

"They are not in touch with their audiences nor in accord with the spirit of the occasion. After dinner speaking belongs to the hour of good fellowship. A woman doesn't fit into the surroundings when seen through clouds of smoke. She doesn't catch the mood of her listeners. She is apt to be a wet blanket, and to induce sad and solemn formality in the room of light quips and jollity."—"Where Women Are Failures," Boston Herald.

ONE-TWELFTH OF A DOZEN.

The Way Ingenious Tradesmen Make Retail Purchases at Wholesale Rates.

It is not every one who knows how to take advantage of the difference between wholesale and retail prices. All up and down Broadway the wholesale stores display the sign, "No goods sold at retail," or the more emphatic announcement, "Positively no goods at retail." Inquiry at these places will only bring out the assurance that everything is sold by the dozen, if the stock be divisible in that way, but as no one wants a dozen hats, or a dozen neckties, or a dozen boxes of collars, or a dozen suits of clothes, the fact that the price by the dozen is about 20 or 30 per cent less than the retail price is neither a very comforting nor saving one.

The ingenious gentlemen who are "in trade" have found out a way to make retail purchases at wholesale rates and yet not transcend the commercial rule which prohibits wholesale men from engaging in retail business. When these clever fellows want a new necktie or two, provided there are no samples handy, they send around for "one-quarter dozen cravats" of such and such a pattern, or two men who wear the same size gloves will make a purchase of one-sixth of a dozen, while it is related with much glee among the Baums and the Bergs that one smart salesman put in a seriously worded order for "one-twelfth of a dozen brown derby hats, extra quality, size 7⅛." He got the hat, and, moreover, he got it for $2.27, while its retail price would have been $3.50.—New York Sun.

Prize Fighting Among Fish.

One of the popular amusements of Siam is fish fighting, just as horse racing holds a high place in England.

The two fighting fish are placed in a huge bottle together, and they proceed to take each other's measure, shoulder up to each other in schoolboy fashion and back and push around the "ring," the small fins vibrating rapidly all the time, and each little being quivering with excitement and wrath. This goes on for some minutes, until, as the spectators are growing impatient, one fish suddenly makes a dart and a bite at his adversary's tail. Henceforth there is no hesitation until one or other gives in.

The Siamese back their fish just as money is staked on horses here, and then the battle is continued until one fish is chased around the bottle by the other. But this is usually an affair of an hour and frequently three or four. The fish are reared especially for fighting and display wonderful pluck and determination.

The tail is the part which shows most damage, although it is very easily torn, but a good grip on the side fin is very effective. They display considerable agility in evading their opponent's mouth and also in suddenly twisting round and taking a piece out of its tail. In 20 minutes or so these appendages, which looked so brave and bright as they started to the fray, are torn to ribbons.—Times of India.

A Good Fit.

At the Wigan pantomime the other night two ladies who lived at a distance, having to catch an early train, were obliged to leave the theater before the performance was finished. Selecting, as they thought, a quiet interlude, they were passing out of the stalls, when an actor suddenly appeared on the stage, and repeating a part of his role exclaimed: "There they go—the only two women I ever loved. One I couldn't have, and the other I couldn't get." The amusement of the audience and the astonishment of the young ladies can be imagined.—London Spare Moments.

Good Wishes of No Avail.

Conan Doyle came to America on the Elbe. During the voyage he wrote these verses in Captain von Goessel's autograph album:

> Luck to the Elbe in every weather,
> May her fortune never fail her;
> Boat and master matched together,
> Gallant ship and gallant sailor.

Now the ship, the sailor and the album are all deep in the North sea. The verses were written Sept. 27, 1894.—Philadelphia Times.

EN RAPPORT.

Clasped in thy arms, with my head on thy breast,
All is forgotten of sorrow and woe.
Nothing I feel but peace, infinite rest.
Hold me, beloved, thus, tenderly—so.

Aglow with the love that forever is thine,
I lift my cheek to thy willing caress.
Few hearts may drink of the joy that is mine,
Few tongues such rapture can truly confess.

Clasped in thy arms, with my head on thy breast,
I feel thy heartbeats have quickened for me;
With gladdest joy now my soul is possessed.
Life would be empty without love and thee.

Some say, beloved, that life is a dream;
That at death's coming we will but awake,
But if the waking a parting doth seem
Let me dream ever for sweetest love's sake.
—Jane Mauldin in New Orleans Picayune.

MARRIED IN HASTE.

Few Formalities at a Wedding In a Chicago Police Court.

Quite an amusing episode occurred in Justice Lyon's court recently in the midst of a trial for assault and battery, when a young couple rushed breathlessly into the room and informed his honor that they wanted to be joined in the holy bonds of wedlock as quickly as possible.

In one hand the prospective groom carried a marriage license, which contained the names of August Rohner and Marie Soss. The assault and battery trial came to a halt, and Justice Lyon glanced over the certificate by which two beings were permitted to call themselves one.

"Hurry oop, chudge," said the about to be bride nervously as she shifted from one foot to another and glanced apprehensively at the door.

"But why are you in such haste?" asked "Justice Davy."

"It must be now or never," answered the bride, "and we want now."

"All right," said the court; "I guess I can accommodate you," and he repaired to a mirror in the rear of the courtroom, carefully arranged his $18 tie, thought of the immortal Davy, Jr., on the South Side, parted his hair in the middle, took an extra reef in his immaculate Prince Albert and called the couple to the front.

If there is one thing Justice Lyon is perfect in, it is in the art of tying nuptial knots, and he was at his best.

"Have you a ring?" he asked.

"Nein," answered the lesser half.

"One will do," said the court.

"Nein, nein, or none," broke in the bride.

"Oh, all right!" answered the court, while his face took on a deep scarlet hue, and he proceeded with the ceremony. The couple alternately looked at him and at the door, and after it was all over, and they stood together with arms twisted together, a fearful racket sounded on the stairs, and a little old man, with a glare in his eye, burst breathlessly into the room. The new Mr. and Mrs. laughed at him, and swearing volubly in German the little old man gave the door a cruel kick, passed out again, the bridal couple following. Justice Davy poked a beautiful bill in his purse, and the assault case went on.—Chicago Dispatch.

What Esau Hunted.

"About noon we saw a beast standing on a mountain top looking down at us. When we saw it, we thought that it was a camel, but Calinus said that the beast was a rhinoceros or unicorn. It hath a horn set in the midst of its forehead 4 feet long, and whatsoever it butts at it runs him through and pounds him against the rocks. It is said by writers on natural history that they place a young virgin in his way, whereat he puts away from him all his fierceness and lays down his head and is held thus entranced until he be taken and slain."

Thus wrote that delightfully naive observer, Father Felix Fabri, who visited Sinai 400 years ago. Modern pilgrims who have followed in his footsteps with their eyes open will at once recognize that the animal he saw was the bedau, or Sinaitic ibex, which gazes down on passing caravans from the cliffs which tower above their route. He is seldom visible to them unless his shapely figure happens to be silhouetted on the sky line. This wild goat inhabits the mountains on either side of the Red sea and the steep gullies of Moab and is the only representative of the deer or goat tribes in these regions. Esau doubtless hunted it, and those few sportsmen who have followed his example will not be surprised that the uncertainties of the chase cost him his birthright.—Nineteenth Century.

Metal Railroad Ties.

A protest against the denudation of forests in order to secure material for railroad ties is made in a report issued by the agricultural department at Washington on the use of metal railroad ties and preservative processes and metal tie plates for wooden ties. It shows that about 20 per cent of the railroad mileage of the world, outside of the United States and Canada, is laid on metal. In the United States little practical progress in metal ties is reported. The proportion of track laid with metal ties to the total length of railways throughout the world has increased from 7 per cent in 1890 to 10 per cent in 1894.—Railway Review.

An Extremist.

Mr. Irving tells a good story of an old Scotchwoman living not far from Balmoral who criticised the queen somewhat hostilely for having ridden out on a Sunday. Met with the retort that Christ himself plucked ears of wheat on the Sabbath, the orthodox person exclaimed: "Ah, yes. I ken all about that, and I dinna think any the better on him for it!"—Westminster Budget.

Cicero had a voice so pleasant that whenever it was known he was to speak, though only in an ordinary law case, the court immediately filled with people.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of four hundred forty-three and 60-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Viola M. Sanders and J. H. Sanders, her husband, mortgagors, to Security Savings and Loan Association, mortgagee, bearing date the first day of March, 1892, and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the eighth day of March, 1892, at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 61 of mortgages on pages 32 to 36, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: Lots twenty (20), twenty-one (21) and twenty-two (22) in block thirty-nine (39) of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk and State of Minnesota, said land lying and being in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house, in the City of Crookston, in said county and state, on the 22nd day of July, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of four hundred forty-three and 60-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five ($25.00) dollars, attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Chicagoese.

I frequently resent the rich roasts given Chicago society by the terrible Town Topics, but now and than I am forced to admit that some of its wild and weird whoppers are not altogether unprovoked. At the recent Fellowship Club ladies' layout I overheard one of the officers importune a brilliant boulevard beau not to be in a hurry to leave, as Mrs. Alice J. Shaw was about to appear and whistle. "Is that so?" ejaculated the swagger swell. "Then I'll stay a bit longer. I knowed her over in London."—Chicago Weekly.

TOOK $80,000 WITH HIM.

Had Become a Power in Political and Church Circles There.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—William Henry Johnson, former treasurer of Muscatine county, Ia., who, it is alleged, embezzled $80,000 of municipal funds and then fled, was brought from Honolulu on the steamer Australia Monday by H. F. Wylie, sheriff of Muscatine county. To the Hawaiian officials, Johnson, when arrested, admitted his identity. He declares his shortage does not amount to more than $3,000, which, he says, was made good by his bondsmen.

He claims that his arrest is the result of the efforts of his political enemies. The charge against him upon which the requisition papers were obtained is forgery, he having, so it is charged,

Forged the Names of County Officials

and others to obtain the money embezzled, which is said to have been lost in land speculations. After his flight from home Johnson went first to Kansas and thence to California. When he arrived in San Francisco he says he had but 50 cents. Meanwhile his wife, through the sale of a house and other private property, realized $750, of which she forwarded him $200, and he quietly departed for Honolulu. Arriving about a year ago he went to work as a solicitor on a newspaper and was promoted to bookkeeper. While thus employed he secured a half interest in a stationary business and afterwards bought out his partners in the stand and branched out as a confectioner. Then he began to in political and church affairs in Honolulu, rendering valuable aid to the government during the recent uprising. His wife arrived on the scene about three months ago and was also admitted to the church as well as to the society circles of Honolulu.

When Johnson arrived at Honolulu he dropped the William from his name but one day a friend, so he says, recognized him and notified the officials of his whereabouts with the result that Sheriff Wylie went down on the Australia armed with the necessary requisition papers for his arrest, which caused quite a sensation in Honolulu.

SENSATIONAL ARRESTS.

Government Employes Connected With Chinese Registration Frauds.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 3.—Two sensational arrests have been made here in connection with a gigantic conspiracy to rob the government by issuing illegal Chinese registration certificates. Those arrested are James Graham, register of the land office at Cœur d'Alene City, Ida., and Edward Rick. Warrants are also in the hands of a deputy United States marshal for the arrest of W. F. Pollard and Harry Tilton, formerly of this city, but now at Kendrick, Ida. The complaints were sworn to by F. D. Schuyler, Chinese inspector, sent out by the treasury department at Washington.

Dealt in Army Positions.

CHICAGO, July 3.—J. H. Manley was arrested here charged with selling United States army positions. Manley is accused of representing himself as a lieutenant and disposing of jobs ranging from private to lieutenant at fees from $10 to $300. The prisoner wears a United States army uniform and is said to be an ex-officer.

Seized a Bridge for Taxes.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., July 3.—The bridge spanning the Missouri river between this point and Omaha, the property of the Omaha Bridge and Terminal company, was seized by the sheriff of this county for $2,000 taxes. The company refuses payment on the grounds of an excessive valuation.

Cuban Bonds Affected.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—It is stated that Cuban bonds on the Paris bourse are being much affected by the various reports as to the progress of the Cuban uprising and officials are of the opinion that many of the reports of victory and defeat are systematically circulated for speculative purposes.

Poison in the Flour.

STILLWATER, O. T., July 3.—Three of a family of six named Tesch died from being poisoned and the others are not expected to recover. The poisoning was malicious, having been put in a sack of flour. It is said that the family ha a bitter land contest on hand.

In Jail for Libel.

ABERDEEN, S. D., July 3.—W. E. Kidd, editor of The Star, is serving a sentence of five days in the county jail in lieu of paying a fine of $10, imposed by the court for publishing slanderous articles about Governor Sheldon.

Niece of Blaine Married.

HELENA, Mon., July 3.—Miss Frances Blaine, niece of the late James G. Blaine, was married here to Randolph Thompson, cousin of Judge Ruck. Miss Blaine is the daughter of the late Major John E. Blaine, U. S. A.

Murderer Escaped.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 3.—In a fight on Morris creek, the wildest region of this county, John Cook shot and killed Joseph Morris and fatally wounded Ben Morris. The murderer escaped.

Had Seven Husbands.

ASHLAND, O., July 3.—Mrs. John Hyman, who is under arrest here for bigamy, is said to have had seven husbands, at least two of whom are residents of Ohio.

NEW ENGLISH CABINET.

Lord Salisbury Completes the Work of Forming a Ministry.

LONDON, June 29.—The Marquis of Salisbury has completed the work of forming a new cabinet. The new ministry is as follows:

Premier and secretary of state for foreign affairs, the Marquis of Salisbury.

President of the council, the Duke of Devonshire.

Lord high chancellor, Baron Halsbury.

Lord privy seal, Viscount Cross.

Chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach.

Secretary of state for home affairs, the Rt. Hon. Sir Matthew White Ridley.

First lord of the treasury, the Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour.

Secretary of state for the colonies, the Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain.

Secretary of state for war, the Marquis of Lansdowne.

First lord of the admiralty, the Rt. Hon. George J. Goschen.

Secretary of state for India, Lord George Hamilton.

President of the board of trade, the Rt. Hon. C. T. Ritchie.

President of the local government board, the Rt. Hon. Henry Chaplin.

Lord lieutenant for Ireland, Earl Cadogan.

Lord chancellor of Ireland, Baron Ashbourne.

Secretary for Scotland, Baron Balfour of Burleigh.

Chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, the Rt. Hon. Sir Henry C. James.

Financial secretary of the treasury, Mr. Robert Hanbury.

Under secretary for foreign affairs, the Rt. Hon. George N. Curzon.

Hope to Adjourn July 8.

LONDON, June 29.—The premier, the Marquis of Salisbury, in the house of lords, said that he hoped to secure a dissolution of parliament on July 8.

A YEAR'S DEFICIT.

Treasury Statement Shows Uncle Sam Run Behind $43,250,000.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The treasury deficit for the fiscal year just closed is approximately $43,250,000. This, added to last year's deficit of nearly $70,000,000, makes the excess of expenditures over receipts since June 30, 1892, about $113,250,000. The total receipts of the government this fiscal year, exclusive of postal revenues, amount to nearly $313,000,000, and the expenditures $356,250,000, of which pensions took $141,891,623. Last year the aggregate receipts, exclusive of postal revenues, were $297,722,019, and the expenditures $367,525,279. The receipts this year, therefore, were $15,273,000 greater than last, and the expenditures about $11,275,000 less.

Decrease in Immigration.

The records of the immigration bureau show the number of immigrants who arrived in this country during the year to be approximately 255,327, a decrease for the year of 30,304. Of the whole number of arrivals about 2,500 were debarred from landing and deported to the port whence they came.

W. W. TAYLOR'S BOND.

It Was Very Easy to Get Signers in South Dakota.

PIERRE, S. D., July 2.—The $25,000 bond of W. W. Taylor for appearance Aug. 13 was filed and approved Monday. The bond bears justification for $94,900 and is certainly a good one. Enough securities were secured in this city to more than cover the requirements of the law, but as friends in other parts of the state had without solicitation expressed a willingness to go upon the bond it was sent to them.

AFTER HENRY VILLARD.

Receivers Authorized to Sue for Unlawful Profits.

MILWAUKEE, June 29.—In the United States circuit court Judge Jenkins authorized the Northern Pacific receivers to proceed against Henry Villard and other officers of the road who may be found to have secured unlawful profits in the way of commission or otherwise. It is said the suit will be begun in New York.

NO NEW TRIAL.

Supreme Court Denies the Motion in the Floyd Cases.

ST. PAUL, June 29.—The Floyd boys will have to serve out their terms in the penitentiary. Justice Collins of the supreme court has handed down a decision in which all other members of the court concur, denying the application for a new trial.

Adjourned to July 9.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Governor Altgeld may have to resort to other measures than his plan of continuously reconvening the Illinois legislature if he persists in attempting to secure the enactment of laws on arbitration, Pullman rates, etc. Both houses, after considerable tumult, but little or no business, voted to adjourn until July 9. The Democrats voted against the step but were overwhelmed by the Republicans. An attempt to cut off the pay of members during the length of recess was defeated.

Da Gama Suicides.

BUENOS AYRES, June 29.—The insurgents under command of Admiral da Gama, in the province of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, have been defeated by the government troops at Campos. Admiral Osorio was wounded and captured and subsequently succumbed to his injuries. Admiral da Gama, finding himself overpowered, committed suicide.

Indicted Thirteen.

CHICAGO, July 1.—The grand jury began the investigation of the stuffing of city payrolls by officials of the last city administration. Thirteen men were indicted, all of whom were subforemen and timekeepers in the water pipe extension department. It is charged that the city was robbed of large sums of money by fraudulent payrolls, and further indictments are expected.

Fatal Amusement.

OMAHA, June 27.—The explosion of a miniature cannon at the Missouri Pacific roundhouse resulted in the death of E. N. Dedrich and the fatal wounding of George Watt, railroad employes.

BY FALLING WALLS

ANOTHER HORRIBLE HOLOCAUST AT MINNEAPOLIS.

Six Firemen Crushed to Death While Fighting Flames in the McDonald Crockery House—Several Others Were Severely Injured and Some May Die.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—One of the most disastrous fires which ever visited Minneapolis accomplished its work of destruction and death during the night. Within an hour after the alarm rang in at 11 o'clock six firemen paid the penalty of death for their faithfulness in trying to save the property of others. The names of the dead are:

JOSEPH HOY, truckman.
WALTER RICHARDSON, hoseman.
FRANK EULAINE, lieutenant of hose company.
JOHN HORNER, truckman.
CHRISTIAN SANDERS, hoseman.
BERT THOMAS, hoseman, died on the way to the hospital.

Several others were seriously injured, and it is thought there may be still more dead who have not yet been extricated from under the ruins of the walls which fell and crushed them. The seriously injured are: Ed Thielen, lieutenant of hook and ladder company No. 2; Captain Cadwell, engine company No. 6; Frank Egan, hoseman; Henry Grau, supply wagon, and a man named Gray.

Fell Without Warning.

When the firemen arrived at the scene the building was a mass of flames. The heat from the fire was intense, and it soon became evident that the Barge block at the corner of First avenue south and Washington avenue, and immediately abutting the McDonald building, was in great danger.

Soon after the firemen got to work an explosion occurred in the North Star Clothing company's store. The explosion was followed by a general crashing and breaking of glass in the McDonald building, the falling of iron shutters and the loud crashing in of two of the upper floors. With a mighty roar the flames shot up, and had burned but a few moments in the deluge of water poured upon it, when the rear portion of the side wall facing the alley fell with a crash. Joseph Hoy, pipeman of No. 2, had just come down off the fire escape in the rear of the building, and Lieutenant Frank Eulaine was half way up a ladder tearing off some 30 feet of the wall. At the foot of the wall and in the little blind alley between the McDonald block and the adjoining building stood five more fireman, and in the side alley running through from Nicollet to First avenue stood several more. Eulaine fell from the ladder into the alley, the brick falling on him and crushing his head to an unrecognizable mass. Hoy, Horner, Richardson and Sanders were crushed to an instant death, and but a few feet away lay the injured ones moaning.

When the Crash Came,

The brother firemen at work by the side of the dead and injured stopped as if in terror. Then with a first thought of their brave comrades and not of other impending danger from falling walls, dragged out of the debris the five dead bodies and the injured. The dead were at once taken to the morgue and the injured to the hospital.

Property Loss $100,000.

The property loss consisted of the entire demolition of the building occupied by McDonald Bros., dealers in crockery, chinaware, glassware, silverware and gas fixtures. The building was four stories with brick wall and wooden interior frame work and was well stocked. The fire originated in the boxes and packing stored in the rear of the building and was beyond the power of the fire department to control. At a few minutes before midnight the walls fell, one side wall falling in and the other falling out into the alley where the firemen were at work. The total loss will aggregate over $100,000.

GOVERNMENT DEFEATED.

Verdict for Mrs. Stanford in the Suit Against Her Husband's Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—United States Circuit Judge Ross has rendered his decision on the demurrer of Mrs. Jane L. Stanford against the suit of the government to recover $15,000,000 from the estate of her late husband, Leland Stanford. The demurrer was sustained. Judge Ross allowed the government to amend its former complaint and reargue its case if it so desired. It was intimated, however, that this step would not affect the case, the law as construed by Judge Ross not favoring the case of the United States. The sustaining of the demurrer was a surprise, attorneys generally expecting a contrary decision.

INTERNATIONAL PRISON CONGRESS.

Opening Session Attended by President Faure.

PARIS, July 1.—The international penitentiary congress was opened at the Sorbonne by the minister of the interior with a brilliant ceremony. President Faure and other diplomats and 700 delegates were present, representing 25 different countries, including America and England, the latter being represented for the first time at such a congress. All questions relating to prisons will be discussed.

FOURTH CONSECUTIVE VICTORY.

Yale Defeats Harvard in the University Boat Race.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 29.—Yale won the fourth consecutive victory over Harvard in the university boat race here during the day and won easily by nine lengths, the official time being 21:30.

Won by Columbia.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 29.—In the Columbia-Cornell-Pennsylvania boat race on the Hudson, opposite here, the former won by six lengths. Cornell was second.

LIVING ABROAD.

It Is Not So Cheap as It Is Commonly Reputed to Be.

"A man soon gets cured of many long cherished traditions respecting the cost of things in Europe by a little bit of personal contact with old world institutions," said Colonel W. C. Chapman of San Francisco. "I had an idea until I sojourned abroad one summer that the cost of living was much lower in London, for example, than in any American city. To my sorrow, I found out that to live in good style in London was dearer a good deal than to exist comfortably in New York.

"To be specific, I went to the Savoy, the best hotel in the great metropolis, and ordered a dinner not at all more elaborate than I am used to having at home. There are some excellent restaurants in Washington not noted for their cheapness where that dinner would have cost about $5.50—certainly not more than $6. The bill brought me called for £2, or $10 in American currency. Of course there was a small bottle of wine, but it was innocent of ice, as neither love, money nor tears will make those beautiful Britishers give you any ice with your drinks. I don't want to ever hear again of European cheap living. It's a myth. I can live better in this country on less money and have a ton of ice a day if I want it gratis. You may be able to live over there on a little money, but a man can exist very cheaply in China if he will limit himself to rice."—Memphis Commercial.

Euclid Items.

Peter Stuhr was a visitor at the county seat Wednesday of last week.

C. E. Harrington, Herman Wallace, Paul Nelson and Sam Henry transacted business in Crookston last week.

J. S. Chapin is having his hall reshingled and repaired in a general way.

The German Lutheran church in Keystone township was struck by lightning one day last week. The roof was badly torn and burned, but otherwise the damage is slight. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Barnard Tiedeman, Louie Giese and Barnard Horn were Euclid representatives in Crookston, Friday.

J. S. Chapin returned from Maple Lake Saturday.

Rev. S. Currie held services at Mentor last Sunday.

A. H. Pitkin departed for Maple Lake, Saturday, to join the rest of the Euclidites at that place.

George Carpenter, of Crookston, spent Sunday with friends in Euclid.

John Goosen and wife drove to Crookston Monday.

Mr. Larson, one of Crookston's enterprising implement dealers, was up on business the fore part of the week.

Mike Eagle, who has been under the care of Dr. Dunlop, of Crookston for some time, returned home Sunday very much improved in health.

H. C. Misner is having his residence raised and a new foundation is being put under the building. T. A. Harris is doing the work.

Miss Olive and Will Currie departed for Drayton, where they go to spend the 4th.

Mr. Burg, of Fargo, expert for the Deering Co., is here repairing several machines in this vicinity.

H. C. Misner returned from Maple Lake Wednesday.

C. Teal, Sr., Amile Acker, Bert Teal, Herman Wallace and John Gilstorf were down to the county seat on legal business Wednesday.

Mr. McVean, of Hallock, was in town the fore part of the week.

Haying has commenced in this vicinity and owing to the numerous prairie fires during last fall and spring, the crop will not be a very large one.

The Purles base ball club, of this city, cross bats with the Angus Giants to-day, at the grounds of the latter club. The Euclid nine has never yet met defeat this season, and the Angus club has equally as good a record. An interesting and closely contested game is looked for.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XIX. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1895. NO 13.

THE DISTRICT COURT

WEDNESDAY MORNING JULY 3.

The case of Mathias Sknla vs. Red Lake Falls was called. Ed. George for plaintiff and Wm. Watts and Chas. E. Boughton for defendant. Considerable difficulty was experienced in securing a jury, as one jury was out and two or three jurors had been excused and the spectators all seemed to be witnesses. A special venire for six men was issued and the required number finally obtained.

This case is brought for damages by reason of ditches and culverts placed on the road that runs on plaintiff's land, by defendant. He claims $500, also that the road is not a legal highway having never been laid out. The defendant claims that by continuous usage of the road for six years it is a public thoroughfare. The case will occupy all the day. The jury in the case of Mooney vs. Sanders could not agree on all the special questions submitted to them, and it was agreed by the parties that such verdict as they had made up be received. They had been out all night and up to 11 o'clock today; they found that the machine was worth but $375. The question of whether the mortgage was changed or not they could not agree upon.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The case of M. Skaln vs. the Village of Red Lake Falls, took an unexpected turn. On cross-examination of the plaintiff it developed that he was a member of the village council at the time money was appropriated for the improvement of said road on his farm, and of which he now complains, and that he urged and agreed to the said appropriation and improvement, and in fact assisted with the supervision of part of the work. After the plaintiff rested his case the defendant moved for a dismissal, on the ground that the trespass complained of by plaintiff was made by his consent and knowledge. After hearing the argument the court dismissed the case. The excuse the plaintiff gave for his consent to the improvement was that he thought it was on the section line. Thinking that the case would occupy all the afternoon the other jurors were excused until Friday morning. Thursday being the glorious Fourth, a legal holiday, court adjourned until Friday morning.

Very Much In Evidence.

It is not very often that our alter ego appears to us in the flesh but last week was a notable exception. On Saturday morning the door of our sanctum opened and a rather good-looking (of course) individual showed up in good form and handed us a card which alleged that the individual was H. E. Cooke, and that he represented the Lemen Bros. circus. We were rather disposed to argue the point with him but as he produced the wherewithal to pay for the big ad., we conceded the point and allowed him to exist in in our city for the space of one day and wear our cognomen about with him——howbeit we cautioned him to be careful how he used it. Later in the day when we visited the big circus he became our guardian angel and showed us all over the "great aggregation," boxing Tom, the big Rajah, the snake charmer and the whole business. The day passed, the tents were folded the "great aggregation" was loaded onto the cars and left and we supposed that we were out of H. E. Cookes for the time being—with only one left—but there is where we reckoned without our host for on arrival of the Monday morning mail we received a letter, all properly addressed to us but upon opening it were very much surprised to see ourself addressed as "Dear Papa!" We instantly drew the line right there, and turning the letter over we discovered that we had actually a "loving daughter" and we fired the whole business back into the envelope got out our biggest and ugliest looking revolver and went out upon the warpath after the circus man——but found out that he was innocent, it was not him but another one of us and this time from the twin cities, and pretty near brother Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News. We protest vigorously! This thing is getting altogether too numerous to be comfortable.

Very Careless.

On July 4th as Comrade Jim Kelley was sitting on the steps in front of the Palace hotel some one placed a lighted cannon cracker on the steps in such a way that it rolled down and rested lovingly against James near the region his mother used to use to remind James that he had been a naughty boy. The cracker true to its inward nature, did not long remain quiet—neither did Jim, but both "went off" simultaneously, and while the boys gathered up the fragments of Jim from all over Ed Martin's barber shop across the street nobody thought to look for the cracker—that "went off" and that's all we know about what became of it. Jim was badly lacerated, his clothing torn, and the man who fired the cracker invested next in a new suit for Jim, who is about the streets as though that was the way he always get off the hotel steps.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing business during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building-up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adapted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

AN INSANE FATHER.

He Ends the Existence of His Entire Family by Turning on the Gas.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Frederick Hellman, a well-to-do mason contractor, murdered his wife and four children and then killed himself. It was at first supposed that Hellman and his wife and children met death by accident, but it developed at the coroner's inquest that the wholesale murder was calmly planned and that the man intended to kill himself and end the existence of the members of his family.

The tragedy took place in a little brick cottage at the corner of Cornelia and Wood streets. The motive for the deed is unknown but it is supposed the act was that of a madman, as Hellman, about 10 years ago, had a sunstroke from which he never recovered completely.

The gas jet which was found open was just above the bed in which the mother and one of the children lay, and it was supposed that one of them had during the night accidentally hit the stopcock and knocked it open. At the inquest, however, an entirely different complexion was given the affair by Charles, a brother of Hellman. He produced a letter written by the murderer and suicide late on the previous evening, in which he

Clearly Stated His Purpose

of killing himself, although he gave no intimation of the fact that he was meditating the deaths of the members of his family. He spoke of the window through which the women had crawled as the only way in which his brother could gain admission to the house, and said that he had left it open for that purpose. The brother had not received the letter until afternoon and came directly to the inquest. The position of the bodies at the time they were found indicated that the two boys and older girl fought desperately to leave the room after the father had turned on the gas.

An Army of Teachers.

DENVER, July 9.—During the past 24 hours there has been a great inrush of visitors to the National Educational association. It was estimated that 11,000 visitors had arrived by noon and that the total number will exceed 14,000. The regular trains have been heavily loaded and a dozen special trains have arrived.

Rev. E. P. Savage, superintendent of the Foundling Orphans' asylum, of St. Paul, was in the city on Sunday last with a bright little ten year old boy for whom he was trying to find a home, and at the same time soliciting aid for the grand and noble work. Mr. Savage spoke at the Congregational church Sunday morning and gave a graphic description of the home and its workings, while he plead with all who could do so to aid in the work, either by providing a good home for some poor little forlorn waif or by contributing of their means as the Lord had blessed them in store. Incidentally, he said that waifs furnished by Polk county alone had cost the institution over $800, and that the good people of this county should contribute liberally in view of this fact. He held an interesting meeting on Monday evening at the Baptist church.

WARRING ELEMENTS

FURIOUS WIND AND RAIN CAUSES LOSS OF LIFE.

Half a Hundred Lives Lost in Kansas and Missouri—The Area Covered by the Storm Very Large—Six Drowned at Lake Geneva, Wis.

KANSAS CITY, July 9.—Reports of storms during the last three days come over a large territory and show that the entire eastern watershed of the Rocky mountains from the Nebraska and Iowa lines to Texas were swept by a storm. Friday night the worst blow came. Reports of loss of life and destruction of property came with every telegram, and the downpour, first regarded as a blessing, grew into a wave of destruction. Fields of grain that promised the most bountiful yield in many years were swept bare of vegetation. In several instances, the seas of rain were abetted in their work of destruction by tornadoes. It is too early yet to [illegible] the loss, but the total is appalling [illegible] the angry [illegible] have little left to [illegible] The stories of storm are so [illegible] summary is [illegible] is left to tell.

Southwest Missouri the Center.

The storm [illegible] an area of 200 square miles, with the southwestern corner of Missouri as the center.

The greatest loss of life is reported from Winona, Mo., where eleven corpses have been found, with as many more missing.

At Baxter Springs, in Southwestern Kansas, five were killed and eleven seriously injured by a cyclone that accompanied the storm. One person was drowned at Columbus and two at Ottawa, Kan. At Van Buren, Ark., a mother and her babe were drowned.

A family of five was encamped on the bank of Fish creek, in the Indian Territory. Nothing of them nor their belongings was found, except a part of their wagon in a pile of driftwood.

At Thomasville, Mo., where the rainfall was four inches in one hour, five persons were lost. Unconfirmed reports are received of loss of life, as follows:

Three at Fayetteville, Ark.; one at Richards, Kan., and six of a hunting party in the Indian Territory.

Immense Damage to Property.

The loss of property can be placed in the millions. Dwellings, fences and farm buildings were carried off and highway and railroad bridges swept away. Thirty of the 80 buildings in Winona succumbed. Five residences, a church and a warehouse went down at Baxter Springs. Six bridges went out in Russell county, Kan. About Jefferson City, Mo., many square miles of growing grain were destroyed. Traffic on the Fort Scott and Memphis railroad is temporarily suspended. Reports of damages to property other than above noted come from five points in Kansas, nine in Missouri, six in Arkansas and two in Indian Territory. The storm spent itself in Illinois, but having lost its force, proved a blessing to crops.

HALF A DOZEN DROWNED.

Party of Pleasure Seekers Meet Death at Lake Geneva, Wis.

LAKE GENEVA, Wis., July 10.—A heavy storm passed over here during the afternoon which unroofed buildings and demoralized shade trees. The hail broke a large amount of glass and ruined corn, oats and what little fruit there was.

The steam launch Dispatch was chartered just before the storm by a party consisting of Father Hogan and Miss Hogan of Harvard, Ills., and a man thought to be Dr. Franz, assistant superintendent of the Elgin, Ills., insane asylum, wife and child. The boat was in charge of John Preston, a reliable young man. They were caught by the storm and the boat was swamped and all on board were drowned.

Miss Hogan's body was found at Kayes park about sundown. A most vigorous search by 100 men has failed to get a trace of the others and it is feared they are all with the hull, held by the engine and machinery against the bottom of the lake.

Situation Critical.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., July 10.—The situation is very grave in the Elkhorn mining region. Colonel White, Governor MacCorkle's private secretary, says the danger is imminent and that trouble may occur at any time.

Wendlund Given a Life Sentence.

FARGO, N. D., July 10.—Emil Wendlund, the murderer of Louis Johnson of Reed township, was sentenced by Judge McConnell to the penitentiary at Bismarck for the natural term of his life at hard labor.

THE JOLLY CANNON CRACKER.

"Sing heigh the jolly cracker and the fun" (?) At Fisher an enthusiastic celebrant was having great fun on our natal day shooting off big gun-crackers (and imbibing the ardent) until at last he got so full of patriotism (or the red liquor) that he took a notion to hold one of the big cannon crackers in his hand and explode it. That idea would have been a brilliant success if he had not miscalculated the strength of his hand which member was so badly shattered that amputation at the wrist became necessary.

CROWD JOINS IN THE CHASE.

Desperado Finally Killed After Wounding Several of His Pursuers.

CHICAGO, July 10.—In Western desperado style a man supposed to be C. E. Cole assaulted and attempted to rob P. G. McGloin in his saloon at 64 Adams street, in the heart of the business district of Chicago, during the evening. After seriously wounding McGloin the thief escaped and made the most remarkable race for liberty ever seen in the streets of Chicago. After firing into the mob that pursued him and seriously wounding three citizens he was run down and killed by Officer Rosenthal opposite the entrance of the Auditorium on Congress street. McGloin was alone in his saloon when Cole entered and ordered a glass of beer. This was served to him, and he then asked the saloonkeeper to get him some meat that he claimed to have left in the ice box of the saloon. McGloin walked to the entrance of the ice box, and Cole, drawing a revolver, ordered him to go inside and stay there. McGloin turned and nearly knocking him down. The two men then clinched and fought desperately. Cole managed to get one arm free and with his revolver pounded McGloin viciously, inflicting three severe wounds on the head. The robber then broke loose from McGloin, and, running to the front entrance of the saloon, turned west on Adams street. Although bleeding profusely, McGloin followed and was only a few steps behind, when the thief turned into O'Brien's saloon at 84 Adams street, and, still holding the revolver in his hand, ran out of the rear door on Quincy street. He then turned east and at State street boarded a southbound cable car. McGloin was still close upon him, however, and Cole, seeing that he could not shake off his pursuer, ran through the car and continued his flight south on State. Several citizens had by this time and, after running one block on Jackson street, Cole fired one shot into the crowd, which failed to hit anybody. The flight and pursuit then turned toward Wabash avenue and south upon that street. Officers Rosenthal and Daly, in citizens' clothing, were walking on Van Buren street just as Cole, closely followed by the bleeding saloonkeeper and a crowd of citizens, ran across the street going south. They at once joined in the chase, and, as Cole was badly winded by this time, they rapidly came up with him. Half way between Van Buren street and Congress street Rosenthal was close upon his man and ordered him to surrender. Cole replied with a shot and the bullet tore through the stomach of H. M. Sternberg, who was among the leaders of the pursuit. Just before reaching the corner of Congress street the officer fired at the fugitive, who returned the compliment.

Joined in the Chase,

The Officer's Bullet Went Wild,

but that of Cole brought down Samuel Stone, another of his pursuers, with a ball through the leg. Rosenthal fired a second time, and this time Cole staggered. He continued to run, however, and turning the corner, ran east on Congress street until he was directly in front of the entrance to the great Auditorium theater, where he fell. He died within two minutes without saying a word. The officer's bullet had passed through his left kidney and into the lung.

Nothing is known of Cole in Chicago, the police never having seen him before. The only manner in which his name could be determined was by the laundry mark upon his clothing, which read "C. E. Cole."

Serious Charge Against a Banker.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., July 10.—Moneah Metz, aged 65, bank director and one of the wealthiest residents of Smithburg, near here, was arrested by Sheriff Seller on the charge of assaulting the 10-year-old daughter of John Weller. He gave bail for his appearance at a hearing here Wednesday before Magistrate Blessing. Metz denies his guilt.

Against the Big Fight.

AUSTIN, Tex., July 10.—Attorney General Crane has expressed his belief that the anti-prize fight law is perfectly sound and that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight will not take place in Texas. Comptroller Finley, in refusing to license a pugilist, is understood to have acted upon the attorney general's advice.

Wholesale Jail Delivery.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 10.—A wholesale delivery from the county jail occurred at Hendersonville during the night. The prisoners picked the locks to the cages, cut a hole through the plastering of the ceiling, then passed out through a ventilator by tying their blankets together and letting themselves down.

DRUNKEN INTRUDERS

CAUSE A BLOODY ENCOUNTER AT SIBERIA, INDIANA.

The Carnage Said to Be Something Awful—Three Persons Killed, Four Fatally Hurt and Fifty Badly Injured—An Insane Father Ends the Existence of His Entire Family by Turning on the Gas.

ENGLISH, Ind., July 6.—Startling reports of a desperate riot at Siberia, Perry county, are coming in by telephone and couriers from the scene of the encounter. Dr. William Lomax of White Sulphur Well has just telephoned that a thousand men and women took part in the fight; that three men are dead, four fatally hurt and fifty seriously injured. The dead are Fred Elmer, William Geise and Frank Hart. Those fatally hurt are Peter Bennett, Robert Dodge, Abner Strond and Samuel Wilson.

Siberia is but a hamlet of a few dozen straggling houses and a Roman Catholic church, the congregation of which is composed of Germans. They are a simple and inoffensive people, but have been greatly annoyed recently by persons

Opposed to Their Religion.

Thursday they planned to enjoy a great picnic in the woods surrounding the village. The entire population turned out to attend the picnic and all went went smoothly enough until several gangs of disturbers appeared on the scene and began to make trouble.

There were a number of booths on the grounds where intoxicants were served. These were liberally patronized by the intruders, who soon began to insult the Germans and their wives. The priest, who was present, counselled his people to avoid trouble if possible, and to pay no attention the jeers of the half drunken marauders. Mistaking his tolerence for cowardice, the intruders became bolder and soon which in a few moments assumed the proportions of a desperate riot. Clubs, chairs and beer bottles were brought into play and the peaceful picnic was transferred into a great group of struggling cursing men and screaming women.

Samuel Wilson, a leader of the outsiders, was armed with a huge knife which he wielded on every side, stabbing and cutting many persons. He was finally opposed by a sturdy German who was more than a match for him until Wilson plunged a knife into his neck. As the man fell his wife sprang through the crowd and dealt Wilson a terrible blow with a beer bottle, crushing his skull. During the melee one of the intruders kicked a woman about to become a mother, killing her child and fatally injuring her. It soon became apparent to the attacking party that if the fight was continued, and, after their leader was stricken down, they ran hastily through the woods to where their horses were tethered and escaped, leaving three of their number on the ground for dead.

They Would Be Annihilated

Cots and litters were hastily improvised and the dead and wounded were removed to the church in the village and all the physicians in the neighborhood called upon. Dr. Lomax, a surgeon of White Sulphur Well, and his two assistants were kept busy all of the night caring for the wounded. Dr. Lomax states that he saw 54 injured and believes that several of them will die. He says the fight began at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and continued for an hour. A telephone message from White Sulphur Well says that at least 20 of the injured will die.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING.

Extensive Preparations Made to Handle the Crowds Expected.

BOSTON, July 8.—The committee having in charge the extensive arrangements for the Christian Endeavor convention, which opens here next Wednesday, have now practically completed their work and are ready to receive the delegates as they arrive. These arrangements have been most thorough and the committee announces that over 65,000 people can be provided for without confusion or discomfort. Two large tents, together with the Mechanics' building, will be the principal meeting places during the week, although services will be held daily in many churches in the city. During the noon hour 125 companies of Christian Endeavorers will daily visit the large manufacturing firms, dry goods houses and places of business and hold services there with the employee.

EMPLOYING OLD MEN.

Business Improvement Beginning to Affect the Railroads

MILWAUKEE, July 9.—The apparent betterment of business conditions is having its effect on railroad traffic, and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul company is fulfilling its promise to reappoint to their old positions the men who were laid off during the business depression which set in two years ago. Business is picking up so rapidly that it is estimated that by the middle of August all the men who were discharged from the service of the company for want of something to busy them will have been restored to the company's employ.

Died on the Diamond.

PRENTICE, Wis., July 9.—While playing ball William Robbins, a clerk in Myers, Son & Co.'s store, was overcome by heat and died soon thereafter.

DIED.

At Camillus, New York, at 12:30 p. m. on Monday July 8th 1895, M. E. Bartlett at the age of 49 years. M. E. Bartlett was born at Camillus, on July 9th 1846, at which place his boyhood days were spent until his father moved to Clifton Springs and purchased a farm adjoining that thriving watering place. In his youth he was a surveyor and schoolteacher. On April 16, 1880, he arrived in Crookston near which city he had purchased a quarter section of railroad land the fall before, and on Nov. 3d 1880 he was united in marriage to Miss Isabella G. Cooke, sister of the editor of the JOURNAL, going soon after to his farm in Fairfax where he resided until Jan. 1893 when he was summoned to Clifton Springs by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his father, (whose wife, Mr. Bartlett's stepmother had died two years before leaving Mr. Bartlett, Sr. entirely alone in the world.) His father lived but has been an invalid requiring the almost constant attention of his son ever since and in caring for him the bronchial trouble from which Mr. Bartlett had been a sufferer for years was intensified and finally carried him off. While a resident of Fairfax, Mr. Bartlett was always prominent in town affairs, being always in some town office or other, and he was highly respected by all who knew him. He was at one time a candidate for county surveyor on the democratic ticket. In politics Mr. Bartlett was a democrat but was never in full accord with his party on the tariff question, always voting with the republican party on any question or office that related to the tariff, and finally became an out and out republican. When he left his home in Fairfax in '93 it was in the full expectation of returning by spring at the farthest and little did he realize as he crossed the threshold to go on that trip it was for the last time. His condition had not been considered critical until very recently and it was only on Sunday last that a message announcing a change for the worse came; and before his wife could get ready to go to him the message announcing his death came by which his widow was so greatly prostrated as to be unable to undertake the journey.

Bro. C. C. Knappen was up from Fisher on Monday. Bro. Knappen, since his late bereavement in the loss of his wife, has been doing nobly trying to provide for the sweet little one she left him, and our heart went out to him as he described his efforts to publish a newspaper, to write on all subjects, both grave and gay, trivial and weighty, and the hundreds of topics that enter into our kaleidoscopic daily life; all the while his heart is wrung with anguish and quivering with exquisite agony—but duty drives and man must needs work somewhere—or break. It is the Divine plan, and it is a wise one for without good, solid employment in such times man would in most of cases become a moral and physical wreck. Bro. Knappen talks as though he fully realizes the only source from whence cometh help in such a trial, and if so he has builded on the only sure foundation.

Peter Eagh, a prominent farmer of St. Hilaire was in the city this week visiting in the family of Peter Cornelius. Mr. Eagh worked for Pete a few years ago and saved up money enough to start into business for himself on a farm of his own and he now has a fine farm and a nice little home which shows what can be accomplished in this country by industry and frugality. The plan he has pursued will make him independent in a few years.

Inebriate Bill

STATE OF MINNESOTA, TWENTY-NINTH SESSION. H. F. 185.

Introduced by Mr. Robbins, February 1, 1895.

Referred to Committee on Temperance.

Reported back, Feburary 27, 1895.

A BILL for an Act to Provide for the Treatment of Inebriates by Counties, and Prescribing Rules Governing the Same.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA:

Section 1. When any legal resident of said state shall become an habitual drunkard, in the sense hereinafter defined, he may apply in person to the Judge of Probate of the county in said state in which he shall be a resident, or with his consent any friend or near kin, may so apply for him to the Judge of Probate of said county, setting forth the fact of habitual drunkeness, his willinguess and desire to be cured thereof; and also that he is without money or property to pay for treatment for the same.

He shall make oath to the truth of said statements, and shall furnish two credible witnesses, who shall also be residents of the same county and state, to further attest these facts. But the possession and ownership of a family homestead actually occupied by the family of the applicant, or by those dependent upon him for support, and not otherwise a source of revenue, shall not bar the right to ask assistance under this act.

Sec. 2. Upon receiving such application, the Probate Judge shall forthwith proceed to determine if the facts are in accordance with the sworn statements of the applicant and his witnesses, and for that purpose may subpœna and require to appear before him and testify such other witnesses as he may deem proper, and if said Judge of Probate shall be satisfied from such examination that the facts set out in said application are true, he shall without unnecessary loss of time, transport and commit the said applicant to a reputable Double Chloride of Gold Cure Institute, or any reputable institution in which inebriates may be cured. Such Institute or Institution to be located within said state, and to be selected by a committee of three citizens, appointed by said Judge of Probate of said county, located within said state. The board of county commissioners shall have the power and authority to contract and fix the terms or price for such treatment with the proper party or parties representing such institutes or institution, and to audit and allow the bills therefore upon the report and certificate of said Judge of Probate, but it shall be unlawful to appropriate or allow more than one hundred ($100) dollars for such treatment in any one case at the expense and cost of the county of which he is a resident.

Sec. 3. The Probate Judge shall record or cause to be recorded, the name, sex, age, nationalty, residence and length of residence in county and state, length of time that the applicant has been incapacitated for self-control or self-support, number of persons dependent upon him for support, date of commitment to the the institution; and thereafter shall add the length of time treated, and total amount of expenses to the county for commitment and treatment. He shall from these records make an annual statistical report of these and other facts as shall be deemed worthy of record, exclusive of names, to the State Board of Charities and Corrections.

Sec. 4. The money appropriated and used for such expenses. costs and treatment as aforesaid shall be, and is hereby declared to be, a loan from the county to the individual receiving the benefits of the same, which shall be payable at any time within five years without interest. The party accepting the benefits of the said loan shall give his note to said county for the full amount of cost for commitment and treatment, when said treatment shall have been finished, and all expenses shall have been properly reported to the said judge of probate.

This note shall be non-negotiable and may be paid in installments, or at the time of maturity may be extended, at the discretion of the judge of probate. If the applicant shall be a minor he shall nevertheless be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to execute a promissory note as herein required, which shall be in all respects as valid and enforceable as if such applicant were of full age.

Sec. 5. The officers of such institute as may be designated for the treatment of such persons-payment of whose care is provided by this act—shall become sworn officers of the court committing such persons to their care, and shall have authority to enforce such reasonable rules as may be necessary for the administration of proper treatment to the patient entrusted to their care, but they shall receive no other fee or compensation than the sum provided for and limited by section 1.

Sec. 6. A drunkard, as mentioned in the foregoing sections of this act, shall be deemed to include any person who has acquired the habit of using spirituous, malt or fermented liquors, cocaine or other narcotics, to such an extent or degree as to deprive him of reasonable self-control.

Sec. 7. This act shall be in force from and after its passage and publication.

Few medicines have held their ground so successfully as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. During the past fifty years, it has been the most popular of all cough-cures and the demand for it to-day is greater than ever before. Prompt to act and sure to cure.

THIEF RIVER FALLS ITEMS

[From the Press.]

Mine host Robbecke contributed the first new potatoes to the editor's table this season.

J. E. Morrisey, the well-known Crookston foundryman was doing business here Monday.

Mayor Kretzschmar received an elegant new surrey on Monday's train. It is a handsome carriage and expressly for the Mayor by McKinnon Bros. of Crookston. An elegant new harness from Gibb's also adorns the Mayor's family horse.

Last Friday the marriage of Mr. W. T. Mullarky, of this city and Miss Caroline Hansen, formerly principal of schools here, took place at the home of the bride's parents in St. Aasgar, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Mullarky returned to this city Wednesday and will proceed to housekeeping in rooms over the post office at once.

A farmer by the name of John Nelson came in Tuesday and exchanged a jag of farm produce for a jag of 40 rod and during the evening in an attempt to accomodate some inquisitive person as to the time of night, was relieved of his watch. The farmer took the matter rather coolly and for the balance of the night made himself at home on the town hall steps.

A pleasant party was given by Mayor Kretzschmar and wife at their home on Friday evening inst in honor of their guest, Mrs. Jno. Heornig of Oshkosh and Mrs. W. A. Schrieter, of Red Lake Falls, Mrs. Kretzschmars mother and sister. Music, games and social intercourse afforded happy occupation and at eleven o'clock dainty refreshments were served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Knox, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Stebbins, Dr. and Mrs. Grandy, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Ware.

A. Wright, with his driving crew came in from the Tamarac Wednesday. They will return in a few days and tow their logs across the lake to be driven down to this place for sawing.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Stebbins received a telegram this morning announcing the death of their daughter Mrs. H. F. Wharton which occured in Minneapolis yesterday. Mr. Stebbins goes to Minneapolis today and will accompany the husband and four children to St. Charles where the funeral will occur on Sunday.

Remarkable Families.

Among the remarkable families of the past generation was that of the Adamses. Samuel was one of the most prominent figures in the Revolution; John and John Quincey were both Presidents of the United States besides filling other honorable stations in the service of their country. Among the remarkable families of this generation, are (or were, for two of them have recently died) the Field brothers. David Dudley was known wherever there is law and lawyers, and at ninety his faculties were as bright as in middle life; Stephen J. has been a justice of the United States Supreme Court for more than thirty years; it was the indomitable pluck and energy of Cyrus W. that caused the Atlantic cable to be laid in the face of untold discouragements; Henry M. has been for many years a distinguished divine and literary man. A third remarkable family is a railroad one—the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Chicago, Burlington & Northern, Burlington & Missouri River, Burlington & Western, Burlington & Northwestern, Hannibal & St. Joseph, St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern, and Kansas City, St. Joseph & Council Bluffs, seven railroads. with more than seven thousand miles of track in eleven of the best western states, affording an easy and convenient means of reaching all the principal towns and cities. For a more intimate acquaintance with this family call on any of its agents, or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Angus Items.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Evans drove to Crookston, Monday, on business.

Artie Brach went to Crookston with a four horse team, for feed, on Monday.

W. Lemen drove to Warren on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Kistenmacher, of Crookston, spent 4th of July in Angus.

Angus had a grand celebration. The fireworks were magnificent.

Euclid base ball team failed to appear, so the Angus Giant vs. the Cyclone played. Score, 30 to 21.

Some of the folk went to Warren after the fireworks. With the flag-raising over the school house in Dist. 70, on the 4th was a grand success.

A. T. Campian, accompanied by his sister and Will Curry and sister spent the 4th in Drayton.

L. J. Lake went to Warren on Saturday.

The Minneapolis & Northern carpenters have completed the elevator.

John Bung left for his home near Fosston to spend the 4th.

Miss Noel left on Friday for her home at Fosston. Ex.

THE DISTRICT COURT

FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 5.

The case of Albert E. Engesether vs. The Great Northern Ry. Co., was the next on the programme. H. Steenerson counsel for plaintiff and A. C. Wilkinson counsel for defendant. The plaintiff sues to recover $401.90 damages, alleged to have been sustained by him on the shipment of three car loads of cattle from McIntosh to South St. Paul. Two cars were shipped Oct. 19, 1893, and one car March 3, 1894. He claims this damage by reason of defendant failing to furnish cars when promised, thus necessitating his keeping the stock several days at McIntosh waiting for the car, and by unnecessary delay along the road to their destination; and the failure to unload and feed on the way and the loss of one ox; and the fall in price by reason of waiting for cars and the long delay on the road; and the shrinkage caused by said delay. The two legal giants, counsel for the respective parties, fought for two days during the sweltering heat and at last, on Saturday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock, delivered the whole business over to twelve plain, sensible, everyday men to decide the merits of plaintiff's claim. These twelve men deliberated about one hour, sealed their verdict and went about their business till Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

MONDAY, JULY 8.

Court convened at 9 a. m. with Hon. Judge Searle, of St Cloud, on the bench. Judge Searle comes by request of Judge Ives to try the criminal cases growing out of the special grand jury of last January and two civil cases which had once been tried by Judge Ives.

The jury in the case of Engesether vs. Great Northern Ry. returned a sealed verdict allowing plaintiff damages to the amount of $130.

Some criminal matters were then taken up. The case of State vs. W. D. Russell, indicted for keeping gambling devices to be used for gambling was called and the defendant plead guilty to the indictment. Sentence to be imposed later.

Chas. Doll, indicted for a like offense as Russell also plead "guilty." R. J. Montague appearing for these defendants.

The case of State vs. Hugh Quigley charged with neglect of public duty, was brought up on demurrer by defendant, on the ground that indictment failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a public offense. The case was argued and the court took the matter under advisement. Several other criminal matters will be taken up at 2 p. m.

A motion in the case of Joseph Netzer vs. City of Crookston, defendant and Netherlands American Land Co., intervenor to strike out the intervenor's answer, on the ground that it is sham and unauthorized. Was argued at some length. The court held that the plaintiff had rights to be determined, but as to the rights of the intervenor he withheld his decision until the trial. The city attorney, M. O'Brien, asked that the stipulation entered into at the beginning of the first trial, to the effect that intervenor's interest be tried and if it, as owner of this building, had suffered any damage, the same be awarded the plaintiff, Netzer be stricken out. This motion was granted. A motion to amend defendant's answer so as to include the words, "and had no legal means to provide funds" necessary to repair damage to sewer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, JULY 5, 1895.

Oh, yes. this is a civil service reform administration. If you don't believe it, just study the removal of Prof. Mark W. Harrington from the head of the weather bureau, and the causes which led to it, and you will be convinced that Mr. Cleveland's claim to being a civil service reformer is a fraudulent one. When congress made it a civil bureau under the agricultural department, President Harrison selected Prof. Harrington as its head, regardless of politics, solely because of his reputation as an expert in meteorological matters. he having been for many years editor of a journal devoted to that science, in addition to being a member of the faculty of the Michigan university. Prof. Harrington had trouble with Secretary Morton very soon after the present administration came in, because of his refusal to allow the officials under him whose duties require scientific knowledge, to be dismissed to make room for democratic politicians, and that trouble has continued right along. An investigation into the business affairs of the weather bureau was started with the hope that something would be found to justify Prof. Harrington's removal, but it failed of its object. Mr. Cleveland then asked Prof. Harrington to resign, but that gentleman declined. He was then peremptorily removed, the order coming from Buzzard's Bay. Prof. Harrington declines to say much about his removal, but what he does say tells the story. "Among the public interests which I have had steadily in view were the preservation of the scientific corps and the protection of the bureau from the spoilsman. When a scientific bureau descends to the four year office-holding plane, it at once loses prestige and ceases to be a desirable post for competent men."

A little speculative transaction has become public that has not increased the good standing of the individual official directly concerned nor of the administration of which he is a member. Mr. W. A. Milliken, who is Assistant Attorney General for the Post Office department—the man who furnishes the legal advice for that branch of the government, has been sued by a local stock broker for the payment of a check for $100 that he gave the broker and then stopped payment thereof. The particulars of the transaction, which follow, are not creditable to Mr. Milliken: He ordered the broker to purchase 100 shares of Chicago gas stock for him when a specified price was reached. The broker did so and sent a copy of the contract to Mr. Milliken, who accepted it and gave his check for $100. Mr. Milliken expected, of course, that the stock would go up after his purchase and enable him to sell at a profit; but instead it went down until his $100 was lost—the margin it covered being wiped out. Then Mr. Milliken went to the bank on which the check was drawn and ordered its payment stopped, and when payment was demanded of him personally he refused, and said that the transaction being gambling and therefore illegal he could not be compelled to pay the money. Nice sort of a law officer isn't he. Like other skin gamblers he squeals when he loses. The lesson of the sugar speculating Senators seemingly had no effect, nothwithstanding the public indignation it aroused.

By withholding large sums of money which are due and should have been paid and by a juggling system of book-keeping, which would not be tolerated by any private business establishment, the administration succeeded in keeping the deficit for the fiscal year just closed down to $42,825,049. But the strangest thing about the whole disgraceful business is that some of the Democrats actually pretend to be proud of the showing made. Ye Gods! Proud of so running the government in a year of profound peace that its expenditures exceed its receipts by nearly forty-three million dollars. The people feel about this thing just as the stock-holders of a business corporation would feel if a similar showing were made at the end of a year's business—that a change of management is absolutely necessary. True, an immediate change cannot be made, but it has been ordered; and when the Republican congress meets the administration's power for evil will be partially taken away, and on March 4, 1897, a Republican administration will take charge of the government, and there'll be no more deficits or juggling with the treasury book-keeping.

To prevent pale and delicate children from lapsing into chronic invalids later in life, they should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla together with plenty of wholesome food and out-door exercise. What they need to build up the system is good red blood.

THE RUSSIAN KNOUT.

A BRUTAL PUNISHMENT INFLICTED IN THE CZAR'S DOMAIN.

Claim That Its Use In Some Respects Has Been Abolished—The Use of the Cruel Instrument Described by a Political Exile Who Has Suffered In Siberia.

One never knows for certain how much of the knout is left in modern Russia. The telegraph wire still at times carries the horrid whiz of it from remote Siberia, and only the other day I saw mention in news from St. Petersburg of a new imperial ukase, "abolishing the use of the knout for the punishment of offenses committed by the peasantry, which has hitherto been completely at the mercy of the local judges in this respect." I was under the impression that the "local judges" had been deprived of their knout for 20 years or more, but the sender of this message adds that "statistics were submitted to the czar, showing that in ten years 3,000 persons, mostly guilty of thefts of produce, had died after punishment with the knout."

Granted the infliction of the knout, the 3,000 deaths are easily believed. The instrument itself, supposing this report to be true, evidently dies harder than its victims. But even in Russia, where the rod and its equivalents have had a more extended and bloody existence than in any other European state, the humaner spirit of the age has been felt, and one is disposed to regard as exaggerated the statements just quoted. Certainly we had been given to believe that the knout was abolished for all but the gravest offense as long ago as 1866. But Russia has never been governed wholly by its written laws, and there are regions of that empire where a ukase may be slow to reach the "local judges."

The merciful edict of 1866, however, stopped short at the confines of Siberia, and it was with the object of learning to what extent the knout is used in the Siberia of today that I sought an interview with a distinguished and very interesting exile, M. Alexander Sochaczewski, on a visit to England. M. Sochaczewski, a Pole by birth, an artist by profession, and in England to arrange for the exhibition of a picture which will move the sympathies of every friend of the victims of the czar, was a political exile in Siberia at the age of 21 and suffered 4½ years in the mines, during 2½ of which he carried, night and day, chains of which marks are permanently graven on his ankles. Twenty years in all were the days of his exile, and he counts himself happy that he did not, like so many of his comrades in oppression, perish under that cruel yoke. Indeed he speaks without bitterness and says that even in Siberia one may often forget oneself.

M. Sochaczewski could say much about the knout. He had been many times a witness of its infliction. The knout, in fact, was in use in the mines during the whole of M. Sochaczewski's exile, and those who were condemned to it suffered in public.

At the present day M. Sochaczewski believed that it was practically abolished in 1893, but the governor retains a certain discretionary power, which may mean much in Siberia. Would M. Sochaczewski describe the punishment? He took a half sheet of note paper and a pen and made a rapid sketch. "That is the knout," he said. A hand of leather, as is well known, serves the executioner for a handle, and the knout itself is a single thong of leather, rough and very hard, tapering toward the extremity, where it is weighted with a ball of lead. With this the executioner —who is generally a reprieved murderer—can inflict as great or as little suffering as he pleases.

"Thus," said M. Sochaczewski, "the prisoners would sometimes give him a ruble to prove his skill, when he would strike one of them, apparently with full force, across the palm of the hand, but the blow would scarcely be felt and would not leave a scratch. With the same instrument he could kill at a single stroke, and was occasionally bribed by a condemned prisoner to do so. breaking the ribs and almost tearing out the heart.

What number of strokes, I asked M. Sochaczewski, were ordinarily inflicted?

He replied that it was of no great consequence, inasmuch as punishment with the knout was generally regarded as a sentence of death. A man under sentence of 100 lashes might die at the third lash, in which case the remaining 97 would be given to the corpse. It was possible, if the executioner did not employ his whole art or strength, for the victim to escape death, but he would then inevitably be a cripple for the rest of his life. There were men in the hospital in his time whom the knout had maimed forever.

I asked whether the knout exhausted the resources of penal discipline in Siberia. "By no means," said M. Sochaczewski.

He took up his pen again, and scratched me a picture of a whip called the plet, which has three tails of twisted leather, with bits of metal at the tips. It is a little less deadly than the knout, but an expert flogger can kill his victim at the fifth stroke. There is a difference in flogging with the knout and with the plet. The knout, like the English "cat," is laid across the back. The three tails of the plet score the back downward, from the nape of the neck to the loins, and every stroke, properly given, carries away three strips of skin and bites well into the flesh. Yes. M. Sochaczewski had seen many comrades suffer under the plet. "Protest? To what end?" To protest was to be tied up oneself. The very flogger ran the risk of being cut to pieces with knout or plet if he failed to kill or maim his victim.—St. Paul's.

Jewish Immunity From Disease.

Out of a total population in New York of 1,891,000, 70.46 per cent, or 1,333,000, live in 39,138 tenement houses. Apartment houses of the better class are not included among tenement houses. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that the lowest death rate in the city is in one of the most thickly settled tenement house districts, occupied by some of the poorest people, in the wards where the Jewish population is the densest. The death rate among the crowded Jews was in 1891 only 18.73 to each 1,000, and in 1893 only 17.14. The comparatively cleanly habits of these Jews, their observance of the Mosaic law about food and their abstinence from alcoholic liquors are given as explanations of their low death rate. In the Italian districts the death rate is double what it is among the Jews and the population not so dense, and even in the wards occupied by wealthy people the death rate is greater than among the Jews. The Fourth, Fourteenth and Eighth are the Italian wards, and the death rate in 1893 was 33.78, 35.12 and 31.98 respectively.—Springfield Republican.

A VISIT FROM THE DEVIL.

How His Satanic Majesty Once Made His Appearance In Bungay.

A rare pamphlet in the library of the editor of a department of The Republic bears the following quaint title: "A Strange and Terrible Wunder Wrought Verie Lately In the Parish Church of Bungay—namely, on the fourth of thys August in the Yeere of our Lorde 1577." The story, stripped of the quaint language in which it is couched, and briefly told, is as follows: A storm of extraordinary fury raged during divine services in the church alluded to; rain fell in torrents, and the lightning flashed "blue, red, green and in a mixture of indescribable colors," while the thunder peals "not only disquieted men and dumb creatures, but senseless things devoid of all life and feeling trembled and shook with terror."

While the tempest was at its height, a fiend from the lower regions appeared in the midst of the terror stricken congregation. The account says: "It was in form, as well as could be discerned, of an enormous dog, of black color, the sight whereof, together with the fearful flashes of fire which then were seen, moved many minds to the belief that the end of time had come, and that doomsday was upon us. The evil one, for be it was in such strange likeness, ran with extraordinary speed into that portion of the church where the majority of the congregation was seated. In doing so it passed between two persons who were upon their knees in the attitude of prayer, grasped and wrung the necks of both in an instant, so that they died presently as they knelt. As he passed by another he gave him such a grip on the back that he was drawn together and instantly shrunken up like a piece of leather scorched in a hot fire."

Leaving the church at Bungay, the devil is said to have "flown with a greate noise and rustling" to the church at Blibery, seven miles away. He was seen to alight upon the roof and to instantly pass through it, dropping from the vaulted ceiling upon the heads of three persons (two men and a boy,) who were all instantly killed, "beying scratched bye the horyd thing and burned to nearlie a cracklyng."

The "Book of Wonderous Visitations," published in 1687, 110 years after the events mentioned above, says that the prints of the devil's claws where he ran down the aisle of the Bungay church were then still plainly to be seen.—St. Louis Republic.

The Large Flying Squirrel.

The large red flying squirrel is interesting, but not beautiful. It is wholly nocturnal, and, like most nocturnal animals, is extremely surly and spiteful if disturbed in the daytime. It is as large as a cat, with a face like a rabbit's. Its coloring is extremely brilliant for a mammal, and in general appearance it resembles some curious monster in a Chinese painting. The fur is a rich and deep chestnut on its back, light chestnut below, its head white and its eye a dull pale gray.

The wide parachute membrane between its legs is covered with fur, and its tail is long, thickly furred and round. This squirrel does not "fly" in the proper sense of the word, but in the forests its parachute membrane answers its purpose almost equally as well as wings. It runs with a wonderful agility up the trunk of the tree, and to the end of a branch, and then takes a flying leap, with its limbs extended to the utmost and the wide flesh membrane stretched.

This "aerial slide" carries it forward and downward to a horizontal distance of perhaps 40 or 50 yards, and it is noticed that, as in the case of birds when making use of their powers of descent with fixed pinions, the squirrel throws itself upward and ascends slightly at the close of the "flight," perching on the bough it aims at, with all the lightness of a pigeon descending from a tower, to some point upon the roof below. —Spectator.

A long Greek lance, such as the men of the phalanx carried, cost about $1.50.

THE NOW AND THEN.

The globe, like all the universe
 That fills the niche profound,
Whirls on as endless cycles tick
 Its high appointed round.
The must of need is laid on man,
 He meets it with his will;
Their contact brings forth fate, and Jack
 And Jill went up the hill!

Oh, baseless fabrics of the air!
 Oh, youth's enchanted lands!
What castles made of dreams are reared
 On fancy's shifting sands!
Awhile an Eden is the lot
 Of every son and daughter
Eve gives unto the world. They went
 To fetch a pail of water.

What are we but the toys of fate?
 Dark courses in the sky
Map out to erudition's gaze
 Where suns lived but to die;
Volcanoes yawn and jibe at man,
 His mocks the earthquake's laughter.
Then Jack fell down and broke his crown,
 And Jill came tumbling after.

Each heart some trace of Egypt has,
 Where ruins, deserts, lie,
And o'er them all the sphynx looms up
 With its eternal why.
Perhaps the hill the pair went up
 Was a tank built by the town
And scared to death they feared its banks
 Might break ere they walked down.
—Philadelphia Times.

THE BIBLE.

Manuscripts of the New and the Old Testaments Often Rewritten.

The New Testament, as we know it, comes down to us after having been kept for hundreds of years in manuscript form by the priests, "fathers of the church," and others. The writings have been copied and recopied probably scores of times, at least as often as occasion required, being always renewed before becoming unintelligible by use and wear. The two oldest of these manuscripts now known are the Codex Seniations and the Codex Vaticanus, each of which dates from the fourth century, A. D. The languages originally used in this work were Hebrew and Greek, but after the year 300 A. D. the manuscripts were all, or nearly all, written in Latin. The last mentioned language was that adopted by the Roman church in their translations and was known as the "Vulgate," because commonly used in the churches. As far back as the seventh century portions of the Vulgate were translated into old English, and it was also the version used by Wickliffe (Wyclif), Purvey and their predecessors and was the first book printed from movable type, 1450-5.

Tyndale's version was from a German translation of the original Greek, made by Martin Luther.

The "authorized version," or King James' translation, was made by 47 of the most eminent British scholars and was finished in the year 1611. The Latin Vulgate was the main version used by them; but, so far as they were accessible, other manuscripts, both in the Greek and Hebrew, were consulted and compared.

The manuscripts of the Old Testament have had similar experiences, having been written and rewritten thousands of times since the first collection was put in writing by the priests and leaders of the Israelites, about the year 1500 B. C. All of the older copies have, of course, been worn out or lost ever since long before the birth of Christ, the oldest copies in manuscript form now in existence, so far as is known, dating from the year 500 A. D.—St. Louis Republic.

Ethics of Horse Trading.

Chief Justice Peters in making a charge in a case in court removed a certain weight of responsibility from the shoulders of the horse jockey. He said that in driving a bargain it is allowable to use a certain amount of "trader's talk," in which the buyer is to believe at his own risk. "The law cannot hold a man responsible for everything he may say in driving a trade," said Judge Peters; "it cannot. It expects the buyer to use ordinary precautions, and if he gets cheated by believing all the chaffering indulged in by the seller he must necessarily suffer. The law steps in only in case of fraud, defined according to legal statutes."—Lewiston Journal.

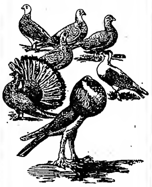
PIGEONS FOR PROFIT.

How to Feed, Mate, Market and Keep Them In Health.

It was in the spring of 1880 that a large farmer was induced by the writer to breed common pigeons for profit. Accordingly six pairs of mated white and blue pigeons were sent from the city to the farm and a place boarded off for their accommodation above a part of the haymow. The space was about 20 by 16 feet, with a door for the entrance, and a ladder extending from the upper beams of the barn. In the center of this room a square was partitioned off by railings. In this inclosure were spread sharp, coarse sand and gravel, the railing about the inclosure being necessary to prevent the pigeons from scattering the sand. A box in one corner of this inclosure was kept filled with eggshells, broken mortar and clay in lumps. In another box, at the opposite side, a piece of rock salt was kept, all this being necessary to keep pigeons in health. The nestboxes in which to rear the young pigeons were made of low, shallow soapboxes. A box 10 by 12 inches square and 3 inches deep serves the purpose. Some of these boxes were nailed a few feet above the floor, some higher up, and quite a number were put on the floor. Any place will suit a common pigeon. All being ready, the six pairs of birds were set at liberty in the coop. The light was admitted by a small window at the extreme end of the barn. In the course of a week after the pigeons were liberated in their new quarters two pair had built nests, a little hay for that purpose having been provided. The following week these had laid two eggs each, and the four other pairs were building their nests. Thus two pairs were on eggs and four others laying and ready to sit. The following week all were at work. Pigeons lay two eggs for each clutch. It takes 18 days to hatch them, three to five weeks before they lay again. Usually a new setting of eggs may be expected three weeks after the first batch. It takes the young ones five weeks to begin feeding themselves, but the male pigeon usually looks after them until they are able to attend to their own wants.



A GROUP OF PIGEONS.

The first 13 months the six pair hatched and reared fully 11 pairs of young, or 62 pairs in all. These sold for $26.40, or 40 cents per pair, delivered in the city. It cost just $7.65 to feed and keep them. The profit is plainly visible. Who says pigeons are not worth their keeping? This old farmer was very bitter against pigeons of all kinds until convinced to the contrary. The next season he kept 100 pairs of breeders, and his success was equal to the first season, but the first coop had to be enlarged. He tells me now that his pigeons keep himself and wife in shoes and clothes and leave something over.

One of the essential points in keeping pigeons is to have the sexes equal. If there is an extra male, he will make an attempt to secure a mate from the other males, and thus break up the matings as well as keep the colony in perpetual turmoil. He must be taken out, or a mate for him must be procured from elsewhere.

Poultry Points Worth Noting.

Burn corn or wheat until in charcoal state and give to the poultry. It shows in bright red combs and healthy appearance, is an excellent corrector when birds are ailing, better than drugs, and cheap. Keep fresh, clean water daily in vessels in yards, keep all roosting places cleaned up often and use coal oil freely in building and on roosts. Gather leaves from the woods and have a good supply to use through winter in yard and sheds. Sow grain among them, and the fowls will scratch after the feed, giving exercise and health. Keep a supply of gravel or grits always in yards when poultry are kept in small quarters. When they run at large, they find such things themselves. Have fresh ground bone from the butcher's fed at least twice a week. It helps in growth of young birds and laying plenty of eggs in mature ones. Give a variety. Don't feed one thing long at a time.

Tennyson on Hens.

Just as the study and cultivation of plants and flowers have a refining effect upon men's minds, so does association with birds. It is one of the best things that any parent could do to a child to teach it to take an interest in the feathered kind. The late Lord Tennyson once said that he believed there was more poetry in the life of birds than in that of any other of God's creatures. He used to spend hours watching the ways of the birds in the back yard and the habits of the songsters in the spinnies round his house. He said that from the triumphant cackle of a hen that had just laid an egg to the glorious, thrilling melodies of the nightingale he could always find something that touched his inmost nature.

Salt For Hens.

It is learned from reliable authority that salt is not poison for hens any more than for man or beast. Some people have an idea that because a neighbor is troubled by having his garden destroyed by their chickens and wreaks vengeance by throwing out a handful of salt, which kills the chicks, it is not good for poultry.—Exchange.

THE Stephen Leader uses a very strong expression to illustrate the execrable condition of Marshall county roads, when it says that it is impossible for anybody to drive over them and sin not. At any rate the Leader says: "Anyone doubting this statement is requested to drive out east over the important road on the town line between Tamarac and Sinnot."

THE Empire State establishes rather an awkward precedent as a result of the trial of Fitzsimmons for the killing of Dan Riordan. This decision is that it is no crime to kill a man in the prize ring. This decision is liable to cause no end of trouble in the future if allowed to stand. Fitzsimmons deserves a term in states prison where he would have an opportunity to meditate upon the crime of taking the life of a fellow being.

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found the full text of the so-called "jag law," upon the terms of which every old bum has the opportunity of living like a man on the expense of the county. No doubt there are cases in which this law could be made the means of doing very much good, but the county commissioners may well use this law sparingly and exercise great care in every application thereunder. There is a chance for great abuses under this law.

NOT long since the papers were full of accounts of a mysterious disease that had broken out at Mayville, N. D., that proved fatal in all cases and baffled the skill of the physicians to handle, nor could any of them seem to diagnose the cases. It now transpires that the "disease" was caused by alcoholic whiskey that a blind pigger had made of fusil oil and tobacco, and when the "inventor" was taken sick he confessed what he had been doing—and then died.

MINNESOTA sets New York a good example in the manner in which she deals with those who take human life. Fred Williams, who killed H. W. Thomas in Minneapolis gets seven years and there is much that might be said in extenuation of his crime. It is true that Mrs. Williams had sued for a divorce but she had not as yet obtained it and Thomas was himself a married man, and even had he not been he had no business to be making love to a married woman. Driven to desperation at what he saw between his wife and another man, Williams took the life of Thomas—and gets seven years in Stillwater, which is about right. New York lets a murderer go scot free because he killed his man in the prize ring.

THE DISTRICT COURT.

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

A jury was called in the case of Joseph Netzer vs. City of Crookston, H. Steenerson, counsel for plaintiff and M. O'Brien and A. C. Wilkinson, for the city. This case was tried a year ago and verdict rendered for the plaintiff for $500. Defendant asked for a new trial, which was denied. The case was then appealed to the supreme court, and that court overruled the motion for a new trial. The action is for damages caused by the breaking of the sewer and flooding of the plaintiff's premises, the Germania hotel.

Late in the afternoon, just before adjournment, M. T. Hagness, Dan Sullivan and Wm. Franklin, of East Grand Forks, charged with keeping gambling devices on their premises, plead guilty and were fined $200. W. D. Russell and Chas. Doll being partners were fined $150 each.

The cases of State of Minnesota vs. Ingeborg Olson, two indictments, one for selling malt liquors without a license and keeping a house of ill fame, were taken up. P. J. Russell appeared for defendant and demurred to the indictments on the ground that they did not state the place. Demurrers overruled and cases set for the 10th.

The two cases against Nettie Johnson are for selling malt liquors without license and the other for keeping a house of ill fame, were called, and the defendant plead "not guilty" and cases set for the 10th. Ed George, counsel for defendant.

The court sustained the demurrer to the indictment against Hugh Quigley, charged with failure to perform his duty as a public officer. Ed George appeared for the defendant.

Tuesday morning was occupied with the Netzer case. After the evidence was all in the court sustained the motion of defendant to strike out the intervenor's complaint. He held that according to the showing the intervenor made before the supreme court to avoid taxation of costs against it, and that it had no interest in the subject matter, it had no right in the case now.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Netzer case was finished and given to the jury about 2:30.

The case of J. P. Lundin vs. A. C. Rhinehart was settled. Rhinehart pays Lundin $500 and Lundin pays the costs.

Peter Stuhl, indicted for selling liquor to a minor, came up and plead guilty. He claimed that his bar tender did it without his knowledge. He was fined $25 and cost.

Mike Enright, indicted for keeping a house of ill fame, pleaded "guilty." The judge gave him a lecture straight from the shoulder. He told him that such a crime might possibly be overlooked in a woman, but it cannot be in a man. "For Heaven's sake!" said His Honor, "out of respect for yourself, your mother, for manhood and the people in general, don't be engaged in a business so infamous, loathsome, low and vile as this. The good people of this county intend to wipe out this evil and they have done well so far and I hope to goodness the evil there will be stopped. If the people of East Grand Forks don't take up this matter and root out the evil, the people throughout the county will keep after it until it is cleared up." He further told Mr. Enright that if he should be brought before him again state prison would stare him in the face. He was adjudged to pay a fine of $200. May Fowler, Enright's wife, charged for a like offense, keeping a house of ill fame, was cautioned to bear in mind what had just been said to her husband and warned her to not commit a like offense. He told her that sooner or later she would be found out and that if she should be brought here again it would be a long time before she saw East Grand Forks. A fine of $200 was charged against her. John M. Cochrane appeared for M. Enright and May Fowler.

Mable Mabel, or more truly speaking, Chloe Mainix, charged with keeping a house of ill fame, plead guilty and was cautioned in like terms as the last two, to the effect that her own good sense of right and wrong, of propriety, decency, respect for humanity, for herself, ought to teach her to lead a better life. A fine of $200 was assessed against her. A. A. Miller counsel.

John and Louis Bergquist, indicted for allowing gambling devices to be kept on their premises came up, plead guilty and were fined $40.

A jury in the case of Joseph Netzer vs. City of Crookston returned a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $750. A motion to set aside the verdict will be argued.

An indictment against Mabie Mabie for selling malt liquors without a license was dismissed.

Lou Livingston and Jessie Hall, of East Grand Falls fame, charged with keeping houses of ill-fame, came forward, pled guilty and were fined $200 each.

The case against Tracy St. John, charged with a like offense, was continued on motion of the county attorney.

Nettie Johnson, keeping a house of ill-fame, plead guilty and was fined $200. The charge against her for selling malt liquor without license was dismissed, on motion of county attorney Gossman.

The two cases against Margaret Dufour were continued until the December term.

The two cases against Ingebor Olson were continued until the December term. Two of the witnesses could not be secured at this time.

These parties, whose cases were continued, were held under the same bonds.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

J. J. Molstad, indicted for suffering gambling devices on his premises pled guilty and was fined $40.

The two cases against Eva Lamont, keeping a house of ill-fame and selling malt liquor without a license, were continued by reason of the inability of the defendant to attend the trial at this time. Affidavits to that effect were presented to the court. Held in same bonds.

The case against John Clynch, charged with keeping gambling devices designed to be used for gambling, was dismissed on motion of County Attorney Gossman. Ass't. County Attorney O'Brien showed his hand and told the court that he had been appointed specially by the board of county commissioners to look into and assist in the prosecution of these cases, and that he had examined carefully the evidence to be had in this case and he was satisfied the evidence was sufficient to convict and he wanted it entered on record that he protested against the dismissal of this case, and asked the court to order the case submitted to the next grand jury. The protest was entered on record. The resubmission of the case to the next grand jury can be had without the order of the court.

O. P. Johnson and Nels Hiren indicted for suffering gambling devices on their premises, pled guilty and were fined $40.

A. K. Austin selling liquor to a minor, pled guilty and was fined $40.

This ended the criminal business for this term. And the labors of that Special Grand jury of January 15, 1895 were not in vain. Just about $2400 in fines were levied on those who have thus far come forward and said "Guilty as charged in the indictment."

Judge Ives will resume the work on the civil cases this afternoon and Judge Searle will return to his home to-night. Judge Searle is a very genial gentleman and has made many friends while here in our city. His method of business is that justice and equity be apportioned to those coming before him.

THE PLAINS IN WINTER.

A Journey Across the Continent In March Is Like a Voyage.

The journey across the continent from west to east in midwinter is very much like a voyage. When one lands at St. Paul from the overland train, it is with all the sensations of making port after having passed over the icebound sea of the plains.

The uniform dazzle of miles of monotonous snow, broken only where it sinks to indigo shadow or swells to crests of intolerable light, has for days given to the world outside the pane a sentiment of immensity rarely matched by the moving sea.

There is majesty in the limitless sweep of level earth, so slightly overarched by the level sky, but majesty that becomes desolation when seen in intimate relation to human life.

A furry team of horses struggling across the plains, drawing a meager sledge load of firewood along a narrow trail in the snow to some unseen farmhouse, hibernating through the long winter months for the resurrection of a few fierce weeks of summer sunshine; a little schoolhouse of unplaned boards perched on a swell of the vast, silent landscape; a farmhouse backed by barn and corral, with a tiny yard in front encircled by a tawdry frill of whitewashed paling, showing yellow above the snow—all these, with miles of snow between, pierce one with a keener sense of loneliness than could any personal experience.

The human element is so inadequate that one passes these scattered evidences of a struggle for life as in a sound ship one might pass a frail craft at sea.

There are eagle minds upon which this solemn hostility of unconquered nature acts as a challenge; one sees this in the voice and step and eye of men who have built Dakota and Montana towns. Sturdy and unawed, they have fought their way and wrested for themselves a foothold on the great inhospitable plains.

The level iridescent blaze of cloudless winter days, the treeless prairies aflame with color materialized in a thousand wild flowers, the dreary swells of autumn brown, lifted here and there into sharp buttes of threatening stone—each in its own way impresses the imagination, but repels the nestling instinct of home seeking man.—Atlantic Monthly.

THE FIRST LOCOMOTIVE.

It Was Built by Oliver Evans, Who Couldn't Lay Up Money.

The real inventor of the locomotive never realized a cent from his invention.

His name was Oliver Evans. He was born in Delaware in 1756 and spent all his life perfecting inventions which were destined to bring him nothing but more poverty. He was the original inventor of the high pressure engine used in locomotives, the only kind that could be employed to advantage in this form of transportation, but realized nothing for his idea.

His application of the notion to both land and water power was somewhat novel.

In 1804 the municipality of Philadelphia called for bids for the dredging of the river and the cleaning of the docks. Evans put in a bid lower than any of his competitors, and when it was accepted determined to build a steamboat to do the work.

He fitted out a scow with a steam engine, building both the engine and the scow in his own workshop.

When the boat was ready to be launched, Evans determined to give the people of Philadelphia an object lesson in mechanics, so he put the boat on wheels, fitted up a push wheel behind, set his engine to work and propelled the boat through the streets to the river in the midst of an open mouthed throng, not a few of whom had a dim idea that he ought to be arrested for witchcraft.

When the boat reached the bank of the river, the wheels and axles were taken off, the craft was launched, fitted out with other wheels and made to do the work of dredging the harbor.

So far as the invention of mechanical devices went, Evans had a splendid genius, but when dollars and cents came up for consideration he was a mere child, and even allowed himself to be cheated out of the money that was due him for cleaning the Philadelphia harbor with his new fangled steamboat.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

AMENDED HER LIST.

She Now Declares That Lawyers Come Under the Head of Nuisances.

A few evenings ago a lawyer living in West Philadelphia was visited at his residence by an indignant woman, who declared that she had come for legal advice, and in a businesslike manner deposited on his table a $5 note as a retaining fee. After pocketing the money the man of law politely requested her to proceed with her statement. She said she was continually afflicted with a series of nuisances which she desired the lawyer to have abolished.

She was annoyed by a neighbor on one side, she said, who is a music teacher and trainer of the voice. The constant thumping on the piano and the discordant notes of the vocal students made her very nervous. On the other side the neighbor kept chickens, which awoke her early in the morning by their crowing and annoyed her during the day by flying over the fence and invading her premises. Day and night she was made nervous by the noise of the trolley cars passing her door, organ grinders and peddlers made her life miserable, hucksters added to her misery by calling their wares, and she wanted to know what action she must take in order to be made free of such nuisances.

The lawyer reflected a few moments with compressed brow, and then said, "Madam, you are decidedly unfortunate, and my advice to you is that you go to a real estate agent and engage him to secure for you a nice comfortable dwelling in the suburbs of some country village, where the nearest neighbor is a quarter of a mile away, organ grinders unknown, trolley cars unheard of, and where hucksters and peddlers do not come." Realizing that she was $5 out, the woman replied, "I'll do as you say and include among the others that no lawyers must exist in the same county."—Philadelphia Record.

Profit In Soda Fountains.

A New Orleans man named May told me that his yearly profits from his soda fountain were $30,000. One Sanders, a Detroiter, who owns an $8,000 fountain, the finest displayed at the World's fair, does a rushing business, and his sales run from $300 to $700 per day the year round. In Buffalo Stodderd Bros. employ 30 girls to handle ice cream soda, and it takes 3,000 glasses to accommodate their trade. They sell it at 5 cents a glass, and there is a net profit of just 100 per cent. In Boston Thompson's Spa, the greatest soda resort at the Hub, easily clears for its owner $50,000 a year. There are in the United States 100,000 fountains in operation, and manufacturers are getting more orders now than they ever got before.—Washington Post.

Begonias For Garden Decoration.

It is now getting to be well understood that many plants that it was thought could only be grown under glass do remarkably well in our climate under summer shade. The begonia is especially suited to this summer work. The writer came across a little piece of rockwork constructed under the shade of some large trees, in which the whole mass of rocks was completely covered with species of begonia. Every night, or nearly every night, water was showered on them through a hose from a hydrant. Nothing could exceed the beauty of this mass.—Meehan's Monthly.

The Mean Thing.

Maude—Do you know Mr. Jinks fainted last night at the dance and would have fallen if I hadn't caught him in my arms?

Ethel (slightly jealous)—Yes; he told me that he'd been suffering from the effects of the grip.—Scribner's.

I must have known life otherwise in epochs long since fled, for in my veins some orient blood is red, and through my thought are lotus blossoms blown.—T. B. Aldrich.

The Sahara is so named from the Arabic word signifying "desert."

QUEER LANGUAGE.

The "Camphor Tongue" of a Wild but Inoffensive Race.

One of the queerest languages in the world, used for the queerest purposes, is the "camphor language" of Johore, a country of the Malay peninsula. It has lately been studied and reported upon by Mr. Lake, an English engineer in the service of the sultan of Johore. This language is called the "Pantang Kapor," or camphor language, and is used by the natives and all others who are engaged in gathering the product of the Malayan camphor tree and only at that time. If they used either of the languages of the region, the Malay or the aboriginal Jakun, the natives believe that they could not obtain any camphor, and for a most curious reason. The camphor tree, Dryoblanops camphora, grows abundantly in certain parts of the peninsula, but only occasionally contains camphor crystals. The camphor is not the same as that obtained from the camphor laurel of Formosa and Japan, which is the source of the ordinary camphor of commerce. It is a sort very highly prized by the Chinese in the embalming of their dead, in incense and in medicine, and the gum brings much more than the common camphor.

The Malayans and other Johore natives believe that each species of tree has a spirit or divinity that presides over its affairs. The spirit of the camphor tree is known by the name of Bisan—literally "a woman." Her resting place is near the trees, and when at night a peculiar noise is heard in the woods, resembling that of a cicada, the Bisan is believed to be singing, and camphor will surely be found in the neighborhood. But the spirit of the camphor tree seems to be jealous of the precious gum and must be propitiated, and if she knows that hunters are in quest of it she will endeavor to turn their steps aside. So it is necessary to speak in a tongue which she does not understand. For this purpose the "camphor language" has been invented. It consists of a mixture of Jakun and Malay words, but these are curiously altered and reversed, and the natives positively believe that the divinity of the camphor tree is completely confused. The Jakuns who hunt the camphor are one of the wildest of people, but inoffensive. They live together with monkeys, dogs, cats, innumerable fowls and perhaps a tame hornbill in perfect harmony under movable leaf shelters built on poles in the woods.—Boston Traveller.

The Invincible Armada.

The invincible armada was a famous naval expedition sent by Philip II of Spain against England in 1588. It consisted of 130 vessels, 2,430 great guns, 4,575 quintals of powder, nearly 20,000 soldiers, above 8,000 sailors and more than 2,000 volunteers. It arrived in the English channel on July 19 and was defeated the next day by Admiral Howard, who was seconded by Drake, Hawkins and Frobisher. Eight fire ships having been sent into the Spanish fleet, they bore off in great disorder. Profiting by the panic, the English fell upon them and captured or destroyed a number of their ships, and Admiral Howard maintained a running fight from July 21 to July 27, with such effect that the Spanish commander, despairing of success, resolved to return home, and as escape through the English channel was prevented by contrary winds he undertook to sail around the Orkneys, but the vessels which still remained to him were dispersed by storms or shipwrecked among the rocks and shallows on different parts of the Scottish and Irish coast, and upward of 5,000 men were drowned, killed or taken prisoners. Of the whole armada 53 ships only returned to Spain, and these in a wretched condition. The English lost but one ship.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Animals That Commit Suicide.

Intelligent observers have testified to facts which appear to show that in certain circumstances the snake, scorpion and even some quadrupeds commit suicide. M. Henry, a clock manufacturer of Longuyon, France, has recently described an experiment of the kind which he made with a wasp. The wasp was imprisoned under a glass, and knowing that benzine asphyxiates insects he put some paper soaked in it beside the captive. The wasp became uncomfortable, then angrily attacked the paper, but finding all its efforts unavailing it finally lay down on its back, and folding up its abdomen planted its sting thrice into its body. M. Henry was so curious to confirm the fact that, in spite of his humane feelings, he repeated the experiment on three wasps with the like result.—London Globe.

The Scholars of France.

As a sample of the payment of distinguished scholars in this country it may be mentioned that M. Gaston Boissier, who was lately elected life secretary of the Academy, only received $600 annually as rector of the College de France. In his new position he is entitled to $1,200, or double the sum paid him as head of the great educational establishment over which Ernest Renan ruled. The immortals, according to the foundation rules, are supposed to be paid $300 yearly, in addition to their fees for attending meetings. As a matter of fact, however, they only receive $200 annually. The remainder of the sum forms a sinking fund, out of which eight aged academicians get allowances, if their private annual income falls short of $1,200.—Paris Letter.

Unjust Fate.

"Here is another one of them plates," said Mr. Dismal Dawson, "in the paper that says he never was so happy as when he was working by the day."

"Well?" ventured Mr. Everett Wrest, with languid interest.

"Well, you say? W'y, it is jist this. Here is a feller that really likes work rollin in more money than he kin count, and here is you and me, that money would do some good. I guess you know where we are at without no furder words."—Cincinnati Tribune.

East Grand Forks Items.

[From The Courier.]

The proprietor of a blind pig at Mayville, N. D., conceived the bright idea of preparing his own decoction for his still, and not being able to discern the difference between poison whiskey and the pure stuff, was the means of starting an epidemic in Mayville. Already four victims have succumbed to the effects of his vile stuff and have died. It is also reported that the fellow himself is past medical aid from the effects of his own preparation, and is lingering between life and death.

Foster, the young man who went wrong in Grand Forks recently by purloining $500 to $600 from his employer, Jeweler Gansl and Druggist Holmes, has turned over security enough to appease the wrath of these two men and has been turned loose upon the world to prey upon others. It is said that wine and women were the direct cause of Foster's downfall. He was a guileless youth when he reached Grand Forks, and falling into fast company in the Forks could not withstand the temptation, but fell by the wayside.

Tuesday afternoon the infant son of C. L. Lasher was left seated in his carriage in front of Graham's on the sidewalk while his nurse looked with longing eyes at Graham's display of new hats and dry goods in the window. The wind was blowing a stiff gale at the time and in its onward sweep caught the baby carriage and blew it toward the gutter. The hind wheels left the sidewalk and the carriage went over spilling out the baby on its head upon a pile of broken brick. Notwithstanding the fact that the little one made a roar no bones were broken.

Crop indications still continue bright, and with no further set-backs the output for 1895 will rival that of 1891.

Wednesday evening C. L. Coulter, of Mallory, left for Denver, Colorado, to join his wife, who has been living there for some months expecting that the change in climate would prove beneficial. Mr. Coulter reports that his wife is still in very poor health.

Fred Brown, of Grand Forks, and Miss Emma Wilson, of this city, were quietly married at Crookston on the Fourth of July. Miss Wilson is a sister of Mrs. Richard Franklin, of the Fourth ward, and something less than a year ago came from Canada.

Next spring the business will be ready to run in fine shape, and it will be a work of great importance to the farmers of the northwest.

The Lemen Bros. great circus arrived at 4 a. m. Saturday morning after the great storm, and after some delays, caused by the storm, pitched their tents. The parade was delayed for two hours by the storm and when it at last got on the way only about one-half of it could come out, and what did come out got a good thorough soaking.

Seldom do we see such extremely hot weather in this northwest as was experienced on Friday, previous to the big storm. One death from heat is reported from Fosston and one from Grand Forks. Every one was fearful that the great heat would result in a hail storm in various sections of the county, but so far we have heard of no serious damage resulting from what little did fall.

Mayor J. R. McKinnon was here, there and everywhere present on the circus grounds on Saturday to see that no skin games nor short changs racket got in their work. To his watchfulness, no doubt, is due the fact that none of these things were in evidence on that day.

J. W. Wheeler sports a fine driving team.

Tom Bjoln went up to Erskine on Tuesday.

C. P. Swanson was in from the town of Bray on Tuesday.

Lawrence Larson went out on the Fosston line on Tuesday.

Miss Carrie Barnes has gone to her home in Charles City, Iowa.

The windows at the new hotel are being washed, getting ready for the opening.

Mrs. W. F. Bugg went over to Grand Forks this week for a brief visit with friends.

Mrs. M. E. Bartlett has so far recovered from her illness as to be able to be around a little.

Winnipeg bicyclists got away with 1st and 2d prizes at East Grand Forks last week and Z. Farley 3d.

Farmers who have not secured twine will do well to see about it at once as the supply seems to be limited.

L. B. Elwood was up from Minneapolis last week looking after the farming operations on the big Corser farm.

Mr. Shattuck, wheat buyer at McIntosh, came in on Tuesday's flyer en route to Euclid for a visit in the family of H. C. Misner.

E. E. Lobbeck will deliver a temperance lecture in the Norwegian language in Minerva hall on Saturday evening next.

The Grand Army boys should take note that the regular meeting of last Friday was postponed till to-morrow evening. Everybody come.

A number of hoboes keep the police reasonably active in these days. Chief Creamer tackled a big one Monday night and after a little the big un layed down and that bothered Frank a good bit; he could neither drag nor roll his prisoner, At last he happened to think of getting a stone-boat to haul him in on and that made the big hobo weaken.

Schmidt & Lean, the city painters and paper-hangers are still on deck for everything in their line. Some of the neatest jobs of paper-hanging in the city are samples of their work and their rates for doing that kind of work are cheaper than to try to do it yourself——and very much more satisfactory. All who require any work in their line would do well to call and examine their stock and get prices. Now is the best time.

Two of Louis Gonyea's little boys were thrown from a horse near the Cleveland house on Monday and strange to say aside from a few bruises were unhurt. Louis says the accident would not have occurred had not a man struck the horse with a whip just after helping the last boy to mount and a blow always makes the horse frantic, and she dashed off at a mad pace. The boys hung on all right for a time but were unable to control the horse. It is strange how little judgment some men seem to possess.

NOTICE OF FINAL PROOF.

Land Office, Crookston, Minn, May 22, 1895

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minn., on July 19, 1895. viz:

THOSTEN L. TOMMSEN,

Hd. 13368, for the Ne of Ne, Sec. 17, Tp. 148, R. 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Julius Albertsen, Albert Olson, Ole Albertson and Ole M. Bjerke, all of Woodside, Polk county, Minn.

Any person who desires to protest against the allowance of such proof, or who knows of any substantial reason, under the law and the regulations of the Interior Department, why such proof should not be allowed, will be given an opportunity at the above mentioned time and place to cross-examine the witnesses of said claimant, and to offer evidence in rebuttal of that submitted by claimant.

CAR FAMINE COMING.

Railroads Will Be Unable to Move the New Crop.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., July 9.—Superintendent Jenks of the Great Northern is urging upon the farmers the necessity of building extra grainhouses in which to store the grain this fall until the roads are able to move it. From present indications, unless this is done, the waste and loss will be great, as all railroad people affirm that the most perfect and fastest system of any road would find itself taxed far beyond its capacity to be anywhere near prompt in moving the crop. Farmers are grasping the idea gradually and will commence the erection of houses, good, permanent structures, to house their wheat until the demand for cars grows lighter.

The North Dakota farmer will undoubtedly dispose of his grain as rapidly as possible this year, as it is the ready cash to settle his obligations which he has been in need of for some time. This will create a car famine unprecedented in the history of the Northwest, and it is in preparation for this that the railroads are giving the farmer the pointer to make arrangements for storing his crop.

COURT ERRED IN ITS DECISION.

District Attorney's Opinion of the Stanford Case.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Attorney General Harmon received a letter from Special Attorney McKissick at San Francisco transmitting a copy of the recent decision of Judge Rose in the suit of the government to recover about $15,000,000 from the Stanford estate. Mr. McKissick is of the opinion that the court erred in the decision and states the reasons for his belief. He says that if he is not instructed to the contrary he will take an appeal to the United States court of appeals for the Pacific coast circuit. Although the attorney general has not yet given any specific instruction there is no reason to doubt that he will direct that the appeal be taken.

NO HUDSON BAY ROUTE.

Dominion Parliament Will Not Vote the Needed Cash.

WINNIPEG, July 9.—Acting Mayor Jamieson has received a message from Premier Bowell stating that the government decision to abandon the proposed loan of $2,500,000 to the Hudson's Bay railway was actuated by the stern necessities of circumstances. Not a dollar has been voted by parliament this session for public works in any part of the country, and exception couldn't be made in this case. The telegram from Premier Bowell will certainly be the means of stopping operations on the road, which commenced with great flourish some weeks ago. Manitobans must therefore wait for a Northern outlet until necessity for it is apparent to capitalists.

MANY VILLAGES IN PERIL.

Mounts Etna and Vesuvius in a State of Violent Eruption.

NAPLES, July 8.—The crater of Mount Etna is again pouring forth fire, smoke and lava. Mount Vesuvius is also in a state of eruption and is reported to be in worse condition than Etna. The town of Resina, in South Italy, built over the ruins of Herculaneum, is threatened. Villages in the vicinity of both volcanoes are believed to be in danger.

Permanent Treaty of Arbitration.

PARIS, July 9.—The chamber of deputies adopted a motion to the effect that the government negotiate as soon as possible with the United States, for the conclusion of a permanent treaty of arbitration.

TEXAS HOOPSNAKES.

THEY HAVE HOOKS AND HOLES IN THEIR LIPS AND LIKE FUN.

With a Fine Sense of Humor They Play Jokes on Tenderfeet and Women—Gophers and Bullsnakes Create Lively Situations For the Hoopers.

"The hoopsnake of Texas is as interesting a reptile as you can find anywhere," said a former resident of the Lone Star State. "It is unlike any hoopsnake I ever saw in the east and a good deal livelier. Under its lower jaw there is a lip, with a hole in it, and on the end of its tail there is a hornlike hook that curves upward. Whenever the snake takes a notion to roll, it throws its tail over its snout, hooks into the lip, and goes spinning away over the grass as merrily as you please.

"The snake can get over the ground pretty fast by crawling, but it seems to take great pleasure in rolling. The under part of its body is bright red, and you can see the snake quite a distance when it's rolling. Some say the horn is hollow and capable of ejecting poison, but I don't know how true that is. People who are ignorant of how the Texas hoopsnake is built are simply amazed when they happen to see one change from a crawl to a roll. They can't make out how it is possible for the snake to put its ends together and roll away at such speed unless it sticks its tail into its mouth. You will often run across a hoopsnake that is crawling along leisurely, when all at once it will throw its tail forward and go zipping off at a speed, you imagine, that makes its head swim. But its head is always level, no matter how fast it rolls or how far.

"I've seen many a man and boy amusingly taken in by hoopsnakes out there. Every newcomer desires to possess a specimen, and they get it into their heads that it is as easy as lying to catch one. The tenderfoot thinks he can capture a hoopsnake by poking a pole or stick through the circle made by its body. He gets fooled, however, for the cunning snake instantly unhooks its tail, thus ridding itself of the stick or pole, runs along on its belly for a short distance and then hooks into the lip again and resumes its frolic with perfect freedom. The hoopsnake has a fine sense of humor, I reckon, for it takes delight in scaring women and tenderfeet by rolling right up to them and dodging away when they scream or jump. They tell a story out there of a man who ran the handle of a rake through a hoopsnake's circle and unhooked it. The snake got mad, struck at the man and hit the trunk of a mesquite bush with its horn. It sped away then, and the man found the print of its horn in the bark. He examined the bush often, and he took his oath that it died in less than 90 days.

"I once saw a hoopsnake hanging to one of the hind feet of a gopher. The gopher kicked and squealed and pulled, and the snake kept tapping it on the head and back with its horn. The snake couldn't have swallowed the gopher, and it tormented the little thing out of pure deviltry. Its aim with the hook was unerring, and it acted as if it was tickled all over every time the gopher squealed. The hoopsnake's fun came to an end very suddenly the moment another gopher appeared. The second gopher took in the situation at a glance, and it immediately hopped upon the snake and bit it in the back of the neck. The snake let go of the foot mighty quick, and all the lively writhings imaginable that snake performed in the next eight or ten minutes. It thrashed the grass flat in a space five feet in diameter, and I never saw a creature hate to die as that snake did. It finally stretched out motionless, and I cut off its horn, which had no hollow in it. The wounded gopher was squealing in some brush, and its rescuer was trying hard to coax it into a hole, but it had been done for by the snake, and it died in a little while.

"How it does make a toad's eyes hang out when a hoopsnake gets after it! The toad knows that it's a goner, and it begins to hop and peep and squeal with terror before the snake has touched it. The snake is in no hurry, for it knows very well that the toad can't get out of its sight, and it takes downright comfort in hearing the toad wail. It crawls behind the toad, and when it gets good and ready it throws its tail forward and gives the toad a smart thump between the eyes with the point of the horn. The toad backs up a few inches, and the snake seizes it by a hind foot. Then the toad kicks with its free hind foot and claws the grass with its front feet, keeping up a piteous squealing all the time. The snake lets it kick and claw for a spell, but by and by knocks the toad on the head till it stops kicking and swallows it.

"While a hoopsnake was handling a toad in that way one spring I saw a bullsnake interfere. The bullsnake of Texas is a big headed reptile about 8 feet long. Its body tapers all the way like a cone, and it has two curved teeth in the upper jaw and is nonpoisonous. The hoopsnake had the toad by a hind foot, and of course the toad was making all the noise it knew how to. Suddenly a bullsnake glided out of the bush and struck at the hoopsnake's middle with its upper jaw. The hoopsnake instantly released the toad, faced the bullsnake and hit it on the neck with its horn. The blow didn't phase the bullsnake a particle. It returned the attack with a sidewinder that knocked the hoopsnake out of the path. The latter must have been very much astonished, for, instead of sailing into the big fellow again, it cleared out at once, and the bullsnake seized the toad right away and started to swallow it."—New York Sun.

THE SPANS OF LIFE.

DIFFERENCES OF DURATION IN MEN AND ANIMALS.

One of the Shortest Is that of the May Fly and One of the Longest the Elephant's—Among Insects the Period of Adult Life Varies Greatly.

An essay of Weismann, charming and profound and written before the obsession of a logical theory had carried him into arid metaphysics, discussed the duration of life in men and animals. To many, perhaps to most, living things, death comes unexpectedly, with an ironical indifference to the period of the animal's life or to its business of the moment. The man may be preparing to be merry; the bird may be a-building, the butterfly not yet dry from the chrysalis, when they are fallen upon by blind mischance, by enemies intent only on dinner or by unthinking microbes. Confronted by such extrinsic accidents, men cry out after their kind, the poet attuning an ineffectual lamentation, the moralist preaching, the pagan urging to the day of pleasure, but the naturalist must be dumb. His opportunity comes with the animals that avoid or escape colliding fates, and that yet after a fixed period run down like a clock. The seeds of death apparently have been lying inert in the body and come to fatal maturity after a lapse of time that varies little among individuals of the same species, but that is widely different among different kinds of animals.

Threescore and ten is the natural period of man's life. The elephant will live 200 years, the horse but half a century. Singing birds and fowls and pheasants will live for nearly 20 years, but parrots, eagles, falcons and swans are known to survive their century. Some live through nearly two centuries. Queen ants and working ants may live for years. Sir John Lubbock kept a queen ant alive for 13 years, during all which period she continued to lay fertile eggs, but the males live only a few days. Queen bees live two or three years; workers and drones a few months, although indeed in one sense the death of the latter is unnatural, as the workers drive them away from the stores of food, so that they perish of starvation. Among insects generally the period of adult life varies greatly. Many, like the May flies, dance in the sun only for a few hours; the sexes meet, the eggs are deposited and the creatures die before nightfall. Many butterflies and moths are unprovided with feeding organs and live only a few hours, others for many days.

Leaving out of count certain minor factors, like the time required for growing to a larger size and the slower growth of animals that must waste time and energy in capturing living food, it is certain that there is an intimate connection all through the animal kingdom between the duration of life and the reproductive habits. Animals, in one sense, are like the bright and fragrant flowers of plants; since when their function is accomplished, when seeds are formed, they wither and perish. The business of the animal seems to be, not to live its own life, but to reproduce its own kind, and the term of life at its disposal is adjusted accurately to the special difficulties of this purpose. Weismann and Alfred Russel Wallace suggest that death comes as soon as possible after the due number of successors has been produced, in order that each species may always be represented by a full tale of young and vigorous individuals. Natural selection acts like a contractor who has undertaken to keep a window box gay with fresh blossoms; each plant must be removed almost before its flowers fade.

But our present concern is with the fact rather than with explanation of the fact. Taking the needs of reproduction as a master key, we find it unlocking the secrets of inequalities of life. The May flies live only a few hours, but their eggs are produced abundantly and have only to be dropped into pools from which their parents, leaving their chrysalis, sprang into the sunny air. The short lived moths and butterflies similarly are untroubled by family cares. When the eggs have to be deposited on common and abundant food plants the females need and possess few hours in which to accomplish their easy task. The males, on the other hand, have to fly about seeking and sometimes fighting for possession of the females, and to them a longer life is allotted. Butterflies and moths that live for more than a few days are those whose caterpillars require a rarer food plant, a more carefully chosen nursery and feeding ground. The females have to fly about seeking convenient spots for their offspring, and the eggs, instead of ripening and being deposited simultaneously, are laid from day to day until the full tale be accomplished. In many tribes of bees the males play their part but once, and that during the nuptial flight of the queen. Immediately afterward they die or shortly after are killed by the workers. The queens, secluded in the middle of the hive, produce crops of workers year after year, and so their lives are prolonged.

Among the birds and beasts parental cares have brought length of days with them. The small singing birds are rapid breeders, sometimes producing five or six nestlings twice a year, but their enemies are equally numerous, and despite the constant attention of the male and female play such havoc with the young that hardly in 20 years will a pair rear up young enough to maintain the species. Birds like pheasants and fowls are still more prolific, but old and young like are preyed upon by a multitude of enemies. The birds of prey are slow breeders. Their active flight makes it impossible that the females should carry with them a burden of developing eggs, and in their long lives they leave behind them no more progeny than quicker breeding, shorter lived creatures.—Saturday Review.

CONSUMPTION.

are of the Patient, That His Suffering May Be Lessened.

The successful treatment of consump- on—and by this is meant making the ufferer better able to bear his burden, if ot actually lifting it from his shoul- ers—is largely a question of nursing. : the disease has already gained a foot- old medicine in most instances is of no vail except in postponing the evil day, ad even if it were otherwise a few eneral rules would be just as essential insure the comfort of the patient hile recovery is going on.

In the first place, then, we must un- erstand exactly the condition of the onsumptive, not so much by ascertain- ng the location and extent of his disease s by familiarizing ourselves with his emperament, his likes and dislikes, and, bove all, with his power of endurance ad resistance.

If we will bear these things in mind e may be able to do all that is possible r the sick one—namely, to enable him withstand the onslaught of the dis- ase until nature shall gain the control- ng hand. So successful is this method f treatment that it often results in a omplete or at least a temporary cure.

Consumption is one of the most de- italizing of diseases. Not only does it ttack the lungs, but the action of the ervous system is sooner or later seri- usly interfered with, the digestion im- aired, and the simplest form of excite- ent renders even the circulation of the lood dangerous from being overactive.

We shall come nearest to striking at e root of all these troubles if we direct ar energies toward limiting the fre- ency and severity of the cough, and in is we have not only to follow the ad- ice of the physician, taking care that is directions are exactly carried out, ut we must give careful attention to ursing.

To prevent the first paroxysm of cough- ng, which is usually incited in the orning by the exertion of rising, a arm cup of tea or an eggnog should be ken before the patient leaves the bed.

A glass of something warm, like hot ilk or gruel, should also be taken be- re retiring, and plenty of time should e allowed in preparing for the bed. he patient should sleep in blankets, ad a glass of warm drink should be laced within reach in case he should ake through the night.

If the presence of food in the stomach auses the reappearance of the cough fter meals, some suitable preparation f pepsin should be used to hasten the igestion, and an hour or two's rest hould be taken immediately after the eal.—Youth's Companion.

AN AVENUE OF IDOLS.

Double Row of Japanese Buddhas Which Cannot Be Counted.

Close to this interesting pool is the venue of images, representing the mida Buddha. The idols vary in size, ut are similar in design. There are sev- ral hundred of them altogether, and ey sit facing one another in two long ows. We asked the little Jap who rought us to the place how many of em there were. In an awed whisper e replied, "Nobody knows." Then he old us how impossible it was to count em. Each image was made unsightly y having numbers of little bits of paper uck on to it and chewed bits of paper hich had been spat at it. The object of is disfiguration we failed to discover, ough our friend Hojo informed us they ere put on by the young priests, a part f whose novitiate it was to attempt to ount the Buddhas.

There is evidently something wrong ith these idols, for no one has ever een able to reckon them up the same wice over, in spite of sticking a piece f paper to tick each one off. Of course wo unsuperstitious Englishmen were ot to be humbugged by native stories, M. (my traveling companion) and I, inking the whole thing ridiculous, de- ided to count the mysterious images. e started on co-operative lines, each aking a side of the avenue. Our efforts, owever, were fruitless, for we had not umbered off more than a dozen each, efore M. (whose eyes were not so good they had once been) shouted across to e: "I say, I saw one of them on your de moving. I'm certain I did. They're ncanny. Let's give it up." This inter- uption of course upset all my calcula- ions, but we soon came on the moving mage, which turned out to be nothing ore than one of the old Frenchmen, ated peacefully among the statues and ooking in his white clothes for all the orld like a jolly, fat, old Buddha.— entleman's Magazine.

4,000 Miles With a Wheelbarrow.

In 1878 Lyman Potter of New York ate performed the prodigious task of ushing a common "paddy" wheelbar- ow across the continent. He started om his home on Dane street, Albany, n the morning of April 10, 1878, and rrived in San Francisco on the after- oon of Oct. 5 of the same year, being lmost exactly 178 days (five hours and ree minutes over) in performing the earisome feat. Potter was a shoe- aker, and the trip was the result of a ager made by some friends who be- eved that such a trip would occupy at east 200 days. The wager was $1,000, ut Potter made between three and five mes that sum advertising for different arties along the route. The wheelbar- ow was made specially for the use to hich it was put and weighed but 75 ounds. The distance traveled by Pot- r was exactly 4,085¾ miles.—St. ouis Republic.

AS THE ROMANS SAW IT.

A Classic Performance In the Old Theater at Orange.

Of scenery, in the ordinary sense of the word, there was none at all. What we saw was the real thing. In the opening scene of "Œdipus," the king, coming forward through the royal portal and across the raised platform in the rear of the stage, did literally "enter from the palace" and did "descend the palace steps" to the "public place" where Creon and the priests awaited him. It was a direct reversal of the ordinary effect in the ordinary theater, where the play loses in realism because a current of necessarily appreciated but purposely rejected antagonistic fact underruns the conventional illusion and compels us to perceive that the palace is but painted canvas, and even on the largest stage only four or five times as high as the prince. The palace at Orange, towering up as though it would touch the very heavens and obviously of veritable stone, was a most peremptory reality.

The fortuitous accessory of the trees growing close beside the stage added to the outdoor effect still another very vivid touch of realism, and this was heightened by the swaying of the branches, and by the gracious motion of the draperies, under the fitful pressure of the strong gusts of wind. Indeed the mistral took a very telling part in the performance. Players less perfect in their art would have been disconcerted by it, but these of the Comedie Francaise were quick to perceive and to utilize its artistic possibilities. In the very midst of the solemn denunciation of Œdipus by Tiresias, the long white beard of the blind prophet suddenly was blown upward so that his face was hidden and his utterance choked by it, and the momentary pause, while he raised his hand slowly, and calmly freed his face from this chance covering, made a dramatic break in his discourse, and added to it a naturalness which vividly intensified its solemn import. In like manner the final entry of Œdipus, coming from the palace after blinding himself, was made thrillingly real. For a moment, as he came upon the stage, the horror which he had wrought upon himself—his ghastly eyesockets, his blood stained face—was visible, and then a gust of wind lifted his mantle and flung it about his head so that all was concealed, and an exquisite pity for him was aroused—while he struggled painfully to rid himself of the incumbrance—by the imposition of this petty annoyance upon his mortal agony of body and of soul.—"The Comedie Francaise at Orange," by Thomas A. Janvier, in Century.

SEVEN HANDED EUCHRE.

Definite Points Given That Will Enable One to Play the Game.

For pleasure, pure and simple, seven handed euchre clubs may be cited as models. The game is played with a full pack of cards, and the joker is used. Seven cards are dealt to each player, giving first three and then four and leaving four on the table. This quartet is dubbed "the widow."

The player on the left of the dealer makes the first bid of 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 or 7 tricks, naming the suit, the highest bid getting it. The bidding is done in turn. The person who secures the bid then selects three other players—partners—thus pitting four against three. If the bidder wins, he and his partners each count the amount bid. If he fails, he is euchred, and the three opponents count each the amount bid. While one can play a quiet, steady game, taking no risks, and holding high cards or the joker play for a euchre, the spirit of extreme feminine politeness engendered by this fad of the hour requires that a person holding the joker should bid the limit, seven, thereby always introducing an element of chance in the contest and giving each one more show.

Prizes are played for. A certain number of points gained can be the limit or a given period of time as agreed upon. The one holding the highest number of points at the decisive moment wins.—Philadelphia Press.

Housekeeping at Samoa.

Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson says that housekeeping in Samoa was not so idylic as it might seem. Her supplies came from New Zealand or Australia once a month, so that if she wanted a bottle of bluing or a bag of flour, for instance, she had to send half across the Pacific to get it. The native diet was all well enough for a few weeks, but as it consisted almost solely of fruit and fish it began to pall on European palates. Housekeeping in this South Sea paradise (of romances) had other drawbacks, particularly in the matter of expense, which was fully six or seven times as great, Mrs. Stevenson says, as living on a corresponding scale in San Francisco. As for society, "there's more of it to the square inch in Samoa than in any other place I know," says Mrs. Stevenson, but it appears to be largely of the living picture kind.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 2 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 69 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

TWO ENTERTAINMENTS.

One Performance on the Stage, the Other In the Audience.

I attended a recent performance given by some amateur actors and actresses—very good they were, too—and while I enjoyed the stage entertainment I was not unmindful of the one that was in progress directly behind me.

It was furnished by an old lady and two young ones—when I say "young ones" I don't mean children—and its beginning antedated the overture in this style:

"Can you read the programme, mother?"

"Why, yes; but it must be wrong. Here's Annie's name down, and it says she's a servant. I thought you said she was an actress."

"Only a servant in the play, mother."

"But that seems a kind of mean thing to play. She doesn't have to do that, goodness knows!"

"She has to play whatever they give her to play. She's a beginner, you know."

"Well, I wouldn't begin that way."

"Annie" appeared presently.

She said, "Yes, my lady," and "No, your lordship," and "I will tell her ladyship that you are here," and a few more stunners of that sort very well, I thought.

But when the French count with the pointed beard chucks her under the chin I could hear the old lady behind me getting into a fine rage.

"Well, the idea of our Annie letting a man do a thing like that!"

"But, mother, that's in the play."

"I don't care if it is. I suppose he'll kiss her later on! The idea!"

Well, he did kiss her shortly after and got a good slap in the face for his pains.

The old lady almost rose in her seat.

"Good, good!" she cried in a very audible voice.

"I thought Annie wouldn't stand anything of that sort!"

She objected to the young girl's little love affairs with the footman, however, and could hardly be kept in her chair when the two plighted their troth.

"I don't call that play acting," she said. "They were just like two servants, and I don't like it."

When the curtain dropped, they all went around to the stage door, and somehow I felt sorry for Annie, coming from the stage full of hot enthusiasm, only to receive—mentally at least—a bucket of cold water.—Polly Pry in New York Recorder.

THE SICKROOM NURSE.

Her Duties, Her Authority and Her Powers For Evil or Good.

No person has greater power for evil or for good than has the nurse in the sickroom. Her actual authority is second to that of the physician, but her opportunities for exercising it are almost unlimited. If a physician in a country town wishes to secure a trained nurse, he should telegraph or write to the nurses' directory, to some hospital or physician whom he knows, in the nearest adjacent city, stating for what sort of a case he will require a nurse, what he will pay and when he will require her. Such a message should secure for him almost immediately whatever service he requires.

The traits of character which make the ideal nurse are patience, obedience, tact and good sense and temper. The nurse's costume should consist of a cambric or seersucker gown, with white cap, cuffs and apron. Woolen gowns should never be permitted in a sickroom. Her authority is absolute after the physician's. She must obey his instructions to the letter, even if they are against her judgment. She has no discretion in the matter.

But the patient and the patient's family must obey her. She must never be allowed to disobey the physician's orders, and the first symptom of any such behavior should be reported immediately to the physician. All his instructions with reference to treatment, diet and care should be followed faithfully. The fact that her patient is a man should make no difference in her behavior in the sickroom. He is a patient, not a man, and she a nurse, not a woman. Whenever a nurse disobeys a physician's orders or behaves in any manner which renders her dismissal advisable, the family or the patient should request the doctor to discharge her at once and to supply her substitute. A word from him is sufficient to insure her departure.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Private Electric Motors.

A well known electrical authority has pointed out that it is now as easy and cheap to have an electric elevator in a private house as in a large office building. Stairs are literally a barbarism, to which women frequently owe ill health, and to which many delicate persons may attribute the deprivation of the full enjoyment of their homes. The cost of operating an electric elevator in, say, a five story house, making 50 or 60 trips every day, will not exceed $3 or $4 per month. The devices for operating these elevators have been so improved that an invalid or a child can manage them. The old lever arrangement can be dispensed with, and the elevator ascends or descends on the pressure of a button. It will stop only at each floor and will start only when the elevator door is closed.—New York Times.

Force of Habit.

The genial captain of a steamer plying on one of our American rivers was appointed a vestryman in an Episcopal church in a city which lay at one end of his route.

One day shortly afterward it was reported to him, when on shore, that there was a leak in the church. He was accustomed to promptness, and on receipt of the message he went to the church, took a candle and started down into the cellar to find the leak, evidently thinking of the basement as the hull of the good ship Zion.

The captain himself tells the story with much apparent enjoyment of its humor.—Youth's Companion.

NO NEED TO STUTTER.

THERE IS A SWIFT AND EASY CURE, WITH LASTING RESULTS.

A Leading Specialist Says the Sufferer Can Cure Himself—The Way Is to Take a Long Breath Before Each Vowel, Open the Mouth Wide and Speak.

Stammering and stuttering are now permanently cured in New York by a simple method. These afflictions differ but slightly. In one case there is inability to pronounce certain words; in the other, certain sounds. Neither, according to a New York professor, who is a graduate of a German college for the vocal organs, is a disease, but both are habits that will disappear under proper treatment.

The inability to talk plainly or to articulate except with great effort, when due to organic trouble or malformation, does not come under the head of stammering and is not within the scope of the stuttering specialist.

"The whole thing is very simple," said the professor, "so simple that you will smile when I tell you that the sole and only cause of stuttering and stammering is careless respiration. People who suffer from the impediment have only to pause, take in a long breath, and then, opening the mouth in the manner laid down in the charts used by elocutionists, pronounce the word sharply. Have you never noticed the remarkable fact that people who are inveterate stammerers are often accomplished vocalists? That is because in the act of singing respiration is done in a proper way.

"A novel fact is that the troubles of stammerers or stutterers lie entirely with the vowel sounds. Patients do not seem to understand this. In describing their cases they will tell me that they have difficulty in sounding 'p' or 'd.' That is where they are wrong. They sound the consonant all right, but stagger at the vowel. A patient comes to me, and I say to him, say 'pspa.' He will commence p-p-p-p-p, oh, professor, I c-c-c-c-c-an't say p-p-p-p-papa.'

"It is at once apparent that this trouble lies with the vowel 'a.' Then the treatment commences. Standing before him, I suggest that he take a long breath through the partially closed mouth until the lungs are well filled, and then, at the moment of exhalation, following my direction, he opens the mouth in the proper manner, as indicated by a chart, and pronounces with me in a high, mechanical voice, 'pawpaw.' This is often repeated, the vowels being changed.

"From words we pass on to sentences and so on to introduce in close connection all the vowel sounds. The respiration before each vowel sound is necessary. The treatment therefore consists in forming this habit. As the patient pupil progresses the length of this respiration is reduced, the pronunciation is made in a lower pitch and in a few weeks, rarely over five, the most inveterate stutterer can talk fluently and rapidly with no sign of his former affliction. But eternal vigilance is necessary.

"Should the apparently cured patient become careless and forget the necessity of respiration as taught him, he may relapse into his former state, and then his training must be done all over again. A boy 16 years of age was once brought to me. His was a stubborn case, but in six weeks I had him talking all right. Time passed on for two years. I frequently saw the boy at his father's house and was delighted with the cure. Last summer he came to my institute. He was as bad off as when I first met him.

"It seems that his father had sent him on a short business trip to Europe, away from the restraining influence of the father, whose ears were always alert for any return of his son's affliction, and much disturbed, as he explained to me, by the noise of the vessel's machinery, he became careless, and having once relapsed he became worse every day, and was really forced to shorten his stay abroad and return to New York for treatment.

"He was a bright lad, who readily applied himself to my rules, and in a week he was all right again. As a matter of fact, he need not to have come back to me, but could have applied his old lessons with success.

"The German government has long recognized the importance of rational treatment of vocal impediments, and school children afflicted in this manner are put through a regular course by graduates of the college at Frankfort, where this specialty is taught in the government employ. The German treatment is that of elementary training in elocution."

The habit of imperfect respiration is generally found in connection with some diseases of childhood like the measles, but a most frequent cause is unconscious imitation. One stuttering child in a family will set all the others to struggling with the vowel sounds. An adult in conversation with a stutterer finds it difficult to speak without stammering.—New York Herald.

In Trouble.

"You see," said the lean man with the yellow vest, "it was dark when I got home, and the girl met me in the hall, and I saluted her quite affectionately. Then my wife got mad."

"I reckon," said the fat man.

"I explained that I had mistaken the girl for her, which was a fact. Then the girl got mad, and now I am roaming around trying to find another girl."—Indianapolis Journal.

Miss Mary M. Haskell.

Miss Mary M. Haskell of Minneapolis has just been appointed census taker for Cass county, Minn. The population of the county is widely scattered, and the trip will have to be made on horseback. Much of it is an unbroken wilderness, and there are many Indians in the county, some of whom will have to be enumerated. The undertaking is a formidable one, and very few women would be willing to attempt it.

PRESIDENT HILL SPEAKS.

Nothing to Do With Northern Pacific Reorganization—No Row With Adams.

St. Paul, July 9.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, has arrived in St. Paul from New York. He said in speaking of the recent dispatches from New York regarding the reorganization of the Northern Pacific:

"It must be patent to every one that we cannot afford to do anything antagonistic to the law. The company is a creation of the law and we depend on the law for protection. It is scarcely necessary for me to utter assurances that nothing will be done to violate it. There was a question that grew out of unfamiliarity on the part of some New York people, but nothing that could constitute an obstacle of any seriousness in the way of carrying out the agreement made in London.

"That agreement contemplates reorganization of the Northern Pacific by its own security holders and its operation by its own officers. As I have repeatedly stated to you, the plan does not in the remotest sense contemplate consolidation of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

"So far as the statement is concerned that there is open war between Mr. Adams and myself on this matter, it is the rankest nonsense. That I am attempting to manage the reorganization is also untrue. I have nothing whatever to do with it, for that must be done by the Northern Pacific security holders. There is no disposition on my part or on that of any one connected with the Great Northern to undertake this work. Our connection with the plan covering the future of the Northern Pacific, begins when reorganization is complete."

ANOTHER GIRL.

President's Family Increased by a New Arrival at Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 8.—Just before 5 p. m. news reached the village that a girl baby had been born at Gray Gables. This report was soon verified by Dr. Bryant, who announced that the happy event occurred at 4:30 p. m., and that both mother and little one were doing as well as could be expected.

This is the third child to be born into the president's family, and all of them are girls. Ruth is 4 years old and Esther 2. Only a passing glance could be obtained of the president during the afternoon, but that was sufficient to note an expression of satisfaction on the face of the chief executive, although it was an open secret that a boy would not have been unwelcome.

JUDGE ORTON DEAD.

Wisconsin's Chief Justice Dies Suddenly at Madison.

Madison, Wis., July 6.—Chief Justice Harlow S. Orton died during the evening of heart failure due to kidney troubles and other complications. His end was very sudden. He had been well up to within an hour of the time he died. He was a native of New York, born in 1817, and became justice of the Wisconsin supreme court in 1878. Associate Justice John B. Cassidy succeeds to the chief justiceship.

FITZSIMMONS NOT GUILTY.

Jury Frees Him of the Charge of Killing Con Riordan.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 6.—At 8:15 p. m. the jury in the case of the People against Robert Fitzsimmons returned a verdict of not guilty, after having been out nearly four hours. The announcement by the foreman of the jury was greeted by rousing cheers, and the gavel of Judge Ross was powerless to quiet the enthusiasm.

SEVERE ENGAGEMENT.

Nearly Three Hundred Insurgents Reported Killed in Battle.

Havana, July 9.—A severe engagement has taken place between the Spanish troops under command of Major Asenar and General Antonio Maceo, the insurgent leader, at the head of a large force. Two hundred and eighty of the latter were killed.

CORNELL WON EASILY.

Wind Favored the American Crew in the Great Boat Race.

Henley, July 9.—Cornell and Leander started promptly at 3 p. m. The wind continued blowing strongly in favor of the Cornell crew, which had the Bucks side of the river. Cornell eventually won easily, Leander not finishing the race.

New York Saloons Closed.

New York, July 8.—The saloons were closed Sunday and the excise law was enforced entirely, according to the police. This was not, however, strictly true. A stranger in New York might travel the whole city over without being able to quench his thirst, but the man who knew the bartender or the saloonkeeper had no reason to thirst.

Pullman Advances Wages.

Chicago, July 8.—The Pullman Palace Car company has advanced the wages of the employes at the Pullman shops 10 per cent, the advance affecting about 4,000 people. No formal announcement has been made by the company of its action, as the advance has been gradual, taking effect in various departments at different times during the last two weeks.

According to the present outlook for heavy crops and an early harvest, there is every prospect that there will be a binding twine famine before the season is over. Many implement houses are now far behind in their orders, and say they cannot see enough of the product in sight to supply the deficiency.

"Bigfoot" Sherman and his partner, Stacy, who were arrested in Minneapolis several days ago as suspicious characters, have been taken to Melrose to answer to a charge of burglary which stands against them there. It is also alleged that they are wanted in St. Cloud and Sleepy Eye for similar offenses.

During the month of June iron ore shipments from Duluth amounted to 220,500 tons and those from Two Harbors to 265,390, the record for the same month in other years being broken in both cases. Lumber shipments from Duluth were only a little over 17,000,000 feet. The coal receipts were very light, amounting to only 33,225 tons.

The game and fish commission will meet at the state capitol on July 25, at which time it is expected the matter of investigating the accounts of W. P. Andrus, ex-commissioner, will be undertaken. It is said that W. S. Timberlake, one of the commission, has Andrus' books, but for some reason he has not deposited them in the office of the commission.

Inspector George W. Libbey of the state bureau of labor has reported to Commissioner Powers on the condition of the bakeries in the Twin Cities. The legislature last winter passed a law requiring breadmakers to use a certain amount of cleanliness in their calling. The inspector finds but very few of the bakeries complying with the law and recommends changes in nearly all. The report covers 88 typewritten pages.

SUBMITTED TO THE COURT.

Testimony and Arguments in the Steenerson Rate Case Ended.

St. Paul, July 8.—The noted Steenerson rate case has been finished as far as the testimony of witnesses and the arguments of attorneys is concerned. When Mr. Kellogg, the counsel of the Northern Pacific road, finished his arguments at noon, Judge Kerr took the matter under advisement. His decision will be handed down in a short time. Mr. Kellogg maintained that prior to the agitation which resulted in the granger suits and the granger decisions of the supreme court of the United States known as the rate case, the power of the legislature to adjudicate charges was denied. But no court ever decided that the legislature had absolute power to fix rates, only power to regulate rates and make them reasonable.

WHAT A GOOD KNIFE COSTS.

More Men Spend $3 For a Pocketknife Than Less That Amount.

"More men pay $3 and upward for a pocketknife than less. That may not be the experience of all cutlery dealers, but that's the kind of trade we cater to," said a knife expert from behind the counter of a store on one of the most frequented of down town streets. "Spaniards spend the most money for knives," he continued. "Spaniards who come here are very fastidious in the matter of cutlery anyway. Where an American family in the same circumstances will be content with the ordinary plated tableware, costing $4 or $4.50 a dozen, a Spaniard will have nothing but the finest steel with ivory handles, at $18 and over. The average business man spends usually about $3 for a four bladed knife. If he loses a knife often, as many men do, he comes down to $2, then to $1. Most expensive knives are bought for presents. Four dollars buys an excellent gift. Last season many knives were given for prizes at euchre parties. Such knives were usually the fancy ones, with half a dozen blades or attachments. That big 7 inch knife there is a hunter's knife. It costs $4.

"A man who buys that will take it to the Adirondacks, and when he leaves there present it to his guide. We have one customer who buys three of those knives every year. He gives them to his guides, he says. We sell nearly 150 of them every year. This heavy one here with a big steel hook is a horseman's knife. It costs $7. The hook is used for digging out a stone from the horse's hoof. It has, as you see, other attachments, such as corkscrew, screwdriver, nut cracker, awl, gimlet and a score of things for other useful or useless purposes, according to the point of view. We sell many of them, probably more than any other one kind. Sailors usually buy pretty good knives. They and Italians go in for big, sharp knives that should be handy in case of defense. Pretty nearly every trade has a peculiar knife. That's one reason why a well equipped cutlery shop makes such a formidable display. Knives cost all the way from 50 cents to $25. We don't sell many at the latter price."—New York

Forge and Furnace of the Future.

The opinion is expressed by a writer in The Mechanical News that the forge and furnace of the future will consist of a lead lined glass or porcelain vase, or cupola, filled with cold acidified water, to which is connected a strong positive conductor, the forge and outfit being rendered complete by a pair of tongs with insulated handles attached to a flexible negative conductor. According to this plan, the smith seizes the piece of iron which is to be manipulated with the insulated tongs and plunges it into the sour water, which begins to boil and bubble the instant it comes in contact with the iron, the latter, in a remarkably short space of time, turning to a red and then to a white heat, ready for the work of the smith. So rapidly indeed is the heating done by this means that the water and the portion of the iron not immersed in the water are but slightly warmed. The principle involved in this process is of a simple and well known character—resistance producing the light and heat—it being found that enormous heat can be produced by such a method, much greater, in fact, than is necessary to extract iron from the most refractory ores. It is remarked that the value of such a process will be especially exhibited in the more complete and rapid handling of heavy iron and steel plates and bars requiring to be hammered and welded—more valuable still for tempering purposes, as the necessary heat for the immersed portion can be so quickly obtained, while the remaining portion holds comparatively cool.

Routed the Bull.

A lumberman attached to John Crane's camp, up beyond the Katahdin Iron works in Maine, was tramping across to a pond late one November evening when he ran upon a bull moose.

The lumberman had no rifle, so he yelled and waved his arms, expecting that the broad antlered bull would dash fear stricken down the mountain. But it didn't. It rushed for the lumberman. He dodged about a tree and dropped his ax. For ten minutes he dodged, half scared to death. Then he climbed the tree.

The bull butted the tree with its antlers until it swayed to and fro, and then walked away a few yards and rested. The lumberman yelled some more. When he could yell no longer, he set his wits to work. Just above him was a dead limb. He broke it off, and as the bull advanced again he set the wood afire and dropped it on the bull's back. With a bellow it ran down the mountain. The half frozen lumberman made a line for

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The sudden termination of the criminal business left the court without any business for this afternoon. All the criminal cases except the cases against Fred Lugenschlager and Jacob Dohmeier had been disposed of in some manner, and these two County Attorney Gossman moved to continue until next term. Asst. Co. Atty. O'Brien objected to this procedure and stated to the court that these parties had been properly notified of the fact that their cases were for trial this week, and that they had not made any showing why the cases should be continued, nor had they plead to the indictments and he could see no reason why they should not forfeit their bonds. The court thought likewise and Mr. Gossman withdrew his motion. Judge Ives told the county attorney if the parties were not present by 9 o'clock Thursday morning their bonds would be forfeited. They were telegraphed for and were on hand Thursday morning and first, by their attorney Arguli, plead not guilty and the cases set for Saturday. Later they came into court and changed their pleas to guilty. Sentence will be passed the 18th. The parties did not have the money at present to pay the fines.

To make your business pay, good health is a prime factor. To secure good health, the blood should be kept pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. When the vital fluid is impure and sluggish, there can be neither health, strength, nor ambition.

Threw Arms Overboard.

KINGSTON, July 17.—The British warship Tartar seized the schooner World Monday in these waters. A number of Cuban passengers on board the schooner on the approach of the warship began throwing overboard a large quantity of arms and ammunition which had been concealed in the hold. When the searching party from the warship boarded the World they found only tobacco on board.

Missouri Silver Convention.

ST. LOUIS, July 17.—By a vote of 12 to 2 the Democratic state central committee has decided to call a state silver convention. The convention will be held at Pertle Springs. The date fixed was Aug. 6, 1895. J. B. Thomas of the Third and A. C. Stenver of the Tenth districts were the only ones voting against the proposition.

Harvesting in Nebraska.

OMAHA, July 15.—Wheat harvest is in full blast throughout the state. The yield is fully up to the expectations. The corn crop is estimated at 188,000,000 bushels and its condition was never better.

American History in 100 Words.

The Washington Pathfinder recently offered a prize for the best original history of the United States in 100 words. Out of 911 contestants the prize was awarded to W. T. Godden of Pana, Ills., for the following: "The revival of learing, commercial rivalry and rivalry, and religious zeal in Europe led to Columbus' discovery of America in 1492. Conflicting territorial claims and parental animosity involved English, French and Spanish colonists in wars culminating in English supremacy in 1763. England's oppression alienated colonial affection, induced revolution and hastened independence. Common cause and danger begot colonial union; the weakness of the confederation demanded a federal republic. Party differences tempted legislation. Negro slavery precipitated civil strife, secession, emancipation, federal authority supreme, reorganization succeeded. Religious freedom, an unmuzzled press, invention, internal improvement and universal education have rounded to prosperity at home and honor abroad." Not being equal to this party as a "condenser," we cannot tell the advantages and attraction of the Burlington route in one hundred words, but will say to our friends who travel that to most principal cities it is the main traveled road, and for full particulars as to maps, time tables, rates and routes, refer them to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

A. C. Clausen says that the wheat speculators who are banking on 30 bushels per acre yield and basing the number of acres on last year will be badly left. Says he knows of lots of wheat that is not filling out well and while there will no doubt be some 30 bushel crops the average yield per acre will not be greater than last year.

TORIES GAINING.

Further Election Returns in Great Britain Add to Their Victories.

LIBERALS ARE DISHEARTENED.

Henry M. Stanley and Labor Leader Burns Among the Winners.

LONDON, July 17.—The total results of the parliamentary elections, for which returns have been made, are as follows: Conservatives 151, Liberal Unionists 71, Liberals 23, Parnellites 4, McCarthyites 4, Labor 1. As compared with the parliament which has just been dissolved, 24 seats thus returned show gains for the Unionists and five are gains for the Liberals.

There is intense excitement in London's streets. As a result of the elections the theatres and restaurants are almost deserted.

Results were announced in the smoking room of the National Liberal club, where a special wire had been placed. The news, as it was received, was posted on a large blackboard. Many country members came to town to learn how the tide of the election was running. The members of the club

Were Mostly Dispirited.

One of them stated to a correspondent of the Associated Press that the Conservatives now have a chance to show that they have not learned any important lessons from our mistakes.

Outside the clubhouse the crowd greeted the news of the election of John Burns, the labor leader who recently made a tour of America, with tremendous cheers. The bulletin announcing Henry M. Stanley's election was received with hisses and cries of "professional politician."

The pictures of Mr. Gladstone and Sir William Harcourt, which were thrown on the scene from time to time, were wildly cheered.

A Chance for Harcourt.

It is announced that John McLeod, who is the candidate for re-election as a Liberal from Sutherlandshire, has offered to retire in favor of Sir William Harcourt. Sir William Harcourt telegraphed to a political friend in London: "I have no intention whatever of retiring from public life and shall persevere as long as I am able in the Liberal cause and for the maintenance of the principles to which I am attached."

WEBB WANTS ARMS.

Cuban Agent Trying to Buy Munitions of War from the Government.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Captain James M. Webb of Brooklyn has returned from Washington where he has been trying to secure some small arms which are being replaced by the new magazine rifle for use in the army. If the captain's negotiations with the war department are successful, the condemned rifles will find their way into the hands of the Cuban revolutionists. That is admitted by Webb, and the local representatives of the Cubans do not deny it. The captain says:

"It may surprise our Spanish friends to know that small arms intended for Cuba are being sent out of Brooklyn and New York at the rate of about 5,000 every week. None of the laws of this country are violated by the shippers, but the arms get to the revolutionists in due course, nevertheless."

Sealers Have Bad Luck.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—Bad luck continues to follow the sealer this year, according to the reports of incoming sailors. The Emma Louise, which is cruising off the coast of Japan, recently lost three boats in a storm, two of which were picked up the Bonanza and the other by the Theresa. The boat's crew picked up by the Theresa had a terrible experience, one of the men being devoured by a shark. In addition to encountering bad weather, the sealers are making poor catches.

Miners' Wages Increased.

ISHPEMING, Mich., July 17.—The Cleveland Cliffs Iron Mining company has raised the wages of employes from 10 to 25 cents per day, according to former wages paid. This is the first voluntary increase of the season, and is given because of the improved condition of the iron market.

Ohio Tax Law Valid.

CINCINNATI, July 17.—Judges Lurton and Taft have held the Nichols state law valid and sustained the state auditor, treasurer and attorney general, the state board of appraisers, in the assessments for taxes made under the Nichols law on telegraph, telephone and express companies.

Minister Baker at New York.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Lewis Baker, United States minister to Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Salvador, and his son, were passengers on the Atlas line steamship Ailsa, which arrived last night from Port Limon.

Teal vs. Wallis.

Somewhere about 4th of July Chas. Teal, Sr., of Euclid, had his neighbor, Herman Wallis, arrested on a charge of attack with a deadly weapon, or "for pointing a gun at him." The case finally came to trial before Judge Holt on Tuesday; went to the jury about 3 o'clock and after wrestling with the problem an hour or so that body brought in a verdict of "not guilty." The row grew out of a little hay that Wallis cut and Teal attempted to haul and Wallis attempted to prevent him doing.

W. F. Street, one of Fosston's rising attorneys, while in the city on business before the district court last week, dropped into our den with judge Searle and related to comrade Searle and ourself the manner in which he was mustered into the Fosston Post and what his fees and dues amounted to. It seems that when the boys were all ready to muster the Post, they found that they lacked just one man and what to do they did not know, so Hillard and John Fleisch skirmished about to find that extra man and in their search dropped into the office of Bennet & Street and told Bennet their dilemma. "Why, that'l be all right" said Bennet, come into the next room and I'll introduce you to my new partner, Maj. Street, and I reckon he will help you out." So in they went and Bennet introduced "Maj." Street to the boys, who did not quite catch on at first, but soon tumbled to the racket and invited the boys out to Lohn's (or somebody's else) hardware store to sample a "kag 'o nails." Well the boys did not muster that day but Street says that since that day whenever he meets the boys he has to go out and "swear in."

Wheat has been crazy for a few weeks past and from the highest notch reached in several years dropped 20 cents per bushel, but with all of the pounding that experienced bears were able to give it they could not hold it down. In this market wheat opened this week at 76 cents for No. 1 hard and the tendency is upward. We confidently look for good prices this fall and for several years yet.

We are afraid we shall have to modify our opinion elsewhere expressed in the Losey affair, as recent developments seem to indicate that it was a preconcerted plan, and various and sundry little accounts about town, some of them made as late as last Saturday, and all left unsettled, have a very bad look. From the present appearance it looks as though he deliberately planned to beat his friends as much as possible and skip. N. S. Gervais, with whom a small bill of $5,50 was made last Saturday, said to the JOURNAL: "I am very much disappointed in Losey. He was a young man in whom I had every confidence and had he asked for $75 or even $100 in trade he could have got it just as well as the small amount that was got. I am very, very sorry, too, for I liked him, but I have lost all confidence in him now."

Last Saturday Chief Creamer received a telegram from Warren asking him to arrest and hold one "Dr. Winship," wanted at Warren for jumping a board bill. It seems that the "doctor" has been running a theatrical company in connection with his business, and was playing in hard lines, got shy and fled. On Monday the whole aggregation came down to interview the "doctor," who, they claimed, was rather bashful about putting up for their wages, and after various and sundry arguments they induced the genial "doctor" to "cough up" a little. The company then made arrangements to continue on the road, and the "doctor" proceeded to his home at Park Rapids, Minn.

The JOURNAL was in error as to the name of the cornet band that furnished such excellent music on our streets on July 4th. It seems that it was the Bear Park cornet band from Norman county, and we gladly give "honor to whom honor is due," for it is a fact that they furnished most excellent music, and if the boys will give a sufficient amount of time and attention to practice they certainly will become the leading band in this Northwest. They have talent enough.

THEY TAKE THE TRAIN.

And Skip the Tra La Loo.

A mysterious event, one that has put our citizens on the qui vive for the balance of the week, occurred on Monday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Losey, Jr., took the N. P. train, she ticketed to Chicago and he to St. Paul; not that there is anything essentially mysterious about taking a train for Chicago—people have been known to do that and return alive, but, as a rule everybody knows a week beforehand that you were going, what you were going for—or thought they did, which is just as satisfactory if you don't know any better—when you would be back and all about it. But this young couple seem to have violated every known rule to modern science by quietly going down to the depot, purchasing their tickets and—keeping their own counsel. From all that we are able to learn, Mr. Losey seems to have quietly disposed of his business interests and departed in a way that people do when they have done some wrong act, but so far everything else seems perfectly straight and all right. The laundry business in which he was engaged with Mr. Buckingham is said to be on a sound financial basis, with a good run of business. We have known Mr. Losey from his youth up; have never known him to do one underhanded thing yet, and before we condemn him in this action, however dark it may look, we must have pretty positive proof of dishonesty. We have our opinion in regard to this hasty action, and if correct it is entirely different from the general opinion. If we are right the boy is more sinned against than sinning.

THIEF RIVER FALLS ITEMS

(From the Press.)

The steamer Viking came down Saturday and is harbored here for repairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Farr are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a fine boy at their house last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, of Crookston, drove up from Crookston Tuesday. They left their team here for the use of the bank and returned on the train Wednesday.

The wind waxed a trifle gay during the storm Friday evening and beside scaring everybody in the country half to death and turning a number of trees upside down blew the large sign from the roof of the Grent Northern hotel and laid it down in a million pieces in the street.

P. W. Smith has sold his photograph studio to Mr. D. Collins, of Crookston. Mr. Collins is a photographer of much experience and only asks a trial order to convince one of his ability to execute the best of work in his line. He will hold forth at the old stand. Mr. Smith left on Wednesday for Casselton, N. D., where he has interests that require his attention.

The first car of lumber for James McNair's new steamboat to be built here this summer, arrived last Wednesday. The material to be used is fir and is shipped from the forests of Washington. Construction will begin as soon as the balance of the material can be got here and the new steamer will be built for both river and lake trafic.

FOSSTON TEMS

(From the Thirteen Towns.)

E. T. Bigelow came in from Itasca county early this week and left for Duluth to-day.

John Steve is doing a good business with his lime-burning this summer and has disposed of many loads of this staple article in and about Fosston.

M. E. Randklev left for Duluth on Wednesday to be on deck, with the other interested parties, at the land office when a certain township in Itasca is opened on Tuesday next.

H. C. Sampson returned from the timber country yesterday.

Terry Shelly, formerly principal of the Fosston schools, is now located at Stevensville, Mont.

Effie W., the green mare belonging to D. Collins, who is in charge of trainer Newby, is making a promising showing this summer. In one race last week at East Grand Forks she was a close second in heats trotted in 2:25 and 2:26.

PITZEL'S CHILDREN

NO LONGER ANY DOUBT AS TO THEIR FATE.

They Were Victims of Holmes and Their Bodies Have Been Found in a Toronto Cellar—Locked in a Trunk and Asphyxiated by Gas.

DETROIT, Mich., July 16.—A special to The News from Toronto says: Found buried in the cellar of the house, 816 St. Vincent street, were the bodies of Alice and Nellie, the two missing daughters of Benjamin F. Pitzel. Detectives Cuddy of Toronto and Geyer of Philadelphia made the discovery and all doubts as to their fate have been set at rest.

It is now a matter almost beyond doubt that H. H. Holmes, when here last October, deliberately murdered the pair and thus rid himself of two troublesome young beings after he had murdered their father in Philadelphia. The inquiries begun by the police led to the knowledge that lived at the house in question, and a search was made by the two officers. A photograph of Holmes was shown to Frank N. Nudel of the educational department, who owns 816, and without any hesitation he identified it as that of his tenant. When they reached the cellar it appeared to the detectives that something had disturbed the cellar floor, and, arming themselves with shovels, they began to dig. A short distance below the surface they came across the arm and a portion of the head of one of the little murdered girls. Further work soon revealed the entire body, not only of the first, but of her sister. They were both naked and had lain there in all probability since last October.

Holmes and the Children

Asphyxiated in a Trunk.

There were no traces of violence on the bodies, and it is thought Holmes decoyed the children into the trunk under some protest and took them to the house. Then gas was inserted by means of a tube through a small hole. The trunk, with a hole in it neatly covered over with a strap tacked down, was found in one of Holmes' rooms. The little girls when found were naked and had been buried without a coffin of any kind. No trace of the boy Howard, a lad of 8, has been found, but he is thought to be dead. As the crime was probably committed in this country it will be necessary to extradite Holmes and put him on trial for the murder here.

ASSASSINATED STAMBULOFF.

Murderous Attack Made on the Ex-Bulgarian Premier.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 16.—M. Stambuloff, ex-premier of Bulgaria, was returning home from the Union club, accompanied by his colleague, M. Petchoff, when they were attacked by four persons armed with revolvers and knives. Stambuloff received several wounds in the head and lost a quantity of blood. His condition is serious. The assailants attacked the carriage, compelling the coachmen to stop. M. Stambuloff's servant fired his revolver, but missed the mark. M. Stambuloff jumped out and immediately received a cut which almost severed his hand from the wrist. He then tried to escape but was followed and stabbed in the head and received a revolver shot, when he fell to the ground, where his assailants continued their stabs, badly wounding his other hand. M. Petchoff ran to his assistance and was also stabbed.

M. Stambuloff was taken to his house and laid on a sofa. The doctors declare that one and perhaps both of his hands must be amputated and that he may possibly die. The attack is supposed to be the personal vengeance of persons who suffered during his regime.

ELKS UNITED

Stirring Scene at the Atlantic Meeting of the Order.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 13.—The morning session of the Elks witnessed the completion of the peace negotiations for the uniting of the two factions of the great order. It was the result of a secret conference lasting the greater part of the night at which Meade D. Detwiler and several officers of the Buffalo faction and the grand exalted ruler of the grand lodge of the Atlantic faction were present.

SHORTENED SENTENCES.

Judge Woods Makes Those of Debs and Companions Run Concurrently.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Judge Woods has reinstated his former order making concurrent the sentences of Eugene V. Debs and other officials of the American Railway union. As a result Debs will serve but six months in jail and his associates but three months.

THE HAYWARD APPEAL

Supreme Court Grants a Hearing and the Case Goes Over to October.

ST. PAUL, July 13.—The supreme court has granted the application for a hearing of the appeal of Harry Hayward. This will send the case over to the October term.

SENTENCED A BANK WRECKER.

Ex-Senator Cassatt Gets Nine Years at Anamosa.

KEOKUK, Ia., July 16.—In the federal court Judge Woolson sentenced ex-State Senator R. R. Cassatt, the Pella bank wrecker, to nine years in the Anamosa penitentiary.

A FAST HORSE

ALL RIGHT ENOUGH.

Not long since the JOURNAL mentioned the fact that Supt. O. McCrillis had purchased a fast horse of C. A. Hitchcock and would be right in it for turf events. Well the fact that he has a "fast" horse all right enough was amply demonstrated on Saturday night when the Professor took a young lady teacher for a drive behind that horse. Everything went lovely until the couple reached the Robert street crossing of the Great Northern road when the horse suddenly took fright whirled and started south along the track toward the railroad bridge. Just before he reached the bridge the buggy wheel caught in a frog and was smashed, throwing the occupants of the buggy violently to the ground. Fortunately neither was seriously hurt but the buggy looked like it had gone through a last year's cyclone. The horse escaped with slight injuries and the Prof. will now keep one eye peeled for some "dead game sport," one who enjoys fast horses, to trade him a horse that the Prof. knows can "go."

COUNTY DADS.

The county board met at the auditor's office on the morning of the 8th.

The report of the committee on location of road through Roome, Fisher and Vineland reported favorably and an order was made.

The real estate tax of Lars P. Sorvik was cancelled as he had not proved up till May '94.

Petition of Jens O. Rude and N. B. Englestad for division of school district, No. 69 and 113 was rejected.

The auditor was instructed to buy a West's statutes for use in his office.

The application of M. McGuire of East Grand Forks for abatement of '94 taxes were referred to the board of equalization of that city.

The town of Russia was granted $125 for roads, and the town of Godfrey gets $75.

A petition to annex certain lands to the village of Fosston received, and favorable action taken thereon. An election was ordered for August 20, with O. L. Larsen, S. N. Sorensen and J. E. Campbell as judges.

The usual grist of bills were allowed the largest being $236.32 to the Crookston Water Power and Light Co.

Adjourned till July 18th.

Weak and Nervous

Describes the condition of thousands of people at this season. They have no appetite, cannot sleep, and complain of the prostrating effect of warm weather. This condition may be remedied by Hood's Sarsaparilla which creates an appetite and tones up all organs. It gives good health by making the blood pure.

Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, cure headache.

DRAINAGE.

Anent the drainage act the Pioneer Press says:

"Complaint comes from Crookston, Minn., that hundreds of acres of splendid wheat have been drowned out by the continued rains. Where the state drainage commission did its work this catastrophe was prevented and the farmers were saved many thousands of dollars. Certainly a stronger argument in favor of the completion of the drainage works of the Red river valley could not be made than this. It is the one grain of practical demonstration that outweighs tons of surmise and theory."

The New Hotel.

The new hotel will be opened on the 24th by a grand banquet at which among others will be present Governor Clough and staff. The governor has already telegraphed his acceptance of the invitation. Moorhead, landlord Baker's home will send a special coach and a big time is assured.

If you would have an abundance of dark, glossy hair, if you would have a clean scalp, free from dandruff and irritating humors, or if your hair is faded and gray, and you would have its natural color restored use Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is unquestionably the best dressing.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Late Literary News.

"'O, will he paint me the way I want,'
As bonny as a girlie,
Or will he paint me an ugly tyke,
And be d——d to Mr. Nerli
But still and on and which ever it is,
He is a canty Kerlie.
The Lord protect the back and neck
Of honest Mr. Nerli."

This, one of the last verses ever written by Robert Louis Stevenson, is in reference to the portrait of himself, which is given to the public with his verse for the first time in the July Cosmopolitan. The lines might have come from the pen of Burns, and are inimitable in their way. The portrait was declared by Stevenson himself to be the best ever painted of him. In this same number of the Cosmopolitan Rudyard Kipling tells an Indian story, to which Remington adds charming illustrations; Mrs. Burton Harrison makes a serious study of New York society in "The Myth of the Four Hundred," and Kate Douglas Wiggin contributes a story of one of the most delightful of Welsh retreats. The Cosmopolitan was with this number reduced to ten cents per copy, and as a consequence, notwithstanding its large edition, it was "out of print" on the third day of publication.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing business during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building-up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adapted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

(First pub. July 18, '95.)
(Last pub. Aug. 29, '95.)

NOTICE is hereby given that Charles L. Hoff and Annie Hoff, his wife, did execute and deliver to J. W. Smith their mortgage, dated the 22nd day of April, 1887, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of April, 1887, at 9 o'clock A. M., in book 30 of Mortgages, on pages 471 to 475, which said mortgage and the debt thereby secured were by assignment, dated the third day of June, 1892, and duly recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on the 29th day of June, 1895, at 8:45 o'clock A. M. in Book 67 on page 566, duly sold and transferred by said J. W. Smith to the undersigned, Olaf O. Searle, who has ever since been and now is the owner and holder thereof. And default having been made in the conditions of said mortgage by the nonpayment of the sum of Three Hundred ($300.00) Dollars, and interest thereon at 8 per cent per annum, from April 3rd, 1892, secured thereby, and the amount now actually due and claimed to be due thereon at the date of this notice is the sum of Three Hundred and Seventy-five ($375.00) Dollars; and no action at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said debt or any part thereof,

NOW, THEREFOR, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the premises described in said mortgage, situated, lying and being in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The East half of the Southeast quarter of Section twenty-three, and West half of the Southwest quarter of Section twenty-four, in Township one hundred and forty-seven, Range forty-two, West of the fifth principal meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston, County of Polk, State of Minnesota, at 10 o'clock A. M., on Saturday the 31st day of August, 1895, to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, and $25.00 attorney's fees provided for in said mortgage, and the costs and charges of notice and sale.

MARK TWAIN'S CAREER

He Failed as Printer, but Succeeded as Humorist.

The announcement that the distinguished American traveler and humorist, Samuel L. Clemens, better known as Mark Twain, will soon appear in a reading from his published works at the Opera house in Crookston, will be received with pleasure by the many who have come to know him through his books but have not been afforded the pleasure of meeting him personally. It needless to say that, as a writer, he is one of the most entertaining now before the public, and the assurance can be given that his readings have the added charm his rare personality give them.

Mark Twain's experience is one that emphasizes the fact that men are often indebted to some happy accident that eventually works to make them famous. Had it not been for the civil war, it is more than probable that he would have lived and died as a humble river pilot—an occupation into which he had drifted after being "bounced" from every printing office where he tried to work at his trade, and in all of which he was spoken of as "the laziest man that ever held cases." His last work as a printer was done in the office of one of the leading dailies in St. Louis. Mark had been excruciatingly indolent all night and showed no disposition to hurry when the rush came on shortly after midnight. The foreman of the office could stand it no longer, and, coming over to where he was working, said:

"Look here, Sam, you've loafed around here as long as you can. Now either hurry up or quit."

Without looking up or accelerating his motions in the least, Clemens replied in his peculiar drawl: "Well, I guess if its all the same to you and you won't miss me too much, I'll quit."

He put on his coat and left the office. The next heard of him he was learning to be a pilot on one of the magnificent steamers that ran on the Mississippi in the antebellum days. He succeeded in this, for the work was to his liking, and not so hard as to be unendurable and he settled down to it in the conviction that he had found his life occupation at last. Then came the war and, like Othello, that occupation was gone, and he was obliged to turn his attention to other means of obtaining a livelihood.

About this time Mr. Clemens' brother was appointed territorial governor of Nevada, and thither the future humorist went as his private secretary. Once there the gold fever took possession of him, but the work incident to a miner's lot was not to his liking and he drifted into journalism. He was city editor of the Virginia City Enterprise for a time, going eventually to 'Frisco, where be was employed as a reporter on the Call. During the period of his service on the Call he was sent as special correspondent to Honolulu, and on his return to America he began the career that has made his name a household word wherever the English language is spoken.

Mr. Clemens has been particularly happy on the lecture platform and his readings have been enthusiastically received by all who have listened to them. He makes no attempt at elocutionary effects, but has rather the easy, colloquial manner of one who is sure he has a good story to tell and is confident of his ability to relate it well. There is a humorous sort of a drawl in his speech that adds greatly to the effectiveness of his recitals which are always characterized by refinement and the best of taste. Mr. Clemens will appear at the opera house on Monday evening, July 29th.

A jury was called in the case of Casper Tylden vs. Martha Anderson. W. E. Rowe for plaintiff and E. M. Stanton and Wm. Watts for defendant. It appears that in May, 1893, plaintiff purchased some school land from the defendant and that an agreement was entered into at the time, that defendant should pay the taxes on said land until June 1, 1894. This she did not do, and denied having promised to do so. The amount sued for is $38.04. A verdict was rendered for the defendant.

In the case of E. D. Childs Co. vs. Chris. Engleetad and N. O. Nelson, plaintiff moved that the judgment of the court below in favor of plaintiff be affirmed and entered against the fendant Nelson and his sureties. Motion was granted.

James E. Morrisey vs. W. E. Walker, appeal from justice court, was taken up. R. J. Montague attorney for plaintiff and P. J. Russell for defendant. This action is brought to recover $70 and some cents plaintiff claims due him for work done for the defendant. The attorneys for both parties and the defendant, too, had gone to the circus, but Mr. Morrisey was equal to the occasion and presented his case to the court and had judgment entered in his favor for the amount claimed. In justice court it appears that the defendant presented a counterclaim which over-balanced the plaintiff's claim and gave judgment in favor of defendant for two or three dollars.

The case of Chas. Vine vs. Henry Russ, appeal from justice court, continued.

FRIDAY MORNING.

A jury was called in the case of Thompson & Johnson vs. Crookston Hay and Commission Co., DeForest Bucklen for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant. This action is brought to recover for some flour and feed sold the defendant in December 1892. Casper Sands was at one time a member of this firm and after his withdrawal the company made an assignment. Thompson & Johnson could not collect from the Silvers after Sands withdrew and they bring this suit now to recover from Mr. Sands; claiming that they never had any notice in any manner of his withdrawal from the company. The amount sought to recover is something over $200. The Silvers acknowledge the indebtedness to be $157 and some cents, the balance being offset by rebates allowed by Mr. Thompson and by sacks returned. The case went to the jury at 4:30 with instructions to return a sealed verdict Saturday morning.

The next case set for today, Albert E. Olson vs. John Peterson, was continued.

J. J. How Lumber Co. vs. C. L. Lasher was stricken from the calendar; no one appearing for either party.

SATURDAY MORNING.

Court convened at 9 a. m. The jury in the case of Thompson & Johnson vs. The Crookston Hay and Commission Co. returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $249.09 and added: "We further find the defendant, Sands, not guilty or liable."

The case of Hendricks vs. Tullofson was the next on call, but for some reason the parties were not ready and the case went over till Monday morning. Wm. Watts attorney for plaintiff and J. Watts for defendant.

The case of Emil Vonderbeck vs. Herman Wallace, went over on defendant's affidavit, showing that an important and material witness could not be had at this term. Court adjourned until 2 p. m.

After convening at 2 o'clock, in view of the difficulty in getting at cases for trial, the court deemed it best to continue the few remaining jury cases and discharge the jury. The attorneys interested agreed to this proposition, and the jury was discharged; to be called back in September if necessary.

A motion on the part of some of the creditors of A. Holmboe, insolvent, to allow them to participate in the assets of the estate of the insolvent without filing releases of their claims, was argued by Mr. Bangs, of Bangs & Fisk, of Grand Forks, and DeForest Bucklen and L. E. Gossman. H. Steenerson on behalf of the insolvent Holmboe. Two disclosures have been had in the matter to ascertain the condition of the insolvent's business and the disposition of his property. Nothing satisfactory could be ascertained from his books and not anything very tangible from his testimony could be gleaned. Upon this testimony of the insolvent the creditors base their motion, and claim that proper books were not kept to show the true condition of his business. The court allowed the order to be made.

Court cases will be heard during next week if attorneys are prepared.

A VISIT FROM THE DEVIL.

How His Satanic Majesty Once Made His Appearance In Bungay.

A rare pamphlet in the library of the editor of a department of The Republic bears the following quaint title: "A Strange and Terrible Wunder Wroght Verie Lately In the Parish Church of Bungay—namely, on the fourth of thys August in the Yeers of our Lorde 1577." The story, stripped of the quaint language in which it is couched, and briefly told, is as follows: A storm of extraordinary fury raged during divine services in the church alluded to; rain fell in torrents, and the lightning flashed "blue, red, green and in a mixture of indescribable colors," while the thunder peals "not only disquieted men and dumb creatures, but senseless things devoid of all life and feeling trembled and shook with terror."

While the tempest was at its height, a fiend from the lower regions appeared in the midst of the terror stricken congregation. The account says: "It was in form, as well as could be discerned, of an enormous dog, of black color, the sight whereof, together with the fearful flashes of fire which then were seen, moved many minds to the belief that the end of time had come, and that doomsday was upon us. The evil one, for he it was in such strange likeness, ran with extraordinary speed into that portion of the church where the majority of the congregation was seated. In doing so it passed between two persons who were upon their knees in the attitude of prayer, grasped and wrung the necks of both in an instant, so that they died presently as they knelt. As he passed by another he gave him such a grip on the back that he was drawn together and instantly shrunken up like a piece of leather scorched in a hot fire."

Leaving the church at Bungay, the devil is said to have "flown with a greate noise and rustling" to the church at Blibsry, seven miles away. He was seen to alight upon the roof and to instantly pass through it, dropping from the vaulted ceiling upon the heads of three persons (two men and a boy,) who were all instantly killed, "beying scratched bye the horyd thing and bared to aearlis a cracklyng."

The "Book of Wonderous Visitations," published in 1687, 110 years after the events mentioned above, says that the prints of the devil's claws where he ran down the aisle of the Bungay church were then still plainly to be seen.—St. Louis Republic.

The Large Flying Squirrel.

The large red flying squirrel is interesting, but not beautiful. It is wholly nocturnal, and, like most nocturnal animals, is extremely surly and spiteful if disturbed in the daytime. It is as large as a cat, with a face like a rabbit's. Its coloring is extremely brilliant for a mammal, and in general appearance it resembles some curious monster in a Chinese painting. The fur is a rich and deep chestnut on its back, light chestnut below, its head white and its eyes a dull pale gray.

The wide parachute membrane between its legs is covered with fur, and its tail is long, thickly furred and round. This squirrel does not "fly" in the proper sense of the word, but in the forests its parachute membrane answers its purpose almost equally as well as wings. It runs with a wonderful agility up the trunk of the tree, and to the end of a branch, and then takes a flying leap, with its limbs extended to the utmost and the wide flesh membrane stretched.

This "aerial glide" carries it forward and downward to a horizontal distance of perhaps 40 or 50 yards, and it is noticed that, as in the case of birds when making use of their powers of descent with fixed pinions, the squirrel throws itself upward and ascends slightly at the close of the "flight," perching on the bough it aims at, with all the lightness of a pigeon descending from a tower, to some point upon the roof below.—Spectator.

TWO ENTERTAINMENTS.

One Performance on the Stage, the Other In the Audience.

I attended a recent performance given by some amateur actors and actresses—very good they were, too—and while I enjoyed the stage entertainment I was not unmindful of the one that was in progress directly behind me.

It was furnished by an old lady and two young ones—when I say "young ones" I don't mean children—and its beginning antedated the overture in this style:

"Can you read the programme, mother?"

"Why, yes; but it must be wrong. Here's Annie's name down, and it says she's a servant. I thought you said she was an actress."

"Only a servant in the play, mother."

"But that seems a kind of mean thing to play. She doesn't have to do that, goodness knows!"

"She has to play whatever they give her to play. She's a beginner, you know."

"Well, I wouldn't begin that way."

"Annie" appeared presently.

She said, "Yes, my lady," and "No, your lordship," and "I will tell her ladyship that you are here," and a few more stunners of that sort very well, I thought.

But when the French count with the pointed beard chucks her under the chin I could hear the old lady behind me getting into a fine rage.

"Well, the idea of our Annie letting a man do a thing like that!"

"But, mother, that's in the play."

"I don't care if it is. I suppose he'll kiss her later on! The idea!"

Well, he did kiss her shortly after and got a good slap in the face for his pains.

The old lady almost rose in her seat.

"Good, good!" she cried in a very audible voice.

"I thought Annie wouldn't stand anything of that sort!"

She objected to the young girl's little love affairs with the footman, however, and could hardly be kept in her chair when the two plighted their troth.

"I don't call that play acting," she said. "They were just like two servants, and I don't like it."

When the curtain dropped, they all went around to the stage door, and somehow I felt sorry for Annie, coming from the stage full of hot enthusiasm, only to receive—mentally at least—a bucket of cold water.—Polly Pry in New York Recorder.

THE SICKROOM NURSE.

Her Duties, Her Authority and Her Powers For Evil or Good.

No person has greater power for evil or for good than has the nurse in the sickroom. Her actual authority is second to that of the physician, but her opportunities for exercising it are almost unlimited. If a physician in a country town wishes to secure a trained nurse, he should telegraph or write to the nurses' directory, to some hospital or physician whom he knows, in the nearest adjacent city, stating for what sort of a case he will require a nurse, what he will pay and when he will require her. Such a message should secure for him almost immediately whatever service he requires.

The traits of character which make the ideal nurse are patience, obedience, tact and good sense and temper. The nurse's costume should consist of a cambric or seersucker gown, with white cap, cuffs and apron. Woolen gowns should never be permitted in a sickroom. Her authority is absolute after the physician's. She must obey his instructions to the letter, even if they are against her judgment. She has no discretion in the matter.

But the patient and the patient's family must obey her. She must never be allowed to disobey the physician's orders, and the first symptom of any such behavior should be reported immediately to the physician. All his instructions with reference to treatment, diet and care should be followed faithfully. The fact that her patient is a man should make no difference in her behavior in the sickroom. He is a patient, not a man, and she a nurse, not a woman. Whenever a nurse disobeys a physician's orders or behaves in any manner which renders her dismissal advisable, the family or the patient should request the doctor to discharge her at once and to supply her substitute. A word from him is sufficient to insure her departure.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Private Electric Motors.

A well known electrical authority has pointed out that it is now as easy and cheap to have an electric elevator in a private house as in a large office building. Stairs are literally a barbarism, to which women frequently owe ill health, and to which many delicate persons may attribute the deprivation of the full enjoyment of their homes. The cost of operating an electric elevator in, say, a five story house, making 50 or 60 trips every day, will not exceed $3 or $4 per month. The devices for operating these elevators have been so improved that an invalid or a child can manage them. The old lever arrangement can be dispensed with, and the elevator ascends or descends on the pressure of a button. It will stop only at each floor and will start only when the elevator door is closed.—New York Times.

Force of Habit.

The genial captain of a steamer plying on one of our American rivers was appointed a vestryman in an Episcopal church in a city which lay at one end of his route.

One day shortly afterward it was reported to him, when on shore, that there was a leak in the church. He was accustomed to promptness, and on receipt of the message he went to the church, took a candle and started down into the cellar to find the leak, evidently thinking of the basement as the hull of the good ship Zion.

The captain himself tells the story with much apparent enjoyment of its humor.—Youth's Companion.

WHAT IS POETRY?

It Is Music In the Cathedral of the Human Heart.

Poetry is music in the cathedral of the heart. Deep in the human breast there towers a noble structure. It stands apart from the beaten paths of the mind in a silent, hidden valley. The ordinary thoughts and passions hurry past the portal and know it not. They have not learned the "open sesame." Ego himself, ruler of the kingdom of the intellect, does not know the sacred spot. It is the mission of his life to find it, and having once found it he cannot remember the route by which he journeyed. He cannot return to it at will. Fate guards the way and rarely grants an entrance, yet every man at some time of his life happens upon it, and the fortunate reach it often. Though they are blindfolded by the way, their eager feet learn to tread the labyrinth. They are the poets of mankind, whose fancy gives sight to their feet.

At some unexpected moment a fair guide points the way, the doors swing open, and man enters the cathedral of his heart. Sometimes it is a strain of music of searching, thrilling sweetness that points the way. Sometimes it is a royal sunset. Sometimes it is a rapt and self forgetting prayer. Sometimes it is the hand of love, but oftenest it is gaunt sorrow. It is a stately temple. Its dome is as broad as the heavens, toward which the many fingered spires point. Its windows make of each sunbeam a rainbow. Its aisles are silent. Its priest is peace. With hushed heart and reverential step man enters and is at rest. All that is material of him he leaves behind. Quiet and beauty possess his soul, and he floats in an inspiring dream. He listens, and now for the first time falls on his intent ear an occasional note in the harmony of the universe.

Half lost in distance, he hears the chorus of the morning stars, the birds, the waterfall, the trees. He feels a beauty and a purpose in the universe the mind cannot conceive. He feels above, about, within him a majestic kingdom to which his soul is kin. Almost he grasps the secret of creation. For one swift instant exaltation draws aside the dark, impenetrable curtain that has led skeptic man. "There is the end." He sees beyond a marvel too great for his still human mind. It passes, but it leaves with him awe, peace, hope. He feels that somewhere there is a celestial key that makes of the puzzle of life a kingdom where all is harmony, perfection, satisfaction. The great organ of his soul, tuned into speech by the master hand of beauty, bursts into melody.

And this is poetry.—Exchange.

An Extraordinary Freak.

A citizen of Tampa, Fla., is the owner of a wonderful curiosity in the shape of a pair of deer's horns in which one of the prongs ends in a startling malformation. Four inches from the place where it branches from the main horn this prong suddenly enlarges into a bulbous growth nearly as large as a man's fist, and it is in this excrescence that the wonder lies. The bulb is in the form of a hound's head, plainly showing ears, mouth, eyes, etc. It was "taken in the down," and were it otherwise it is impossible that it could be a work of art, owing to the enlargement necessary for the freak.—St. Louis Republic.

Appeased.

He (just introduced)—What a very ugly man that gentleman near the piano is, Mrs. Hobson.

Mrs. Hobson—Why, that is Mr. Hobson.

He (equal to the occasion)—Oh, indeed! How true it is, Mrs. Hobson, that the ugly men always get the prettiest wives.—London Answers.

BATTLE OF RIVOLI.

NAPOLEON SAID THAT HIS LIFE REALLY BEGAN THERE.

The Short Campaign Was the Turning Point of the War and Shaped the History of Europe For Twenty Years—The Austrians Five Minutes Late.

Professor Sloane's "Life of Napoleon" in The Century describes the masterly Italian campaign, in which Napoleon's military genius first won worldwide recognition. Professor Sloane thus describes the battle of Rivoli:

At early dawn began the conflict which was to settle the fate of Mantua. The first fierce contest was between the Austrian left and the French right at St. Mark, but it quickly spread along the whole line as far as Caprino. For some time the Austrians had the advantage, and the result was in suspense, since the French left, at Caprino, yielded for an instant before the onslaught of the main Austrian army made in accordance with Alvinczy's first plan, and, as he supposed, upon an inferior force by one vastly superior in numbers. Berthier, who by his calm courage was fast rising high in his commander's favor, came to the rescue, and Massena, following with a judgment which has inseparably linked his name with that famous spot, finally restored order to the French ranks. Every successive charge of the Austrians was repulsed with a violence which threw their right and center back toward Monte Baldo in ever growing confusion.

The battle waged for nearly three hours before Alvinczy understood that it was not Joubert's division, but Bonaparte's army, which was above him. In his zeal he then pressed forward on the plateau beneath the height to bring more of his troops into action, and Joubert somewhat rashly advanced to check the movement, leaving the road to St. Mark unprotected. The Austrians, prompt to take advantage of his blunder, charged up the hill, and seized the commanding position, but simultaneously there rushed from the opposite side three French battalions, clambering up to retrieve the mistake. Their physical strength and nervous activity brought them first to the top, and again the storming columns were thrown back in disorder.

At that instant appeared in Bonaparte's rear an Austrian corps estimated by him as 4,000 strong, which, having come down the valley on the left bank, had now crossed the river to take the French right at Rivoli in its rear. Had they arrived but a minute sooner the hill of Rivoli would have been lost to the French. As it was, instead of making an attack, they had to await one. Bonaparte directed a galling artillery fire againt them, and thus gained time both to reform his ranks and hold the newcomers in check until his own reserve, coming in from the next hamlet westward, cut them entirely off from the retreating columns of Alvinczy, and compelled them to lay down their arms.

Thus ended the worst defeat and most complete rout which the Austrian arms had so far sustained. Such was the utter demoralization of the flying and disintegrated columns that a young French officer named Rene, who was in command of 50 men at a hamlet on Lake Garda, successfully imitated Bonaparte's ruse at Lonato, and displayed such an imposing confidence to a flying troop of 1,500 Austrians that they surrendered to what they believed to be a force superior to their own. Next morning at dawn Murat, who had marched all night to gain the point, appeared on the slopes of Monte Baldo above the pass of Corona, and united with Massena and Joubert to drive the Austrians from their last foothold. The pursuit was continued as far as Trent. Thirteen thousand prisoners were captured in those two days.

This short campaign of Rivoli was the turning point of the war, and may be said to have shaped the history of Europe for 20 years. Chroniclers dwell upon those few moments at the hill above the plateau of Rivoli, and wonder what the result would have been if the last Austrian corps had arrived five minutes sooner. But an accurate and dispassionate criticism must decide that every step in Bonaparte's success was won by careful forethought and the most effective disposition of the forces at his command. So sure was he of success that even in the crises when Massena seemed to save the day on the left and when the Austrians seemed destined to wrest victory from defeat at the last moment on the right, he was self reliant and cheerful. The new system of field operations had a triumphant vindication at the hands of its author.

The conquering general meted out unstinted praise to his invincible squadrons and their leaders, but said nothing of himself, leaving the world to judge whether this was man or demon who, still a youth, and within a public career of but one season, had humiliated the proudest empire on the continent, had subdued Italy and on her soil had created states unknown before without the consent of any great power, not excepting his own. It is not wonderful that this personage should sometimes have said of himself, "Say that my life began at Rivoli," as at other times he dated his military career from Toulon.

Whom?

"Yes," said the practical politician, "it is true that I have made $200,000 in the last ten years, but I worked for it."

"Of course you did," replied the epigrammatical, if ungrammatical, lawyer, "but the question the people are asking each other now is, 'Who did you work?'"—Somerville (Mass.) Journal.

The Clerk's Loud Voice Made Trouble In the Lambkin Family.

"I don't see why we can't go to the opera like other people," pouted Mrs. Lambkin, as she and her spouse were walking home together. "We could, I'm sure, if you didn't look upon Wagner as a mortal enemy."

"My only objection to him is the fact that he sends you to sleep and then won't let you stay there," replied Mr. Lambkin. Then, basely anxious to change the subject, he remarked, "I do believe that is Mrs. Fitzjones in another new gown."

"No doubt. Her husband is so generous to her. Why, she tells me that they were at the opera last evening and expect to go again tomorrow."

"Indeed. Ah, by the way, didn't you tell me that you thought Dick Norocks and Miss Effie had quarreled?"

"Very likely. I notice that Dick is particularly touchy whenever grand opera is in town."

"Ah, indeed. By the way, how should you like to call at your mother's this evening?"

"Very much, if anybody was likely to be at home. But of course they will all go to the opera."

"Um—ah! I've just remembered that this is church evening. Suppose we go. We haven't been to evening church since we were first married."

"Impossible, George. I should be ashamed to have any one know that I was well enough to be out after night and not at the opera. People would be sure to say that you are stingy, and I would rather die than cause such remarks."

"Fact is, Eudora, I'm as anxious as you are to go to the opera, but money is too tight. I had to make a payment today and I doubt if I have a dollar in my pocket. Never mind, we can have a nice long evening at home alone, can't we?"

"Humph! We are sure to be alone, for every living soul we know will be at the opera."

"All the better, my dear. Just step in here with me a moment, will you? I have no cigars, and I don't want to have to go out for anything tonight. You see, I don't keep many cigars on hand now that money is so scarce."

They went into the store, and Mr. Lambkin selected his cigars, while his wife stood by. He felt anxiously in his pockets for small change, and finding none took a bill out of his notebook, and glancing warily at Mrs. Lambkin handed it, all crumpled up, to the clerk. After all that it did seem the irony of fate which made that individual call out in stentorian tones to the cashier, "Twenty-five from 20, please!"

And Mrs. Lambkin was still talking about it when they reached home.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE NEW WOMAN'S WAY.

How She Will Propose to the Innocent Young Male Creature.

The room was in confusion. That is the way the books say it. An ordinary man with good eyes would have said confusion was in the room.

"At last!"

Her hands trembled as she attempted to fix her tie. Thirteen collars have been ruined. She took a photograph from a drawer. It was the sweet, innocent face of a young man. "Ah, little George! I can no longer deceive myself. I love you. The strong is about to become the weak. How far we women will go for the bright eyes of a silly man! But enough! I shall ask you to be mine this night, come what may."

"Mr. Nicely will be down in a moment. Pray be seated."

But her heart beat too wildly. She paced the floor. "The dear, dear, little boy! How I love him!"

The curtains parted, and the world's greatest treasure—a true hearted, innocent young man—entered.

Fixing a Watch.

"I dropped my watch today, and it has been gaining ten minutes an hour," said a man, at the same time handing the watch to a jeweler. The jeweler stuck a glass in his eye, looked into the interior of the watch, poked something with a small instrument, set the watch by a regulator, and handing it back, said, "It's all right now, and I've set it by the correct time." "How much?" said the customer, relieved. "Nothing," was the answer. "But I can't let you work for me without pay." "We never charge any one for such a service; why should we charge you? The hairspring was doubled, and that made the watch run fast. A single touch set it right."—New York Sun.

Neighborly Curiosity.

Mrs. Meekton was standing on the front doorstep when her husband came home.

"Henry," she said in a loud tone, "there's your income tax blank. You'd better fill it out right away."

"Great Scott, Maria!" he exclaimed, "what do I want with an income tax blank?"

"Don't talk so loud," was the admonition in a subdued but stern key. "It's a summons to serve on the jury. The next door neighbors on both sides of us have been sitting behind the closed window blinds waiting for you to come home so they could find out what the officer was here for."—Washington Star.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, JULY 13, 1895.

Gen Harrison is not a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination. Once more that positive statement is made by a gentleman who presumably enjoys Gen. Harrison's confidence. This time it is Hon. John W. Foster, of Indiana, who was Secretary of State during the closing months of Gen. Harrison's administration. Mr. Foster clinches his statement by saying that he believes the Indiana delegation will go to the next Republican National Convention without a state candidate for the nomination and not united on any candidate. He thinks the delegation will be divided between Allison, McKinley and Reed, but he doesn't express any opinion as to what proportion any of these three gentlemen will control. Mr. Foster, who has been in China for several months, acting as adviser to the Chinese government in its negotiations with Japan, was given a cordial welcome back to his Washington home, this week, by a gathering of personal friends, which included about all the prominent people now in town. The Chinese government was anxious to place Mr. Foster on its permanent pay roll and made him a flattering offer, but he declined, being too good an American to permanently enter the service of any foreign government.

Senator Pritchard, the new Republican senator from North Carolina, was in Washington, this week. He said he thought the administration was miscalculating the strength of the free silver Democrats of that state. Speaking of his own position Senator Pritchard said it was now just what it had been ever since he reached the years of discretion. "I am," said he, "for protection and bimetallism—protection for the undeveloped industries and raw materials of the South, and the use of both gold and silver as money metals."

It is estimated by those who have had access to the figures that the excess of treasury payments over receipts has for the first eleven days of the new fiscal year averaged more than a million dollars a day. Much of this money should have been paid out before the first of July, but it was held back so as to keep down the total of the deficit for the fiscal year that closed June 30. It is now admitted by intelligent Democrats that legislation for the increase of the revenues of the government will be one of the absolute necessities of the next session of congress. Republicans have known it ever since the new tariff was under discussion in the last congress, and urged the Democrats then to adopt a tariff bill that would provide sufficient revenues for the maintenance of the government, but the urging was in vain.

The administration is very much alarmed at the prospect of the Republican congress passing a bill raising the duties on such articles as are too low in the present tariff law, in order to furnish the money to run the government and it is resorting to all sorts of schemes to create public sentiment against any revision of the tariff and in favor of raising the money by some method of internal taxation. One of the shrewdest of these schemes is that for the increase of $1 a barrel in the internal revenue tax on beer. They calculate that the temperance element will favor an increase in this tax, but their principal reliance is upon the influence of the eastern brewers, who will, it is said, favor the increase because it will have a tendency to drive western beer, which is now largely consumed, out of the big eastern cities. The western brewers already have to pay the freight and meet the prices of the eastern brewers in their home cities, and it is claimed that with a dollar a barrel added to the tax and no increase in the selling price they would not be able to do this, and that the eastern brewers would gladly pay a dollar a barrel additional if they could thereby get the eastern trade now held by western breweries.

It is now stated that failing in his ambition to secure a fourth nomination, as he almost certainly will, Mr. Cleveland has about made up his mind to push Secretary Olney as the administration candidate for the Democratic nomination. The man that could enthuse over Mr. Olney as a candidate would make a good exhibit for a museum; he would be the boss freak.

Ada Index:—Eighty odd hoboes took possession of the through freight Thursday afternoon at Glyndon and refused to get of the train when ordered by the conductor. The train men wired ahead to this station for the assistance of the marshall. Hugh Bosworth responded but after it was explained that the men, if compelled, would vacate this train and take the next one, and as Ada had no place to put them, it was decided to let them ride as far as Crookston and turn the gang over to the authorities.

WE have often heard as an objection to Ben Harrison as presidential candidate that "he is an icicle." Our experience induces the belief that Ben comes naturally by this disposition.

FRIENDS of Fred Williams are circulating a petition in Minneapolis for his pardon for the crime of shooting Thomas. Public, sentiment in Minneapolis seems to be strongly against Thomas' actions in the matter.

IT has been said that Congressman C. A. Towne will head a free silver movement in the republican party but that gentleman denies it emphatically. The movement to call a free silver convention, consisting of republicans, seems to have died a bornin', so far as can be heard of to date of present writing.

SPEAKING of guberuatorial possibilities with judge Searle, we asked him what he thought of Comstock for governor. "One of the very best men we could get," said the judge. "Comstock is a clean, pure man; he made one of the best congressmen Minnesota ever had and he would make an ideal governor. I would like to see Comstock governor of Minnesota.

WHILE in Duluth Dan Lamont went up onto the knoll and looked down onto the fish-pond and the Duluth News-Tribune has been seeing bright visions of deepened harbors, big bridges &c. ever since. The Tribune seems to think that Dan will go right to Grover and tell him that it would be a brilliant stroke of policy to deepen the Duluth harbor and build a big bridge or two and Grover will quit fishing long enough to order it done—but he won't.

THE JOURNAL has been in receipt of several letters from some person in Columbus, Ohio, showing the benefits to be derived from a direct line of railroad to Duluth, all of which arguments we have often published and can see no use of wasting further time and space in trying to convince the people (who are already convinced) of the great benefits that would accrue, until some definite proposition comes up from somebody able and willing to build a road. Show us that and we will take off our coat and sail in. We know well enough how much good such a road would do, but what interests us is "who will build one?"

We Are Slaves to Greed.

If to be free is to live in a country (the United States) where you are in mortal dread of the press and the police, where you are heartily ashamed of having any one connected with you engaged in politics, where corruption reigns in every department of the government and the municipalities, where the only aristocracy is that of wealth and not of honor, and where the liberal professions are all counted lower than Wall street, where, in effect, men are the veritable slaves of greed and gain, why, give me the old fashioned slavery of the old country and the domination of some recognized house which is at least the fountain of honor.

One doesn't have to apologize in England for going to court, but it seems a necessity in America if one is in any way connected with the White House. When I first came here, I thought a member of the house of representatives held a position at least analogous to the average member of parliament. I find, on the contrary, he is about as much esteemed as an outside broker on the Stock Exchange, and for much the same reasons.—Temple Bar.

Marriage of the Adriatic.

"The Marriage of the Adriatic" was instituted in commemoration of a naval victory won by Sebastian Ziavi, doge of Venice, over Otto, son of Frederick Barbarossa, 1174. In consequence of this victory Pope Alexander III, who had been driven to take refuge in Venice, gave to the doge the sovereignty of the sea, and every year the doge used to go in grand procession in his state barge and throw a gold ring into the Adriatic, saying, "With this ring I thee wed." Flowers were then thrown into the sea, and the procession returned. The sentence delivered by the doge on the occasion was literally, "Desponsamus te Mare nostrum in signum veri perpetuique domini."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Blackstone river, in Rhode Island, was named in honor of Rev. William Blackstone, an Episcopal clergyman and early settler. The Indians called it Pawtucket, "the forks."

BORROWING TROUBLE.

How Some Persons Make Pastoral Work a Burden to Their Pastors.

Several well known clergymen of this city were chatting together at the close of a ministerial gathering a few days ago, when one of them remarked that one of the hardest things he had to contend with in his work as a pastor was the disposition of many members of his church to borrow trouble.

"I can nearly always find some way to comfort persons suffering from present troubles," said the minister, "but I am always discouraged when I find a parishioner worrying over some anticipated trouble that will probably never materialize."

"That is my experience, too," remarked another of the group, "and I had an amusing example of it in my own house not long ago. I went into my study after breakfast one morning and was astonished to find one of the servants sitting on the floor in front of the grate fire, crying and moaning as if her heart would break.

"'Why, Mary,' said I, 'what in the world is the matter with you?'

"'Oh, sir,' she answered, 'I got to thinking, sir—boohoo!—that suppose I should get married, sir—boohoo!—and should have a fine baby boy, sir—boohoo!—and he should grow big enough to walk, sir—boohoo—and he should get in front of a fire like this, sir—boohoohoo!—and should fall into it and be burned to death, sir, whatever would I do, sir, and how would I feel, sir,' and then the tears and wails came so fast she couldn't speak at all.

"Now," continued the minister, "how could I comfort a person who borrowed trouble like that? I certainly couldn't do it trying to convince the girl she would never be married, and so I simply made no effort to console her, but told her to go to her room and stay there until she had recovered her lost wits."—New York Herald.

BROOM HANDLES.

Interesting Information About an Industry of Considerable Magnitude.

There is but a small amount of wood in a broom, but so many millions of these implements are used every year that the consumption of wood for broom handles is a considerable item. While it would have been almost impossible to sell a broom handle made of heavy hard wood a few years ago, at present the reverse is true.

The manufacturer prefers hard wood because it does not require so large a bolt, can be turned down smaller and yet retain sufficient strength and can be ornamented more cheaply and artistically. Brooms with hard wood handles sell more readily and do not deteriorate in appearance like the soft wood handles. Any kind of inexpensive hard wood, such as beech, birch, maple or ash, makes acceptable handles, while springy woods like elms are not salable, because one essential of a good broom is a straight handle.

The manufacture of broom handles can only be made profitable when the timber runs largely clear. In the eastern states the timber waste in making broom handles exceeds 50 per cent, while in the southwest it is usually less than 25 per cent. There are four factories in Amsterdam, N. Y., one of which has a capacity of 1,200 finished brooms a day. They use hard wood handles from the south and west and get them for less than the bolts ready for the lathe can be furnished from native hardwood.

The handles are turned green and dried afterward. The large end on which the brush is wired must be thoroughly dry, or the broom will work loose. The drying of the upper part of the handle is of less consequence, except in the saving of freight.—Southern Lumberman.

Aluminium.

In obtaining alumina from clay, according to Heibling, supposing a clay of a known strength in the alumina, for each molecule of the latter there is incorporated with the clay three molecules of ammonium sulphate and an almost equal weight of neutral potassium sulphate. One molecule of the latter is theoretically sufficient, and the whole is well worked up and made into hollow bricks, these to be baked at 270 degrees to 280 degrees. The ammonium sulphate is then decomposed into acid ammonium sulphate and ammoniacal gas, which may be collected in a condenser. The acid of the ammonium sulphate is first thrown upon the neutral potassium sulphate, which becomes acid sulphate, and the latter at this temperature, in presence of alumina and clay, is neutralized by the alumina, forming double aluminium and potassium sulphate—i. e., alum. The bricks are then extracted by methodic lixiviation, and the silica may be used for cement. The alum is freed from iron by recrystallization, and the solution may be treated for the precipitation of the alumina by means of the ammonia which has been distilled off. To obtain the alumina in a granulated state it is spread out upon stages in a tower traversed from top to bottom by the hot moist ammonia obtained on baking the bricks.

Long Sentences.

Ex-Senator Evarts was given, in the preparation of his speeches and opinions, to exceedingly long and involved though perfectly lucid sentences. This gave rise to more or less jocular criticism on the part of the press. Some one mentioned it to Evarts one day. His eye twinkled as he said: "Yes, I know there are two classes of people who are very much opposed to long sentences; one is telegraph operators, and the other is criminals."

And Then He Went Home.

"Mr. Stalate," she murmured, "do you remember when, in 1894, we sat up to watch the new year in?"

"Yes," he replied rapturously.

"Well—don't you—don't you"—

"Don't I what?"

"Don't you think we are beginning rather early this year?"—Washington Star.

LABORERS ARE FEW.

Farmers of North Dakota and Minnesota Call Loudly for Help.

ST. PAUL, July 15.—The crop of grain now in sight in Northern Minnesota and Northern Dakota equals the phenomenal abundance of 1891, when crops were enormous, but large losses occurred because of the scarcity of men at harvest time. Northwestern farmers are trying to profit by the lesson of delay that year by leaving nothing undone this year to properly care for the crops, and this is only possible by help coming from the outside. To afford this assistance, will give men a chance to visit this country and look it over and pay their way by working in the harvest fields.

MORTGAGE SALE.

(First pub. July 18, '95.)
(Last pub. Aug. 29, '95.)

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ezra L. Smith and Lucy A. Smith, his wife, mortgagors, to James H. Barnum, mortgagee, dated the sixth day of February, A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-eight and recorded as a mortgage in the office of the Register of Deeds of the county of Polk, in the state of Minnesota, on the 23d day of April, A. D. 1888, at o'clock A. M., in book 22 of mortgages, on page 237, on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, the sum of six thousand, six hundred twenty-four and 90-100 dollars, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. That the default above described consists in the non payment when due, of ten promissory notes, each for the sum of $500.00, and interest at eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, all being dated Feb. 6 1888, and all executed and delivered by said Ezra L. Smith to said Jas. H. Barnum and all being secured by said mortgage. Said amount above described as being due contains also the sum of $125.87 taxes for the years 1892, 1893 and 1894 which said mortgagee on the 12th day of July, A. D. 1895, paid on the Southwest quarter of the land below described.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston in the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, at public auction, by the sheriff of said county or by his deputy, duly appointed as agent in said instrument for that purpose, on Friday, the 30th day of August, A. eighteen hundred and ninety-five, at 2 o'clock the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, and one hundred dollars attorney's fees, provided by statute and stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to wit: All of Section twenty-nine (29), in Township one hundred and fifty-two (152) north, of Range forty-seven (47), west of the fifth principal meridian, containing six hundred and forty (640) acres of land, more or less, according to the government survey.

Dated at Moorhead, State of Minnesota, this 16th day of July, 1895.

AYER'S The only SARSAPARILLA Admitted at the WORLD'S FAIR CHICAGO 1893

Why Was It

that Ayer's Sarsaparilla, out of the great number of similar preparations manufactured throughout the world, was the only medicine of the kind admitted at the World's Fair, Chicago? And why was it that, in spite of the united efforts of the manufacturers of other preparations, the decision of the World's Fair Directors was not reversed?

BECAUSE

According to RULE 15—"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition," and, therefore—

Because Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, and not a secret preparation.

Because its proprietors had nothing to conceal when questioned as to the formula from which it is compounded.

Because it is all that it is claimed to be—a Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla, and in every sense, worthy the indorsement of this most important committee, called together for passing upon the manufactured products of the entire world.

Agent Sharkey need not worry about the conduct of the affairs of his office during his absence—his substitute is Handy.

T. A. Harris went down to Fergus Falls last Thursday to contract for moving an elevator, returning on Saturday morning.

Senator Burkhardt came up from Wabasha on Saturday morning. Says he came up to get fat on Red River valley ozone.

Samuel Garborg was the guest of Sheriff Steenerson, last week. Mr. Garborg is a brother of the noted Norwegian author.

Dr. Dampier has been appointed chief medical director for northern Minnesota, for the Equitable Life Insurance Association.

The boiler for the heating apparatus for the new school building has been put in place. Tom Harris did it last Saturday.

Louis Fillatruult went down to Duluth last Saturday, returning with his wife this week. They will occupy rooms in the Fortier block.

M. A. Shirley was in the city from Grand Forks last Thursday. Stewart Chapin got hold of him and he has gone to Phœnix, Arizona.

The total enrollment at the training school on Monday evening was reported as 160. Quite a number were enrolled on Monday morning.

Secretary Dan Lamont passed through the city last Friday on his return from the West. He returned east from Duluth via the steamer Northland.

Mrs. J. Matheson died at her residence near the Carman bridge, of consumption, on Saturday. She was buried from the Synod church on Tuesday.

N. C. Hendricks, of Duluth, is visiting friends in this city this week. Mr. Hendricks was in business in Fertile a few years ago; has also been a resident of this city.

Tams Bixby, A. C. Clausen and Attorney H. Richardson arrived on Monday morning enroute for their new town on Bemidji Lake and left for Fosston on the flyer same evening. Tams said they would be back here Saturday evening or Monday morning.

Lewis Anderson was in from Badger Creek, on Monday, to sell some beef cattle. His team was a yoke of oxen and he started for home about six o'clock, intending to reach home without stopping—a distance of over 30 miles. Who says cattle are no good to travel on the road?

Col. Cobham Post will meet tomorrow evening in the new G. A. R. hall for the first time. Owing to the fact that the paint on the floor had not dried, the special meeting called for last Friday had to be postponed, but everything is now ready and we shall have the first meeting tomorrow evening.

Rev. Upton, of Lake Park, filled the pulpit at the Congregational church on Sabbath, preaching two eloquent sermons, to a rather light audience, owing to the fact that so many of our church-going people are away just at present. One very pleasing feature of Mr. Upton's sermons is shown in his earnest delivery—one cannot listen to him without feeling that every word he utters he sincerely believes in himself. He talks as one who speaks not his own words, but the words of Him who sent him.

B. Buckingham was down from Argyle last week.

Gen. Carpenter departed for Detroit lake Saturday evening.

L. Larsen went up along the St. Vincent branch on Saturday.

Myron Collins came up from Iowa last week on a visit to his son, S. L.

The boys have been doing a good job grading Broadway. It will be very much improved.

J. W. Wheeler has sold his Thief River farm to the man to whom he had it rented. He says the wheat on it this year is good for 25 bushels per acre at least.

S. L. Collins was busy showing those horses to customers on Saturday and trying them. While the demand for horses is not as great as some years it is fair.

It begins to look like old times to see so many sales of land as have taken place during the summer so far. The prospects are that land will be very much higher next year.

Mr. Hovestrud, the manager of the new experimental farm bought a horse of Hugh Thompson on Friday evening and next day bought a fine top buggy and harness of Larsen & Carpenter.

C. A. Sharkey left on Saturday evening for a few days visit to Detroit and from there he goes to Duluth then to Chicago and other points in Illinois and Wisconsin. Expects to be away three weeks or so.

Farmers who have been raising 20 bushels of wheat per acre are figuring on three to ten bushels per acre more this year and the prospects seem to fully warrant it. Some claim we will have the biggest crop we ever raised.

Harvest will be on some two weeks earlier this season and judging by the stand there will be lots of straw which will require lots of twine. If you have not engaged your twine now is a good time to do it as twine is liable to be scarce this year.

The kind of weather that commenced on the 9th will be all right for haying and harvest while it lasts. Haying is pretty generally commenced but notwithstanding the wet weather it will not be a very heavy crop this year. The prospects are that hay will bring a good price next winter.

The JOURNAL last week announced that Mark Twain would be here on July 25th. It was a typographical error and should have been July 29th which is the date he is to be here. Everybody should improve this opportunity to see and hear the greatest living humorist of the age at the opera house on July 29th.

E. D. Childs went to St. Paul on Friday night to see the N. P. folks about keeping travel off their right of way on Sec. 9,—through his flax. Those who have made a practice of traveling that road don't seem to be very particular where they go and just as soon drive right through the flax as anywhere else. It is a great nuisance and the company will either have to fence out the intruders or pay damage.

In their big calculations on the crop of wheat, speculators seem to have lost sight of the fact that there is not near the acreage sown this year as last. The low price of wheat had a tendency to cut down the acreage from one-third to one-half which will make very much less actual wheat than they are figuring on. Wheat will be a good price this fall and the man who has it to sell next spring will be "right in it."

About 5 o'clock on Friday the fire-bell rang for a fire at Walker's planing mill and soon the department was on the way to the scene. The fire caught over the boiler in the engine room and got into the walls making it very difficult to reach, however the mill hands had it all out before the department arrived. Very slight damage was sustained but at one time, judging from the volume of smoke that poured out it looked extremely serious.

A. Benoit and wife had quite an experience while coming in from their home near Gentilly, on Friday. While coming down the hill on Barret's addition the team started to run and became unmanageable and finally, by the breaking of the double-tree got freed from the vehicle. They became separated and one was soon caught, but the other managed to break its leg and had to be shot to put him out of his misery.

T. H. Bjoin was sitting in front of his hardware store on Friday evening as our reporter approached and was wearing a long-drawn, mysterious smile on his genial countenance. Inquiring "whence those smile," Tom replied: "These Democrats think they are right in it because Grover has a new daughter. Think they have clean scooped the Republican party—but they ain't. You should see the bit of feminine humanity that arrived at our house to-day!"—and he kept right on smiling and whittling sticks.

Potato bugs have been conspicuous by their absence this year and the result will be a splendid crop.

Miss Nelia Collins arrived on Monday morning from Bellevue, Iowa, on a visit to her brother, S. L.

New potatoes are beginning to show up in this market. Not so awful large yet but better than the old ones.

Jay Durand showed up on Thursday morning, bright and smiling—glad to get back in time to see the big circus.

The proprietor of the Rickett block intends to put down an artesian well for the use of the occupants of that block.

The inquiries for farm lands are on the increase and many sales are being made. At this rate it will not be long before the vacant lands are all occupied.

Conductor Jack Reed was over from Grand Forks on Friday packing up and getting ready to move over there. Conductor Reed and family will be missed.

Galef Vonderbeck came down on Saturday to interview that carload of horses that S. L. Collins received last week and was so well pleased that he purchased a team.

The work on the new experimental farm is being pushed with vigor; ditching, grubbing and breaking. Buildings will be erected later and everything will be in readiness for the next season's work.

The Spendly farm on section 8 in the town of Crookston was recently bought by Alex McKinnon. He evidently has great faith in Polk county dirt judging by the way he is catching on to it. He requires three figures to enumerate his acres now.

Joe Winfield is doing some great bragging over some choice potatoes that he has raised this year "so big that they have to be cut in two to be boiled," he says, "and just as nice and mealy as any potatoe you ever saw." Joe claims to be a good bit of a gardener himself.

And. J. Clark, of Judis, Roseau Co., was in the city last week on business before the district court. Mr. Clark looks very much improved in health since he laid down the tripod and resumed his law practice. Life as a newspaper man did not seem to agree with Clark all 'round.

The Main circus parade was one of the finest we have seen in this city. The attaches who took part were all neatly attired the wagons glistened with paint; (same with the clowns) and the display of animals was very good. The horses were all fat and sleek—showing excellent care and upon the whole the parade made a very fine appearance.

Everybody, (apparently) was in at the Main circus. The tent, which was a mammoth concern was filled to its utmost seating capacity at the afternoon performance and reasonably well filled in the evening. It is a singular phase in humanity—this craze for attending a circus—got to go if they go without the necessaries of life for the balance of the year.

W. F. Street, the Fosston attorney says: "I consider Polk county farms at present prices gilt-edged property—had rather have farm lands than any other kind of property here just now. You are going to see a sharp advance all along the line in the very near future. The present big crop will stimulate the demand beyond anything we have seen before."

W. C. Kelso was down from Hallock last week.

The Mayor put on four extra police on circus day.

Kunte Aker was up from the town Hubbard last week.

T. S. Berg, of McIntosh, saw the circus on Thursday.

The county board of equalization fixed the rates on horses as follows: Yearlings, $10: 2 year olds, $15, and 3 year old and over at $30 per head.

Mrs. Holcomb and Mrs. Bradley, were down from Warren on Tuesday. Mrs. Bradley is mother of Mrs. Ernie Childs and Mrs. Holcomb is her aunt.

Monday was deliciously hot and Tuesday was deliciously cool—and that sort of mad-turtle weather is a fair sample of our July weather so far.

The big smoke that settled over the city like a pall on Sunday afternoon, and has been with us since, evidently comes from the Michigan forest fires.

The county dads have been wrestling with equalization problems all the week and this morning go into session as a board of county commissioners.

The Irish lads met the fire laddies on the diamond on Tuesday afternoon—and mopped the earth with them. The score stood —— to —— but why rub it in?

Henry Jones, while getting ready to unload hay at Collins' stables on Tuesday was struck by the binding pole and received severe injuries that will give him a rest for a few days.

Alvah Newland, who has been running as messenger on the Morris and Brown's Valley branch of the Great Northern has been transferred to the Fosston branch and now runs between Fosston and Grand Forks. He is greatly pleased at the change.

On Tuesday morning at about 7:30 while getting ready to go to mass, Wm. Kistenmacher was seized with a fit of apoplexy and fell helpless to the floor. His wife got him upon the bed and Drs. Farley and Dampier were hastily summoned, who did all in their power to afford relief. Mr. K. was unconscious for several hours but finally rallied a little and seemed to be doing nicely until afternoon, when he had another stroke and the outcome is doubtful.

Nervous

People should realize that the only true and permanent cure for their condition is to be found in having

Pure Blood

Because the health of every organ and tissue of the body depends upon the purity of the blood. The whole world knows the standard blood purifier is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

And therefore it is the only true and reliable medicine for nervous people. It makes the blood pure and healthy, and thus cures nervousness, makes the nerves firm and strong, gives sweet sleep, mental vigor, a good appetite, perfect digestion. It does all this, and cures Scrofula, Eczema, or Salt Rheum and all other blood diseases, because it

On Thursday Stone & Columbus gave a practical demonstration of what their new wind-stacker can do. They procured a load of straw and put it through the machine to show how the stacker works. It appears to be all right.

Judge Searle looked over the new Post rooms while in the city last week and complimented Col. Cobham Post very highly on its commendable enterprise in getting a home of its own. The judge says "Why do you not have a house-warming, boys, that's what you should do.

The morning train from St. Paul on the Great Northern road ran into a number of horses on the track near Ada on Monday morning, knocking several from the track and killing and maiming several, but the engine kept the track, and, being somewhat behind time the engineer did not stop to learn the extent of the damage.

We thought so. If there is anything on this earth that could call back E. O. Flanders it would be "the largest aggregation of living curiosities now in captivity." Flanders showed up in good form with the Main circus, Thursday morning and beamed upon our citizens the light of his happy smile all day. He is in the secret detective service and went down to Winnipeg on Friday morning to detect something down in her Majesty's dominions.

Next Sunday at 10 o'clock there will be services in the Congregational church, and at 8 in the Baptist church, the two congregations uniting on that day. Rev. Mr. Fisher is expected to officiate.
